GOODKIN FORESEES

Government Land Banks, Density

By BARBARA TAYLOR
Register Real Estate Editor

The next decade will see the advent of incredible bureaucracy of land management. Land will be held in land banks and doled out by the government and there will be greater housing density.

This is a prediction of Sanford R. Goodkin, chairman of Sanford R. Goodkin Research Corp., recently returned from the week-long Fourth World Conference of Engineers and Architects in Israel.

He bases his views on land inflation and the lack of technological breakthrough in sources of water and energy.

Goodkin says, "I think that the American experience is unique today as compared with what's going on in the rest of the world." But one generalization he made is that inflation is universal.

He said the conference was a dialogue in development concepts and action. "We shared experiences in everything from housing, planning, transportation, industry development and urban planning.

Amazing Parallels

"What made it fascinating was that not only did we cover development in the U.S. and how we do things here, but we compared development in governmental influences in such places as Indonesia, Nigeria, West Germany and Holland.

"There are amazing parallels between West Germany and the U.S. – the same problems being financing and getting enough dollars to meet housing needs."

Goodkin said that while the U.S. presently has a growing trend towards land 'use' management as evidenced by controls exercised over property by such entities as the Coastal Commission, master plans and environmental impact reports, (EIRs), the coming process will be actual 'land management.'

Citing the problems and the temper of the times as basis for his forecast, Goodkin told The Register, "Money has become a terrible problem. Too many can't afford housing. The pressure is terrific. Some say one avenue to compensate for these problems is for the government to own land.

"In the past in the U.S. we have looked for more altruistic ways (reasons) for the government to own land such as keeping it in its natural state or for parks, but there are those who believe something much more practical is needed," Goodkin said.

In the future, he said, "We will see more land owned, planned and doled out by the government to the builders and the consumers. And much more density than we have seen before, especially on the West Coast."

"I believe that government will take away the ability of land to appreciate. The price of housing that goes on top does not mean much. It is land inflation that will be controlled," he said.

"This goes against the whole American tradition, Goodkin said, "And I certain-

OC HOMES

Appreciation Near 20% Per Year

During 1976 the average residential resale in Orange County occurred 46 months after the home was first purchased, for a price equal to 175 per cent of the original purchase price.

A survey – based on 298 transactions during the calendar year – revealed that the average home initially sold for $51,783 in 1972. The typical resale price in 1976 was $91,123, a difference of $39,340.

Monthly appreciation averaged out to $855.22, or $10,263 per year; equivalent to an annual appreciation of 19.8 per cent of the original cost.

The sampling, compiled by the Santa Ana office of Title Insurance and Trust Co., dipped into resale statistics on a random basis throughout the county, with some 17 residential areas represented in the cross-section.

Dollar value of the original sales totaled over $15.4 million ($15,434,826), with the cumulative resale total at more than $27.15 million ($27,154,710).

Most impressive single grouping of parcels emerged from properties in Newport Beach and Irvine developed under the auspices of The Irvine Co. Thirty-seven parcels from such area as University Park, Turtle Rock and Deerfield in Irvine, and Big Canyon and Harbor View in Newport Beach, compiled an average annual appreciation figure of 29.7 per cent. The typical original price on these homes was listed at $59,290, while the average resale, 46.4 months later, amounted to $127,475.

These homes, originally sold some time during 1972, sold for well in excess of twice their original purchase price; appreciating at a monthly pace of $1,468.

A 35-parcel sampling from Anaheim Hills, where 16 builders are constructing homes, reflected an average original sale price of $67,205 and a typical resale almost 30 months later for $104,692. This amounts to a monthly appreciation of $1,251, or a 22.3 per cent annual return on the original investment.

Average annual appreciation percentages from other points in the county included the following: El Toro, with 22 parcels, a 16.94 per cent annual increase over the original sales price of $37,840 almost five years (59.5 months) before the resale in 1976 for an average of $69,630.

Huntington Beach logged a 17.73 per cent annual increase based on a sampling of 18 parcels. Here the original sales price was $61,104, with the resale taking place 35.5 months later for $93,170.

In Fountain Valley, 14 resales averaged out to an 18.13 per cent annual appreciation, with the original price of $44,122 and the resale almost six years later (71 months) for $91,508.

Twelve parcels in Cypress demonstrated a yearly appreciation of 16.2 per cent, with a starting price of $60,248 and resale, 29 months later, for $83,770.

Twenty parcels in Santa Ana showed an average initial sale price of $37,722 46 months prior to the latest sale, and an average resale price of $67,397, for an average annual appreciation percentile of 20.5.

South Orange County area, currently at the fringe of suburban expansion, seem to reflect somewhat lower annual appreciation rates. San Clemente, with 14 parcels represented, shows a yearly rate of 15.59 per cent, based on an average original price of $43,690 and an average resale price of $65,599 after an interval of slightly over three years (38.6 months).

The Laguna Niguel area, with 38 parcels, shows an average original price of $51,088 and an average resale price,

S&Ls FUND 1.9 MILLION RESIDENCES DURING 1976

Last year the nation's savings and loan business financed an estimated 1.9 million homes – enough to house 5.3 million persons which would be the entire population of Indiana.

This information was included in some year-end figures on the business reported by the United States League of Savings Associations, principal trade organization for the savings and loan business.

During 1976, the League reported, the business financed the purchase of an estimated 1.2 million existing units.

As for its contribution to the new housing markets, savings and loans over the 12-month period financed the purchase of 320,000 new single family homes as well as the construction of another 350,000 new homes. The financing of new homes reflected the generally sluggish condition of the new housing market.

Norman Strunk, executive vice-president of the League, said that total mortgage lending for the business during 1976 reached $77 billion, an all-time lending record.

"Savings flows in 1976 also reached record levels," he said. "There was in increase of more than $50 billion so there certainly was an abundance of mortgage money."

The League's chief executive said that if favorable trends continue at the savings windows in 1977, the anticipated demand for mortgages can easily be met.

"Housing demand in 1977 should strengthen somewhat," Strunk said. "We expect a continued gradual recovery for new homes and apartments, but the year should be another strong one for existing homes."

He said the S&L business is far and away the principal supplier of mortgage credit to the nation. Of the roughly 22 million home mortgages in existence, 13 million are held by associations.

Strunk forecast some minor softening of mortgage interest rates in the early part of the year.

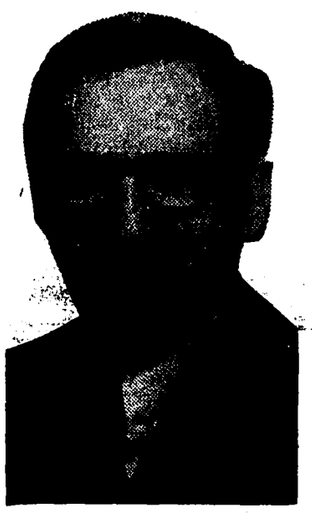
"Early in the year, and reflecting seasonal and geographic differences, home mortgage rates should be in a range of 8 1/4 per cent to 9 per cent," he stated. "Depending upon the course of the country's economic recovery, mortgage rates could conceivably inch upward again later in the year."

SUNDANCE OFFERS 7% FINANCING

"Seven per cent VA financing is available at Sundance," according to Paul Murray, president of Murray Development Corp. "We have commitments for 15 homes at this below-market rate and expect that it will not last very long," said Murray.

Phil Daly of Walker and Lee, sales director at Sundance reports that "More than 75 homes have been sold and Phase II consisting of 46 homes is now open, with delivery of the houses in April. We do have a few homes available for delivery in January," said Daly.

Sundance is a $15 million housing development of 316 single family homes located off the Riverside Freeway between Corona and Riverside, 25 minutes from Anaheim.



Priced from $38,995 to $46,995, the homes include central air conditioning, family or bonus room, fireplaces (except in plan 9), complete carpeting, rear yard fencing, and oak cabinets.

Four models are open daily from 10 a.m. at Indiana and Fillmore. They may be reached by taking the La Sierra exit south from the Riverside Freeway to Indiana, turning right and proceeding west one-half mile to Fillmore.

An elementary school is located directly across from Sundance and the junior and senior high schools are within walking distance. Less than two miles away is Tyler Mall, a regional shopping center containing supermarkets, department stores, movie theaters, restaurants, and entertainment facilities.

All homes have sound insulated dishwashers, carpeting in all major areas including secondary bedrooms, patio kitchens with built-in pantries, gas range and water line to the ice maker.

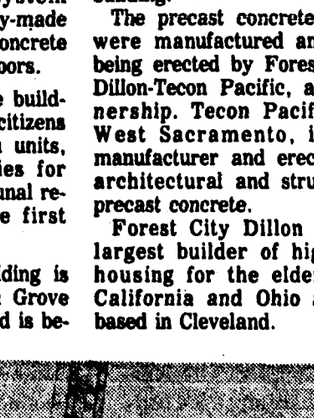
Walker and Lee is sales agent. Financing and escrows are being handled by Bank of America.

PRESIDENT – James E. Schwartz has been named president of Regional Management Group, a Inglewood-based management company. Schwartz and his firm are managing the Promenade Mall, Woodland Hills; Carson Mall, City of Carson; the Ladera Mall, Ladera Heights; and the Alpha Beta and Valencia Shopping Centers, Laguna Hills.

Resort Atmsophere Offered At 'Below Market Prices'

Aegea, the condominium overlooking Oceanside Harbor, offers an ocean resort investment at prices below the current market compared to beach property from Malibu to La Jolla, according to Arthur Fitzpatrick, general partner of Patrick Development, the builder.

The condominium, which is now over 65 per cent sold, features 50 single level homes, many with ocean views. The two bedroom, two bath residences are ready for occupancy and prices range from $54,450 to $79,500. A full complement of interior appointments are found throughout the units, including many security and fire protection measures.



The condominium also provides 92-space underground parking, two security entrances and three elevator locations.

Aegea's clusters of white buildings, 125 yards from a white sandy beach, are reiminscent of an ancient seafaring village of the Greek Isles. The design concept was created by Fitzpatrick, working with the Patrick design team.

The entry way leads through a grotto of lush planting with a sculptured mural fountain to a landscaped courtyard. The handsome use of brick and tile further highlights the Green isle motif.

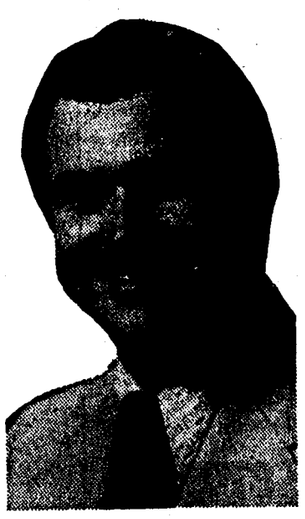
A heated swimming pool, therapy pool and cabana are provided for residents' enjoyment in the inner court. A lighted tennis court, redwood roof terrance-sundeck and recreation area are additional amenities for residents' exclusive use. Six advance reservations for boat slips are available to residents in the city-owned marina (rental rates vary with boat length).

Aegea may be reached by taking the Barvor Drive exit from the San Diego Freeway (Interstate 5) to Harbor Drive South. Continue to the beach and drive left to Aegea at Oceanside Harbor.

REGIONAL VP – John B. Allen of Tustin has been elected 1977 regional vice president of the California Association of Realtors. He will represent District 23 of the 90,000-member Association.

Construction Started On Apartment Complex

Construction has begun on a unique 14-story apartment complex for low-income elderly in Orange County which will be up and ready for finishing touches in only 29 working days.



Community Garden Towers at 3919 Garden Grove Blvd., Orange, is being constructed by an innovative system which utilizes factory-made modules and precast concrete structural walls and floors.

When completed, the building will house senior citizens in 210 single-bedroom units, with private balconies for each unit and a communal recreation area on the first floor.

The apartment building is owned by the Garden Grove Community Church and is being subsidized by federal funds through the Department of Housing and Urban Development, which helped develop the concept behind the building.

The precast concrete units were manufactured and are being erected by Forest City Dillon-Tecon Pacific, a partnership. Tecon Pacific, of West Sacramento, is the manufacturer and erector of architectural and structural precast concrete.

Forest City Dillon is the largest builder of highrise housing for the elderly in California and Ohio and is based in Cleveland.

NAMED PREXY – Dooley Culbertson has been appointed president of Fuqua Homes, Inc. manufacturer of mobile homes. He previously served Fuqua Industries as president of Fuqua's three yacht companies: Pacemaker Corp., Egg Harbor Boat Co., and Millers Yacht Sales, which functioned as a company-owned retail outlet. Prior to joining Fuqua in 1974, Culbertson served as a marketing vice president, divisional vice president, group executive, and company president for Teledyne.

CRANE LIFTS FACTORY-MADE MODULE INTO PLACE

Register's Floorplan Of The Week

Kaufman and Broad's moderate-priced single-family detached New American Homes series has become one of the most sought after housing products in the Chino, West Covina, Corona and Riverside areas, the builder reports.

"Introduced only two years ago, these homes are designed primarily for first-time or moderate-income buyers," explained Dan Kavert, marketing director for the firms Southern California Division.

"To over 80 per cent of today's potential homeowners, New American Homes represents one of the few remaining opportunities to invest in the American dream of private homeownership. Escalating new home costs in terms of land, materials, and financing, especially in Orange County, have forced many buyers out of the local market and into nearby areas." said Kavert."New American Homes is Kaufman and Broad's answer to this ever-growing problem."

One of the most popular New American Homes floorplans, The Patriot, was re-introduced just recently when the standard series returned to Riverside with the opening of a new 101-home community at Lincoln Avenue and Monroe Street.

Priced from $39,390, the four bedroom two bath Patriot maximizes space usage in a very functional single-story floorplan. Featuring 1,326 square feet of interior space, the home is created for family living with the bedrooms to one side, secluded from major living and entertaining areas.

Three different exterior elevations are available to homebuyers desiring The Patriot, providing a choice of styles to satisfy individual tastes. Brick accents and shutter detailing around the front living room window give one elevation a clean, modern look while a wide roof overhang supported by an arch displays the Spanish influence of another. The third elevation incorporates accents of wood and brick with a split line in the roof design.

Inside the home, a spacious living room for formal entertaining is separated from kitchen or family room activities. As an added touch of luxury in the living room, homebuyers can choose to include an optional, hand-built fireplace complete with a gas log lighter valve.

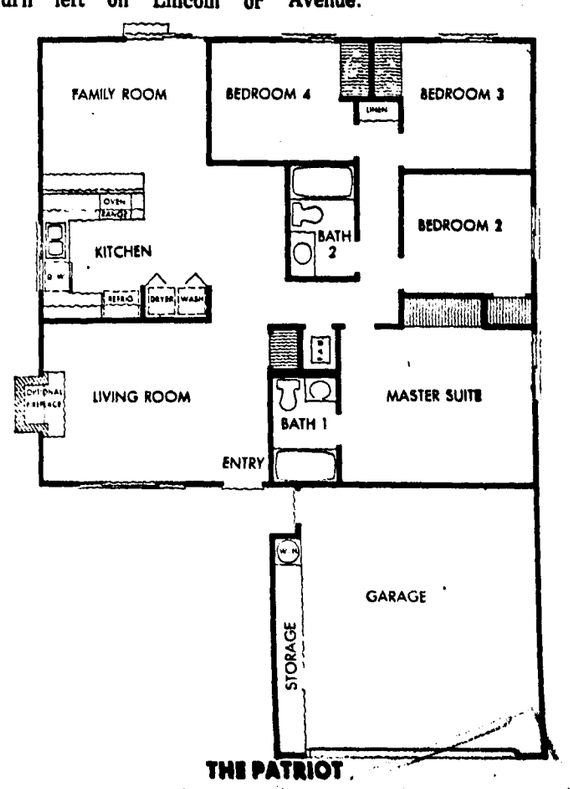
HIghlight of The Patriot is a kitchen/family room arrangement which is designed as the family center. A wide kitchen counter divides the two rooms, and one side of the counter can be used as a breakfast bar. The open, airy feeling is enhanced by a double window over the kitchen sink and a sliding glass door leading from the family room to the backyard.

A short hallway leads to the bedroom wing where three bedrooms share a full family bath and the master suite has its own private bath. Double windows provide natural lighting in each of the bedrooms.

Other special features found in The Patriot include an attached two-car garage with ample space for storage, a built-in linen closet, and an interior washer/dryer areas.

In addition to The Patriot, three other floorplans are included in the propular New American Homes series. All single-story, each of the three and four bedroom homes have a good-size living room, two full baths, a private master suite and an attached two-car garage. Two of the other plans also have family rooms.

Standard features found throughout the New American Homes include brushed chrome range/ovens and hoods, disposals, butcher block-type counter tops, easy-care kitchen cabinetry and smoke detectors. All of the homes have full insulation of exterior walls and ceiling and forced air heating systems prepared for air conditioning.



The Patriot, as well as the other New American Homes floorplans is currently available at Kaufman and Broad's newest Riverside location at Lincoln Avenue and Monroe Street. Reservations now are being taken for the first phase of 40 homes at this site.

Financing is available for the series, including FHA and no-down VA programs. Total move-in costs for those buyers qualifying for Va financing amount to one dollar ($1.00).

An on-site sales information trailer is at Monroe Street development just off Lincoln Avenue while construction progresses on the visitor's information complex and three decorated models.

To reach the site, take the Riverside Freeway to the Van Buren exit and go south to Lincoln or Victoria Avenue. Turn left on Lincoln or Victoria and proceed to Monroe Street, then turn left to the site of New American Homes' newest Riverside location.

Kaufman and Broad also is marketing the popular New American Homes series at a new 28-acre development north of Foothill Boulevard on Carnelian Avenue in Cucamonga near the border of Alta Loma, as well as in Chino Hills on Pipeline Avenue.

Butler Housing Corp. Sell Out Influential Homes Fourth Phase

Influential Homes, West Covina, an $85-million single-family community, is again temporarily sold out, according to Terry O'Neil, Walker & Lee unit manager for Butler Housing Corp., the Irvine-based builder.

A total of 151 homes have been purchased since our opening in October 1975, noted O'Neil. "In the most recent phase, we averaged four sales per week. Now, Butler Housing is developing adjacent fifth and sixth phases, totaling 82 units, using the same popular, large floorplans."

These Influential Homes have three and four bedrooms and up to three baths. Exterior accents of wood, brick and stone allow the homes to blend with the rural hillside setting. Roofs are of wood shake or Spanish-style concrete tile.

Popular interior features at Influential Homes are large, well-proportioned living rooms with sloping or open-beamed ceilings, and spacious family rooms. Both have wood-burning fireplaces with gas log lighters.

Other features are formal entries and dining rooms, dramatic stairways, galleries, and huge master bedrooms suites – many with balconies.

Prices range from $56,900 to $65,000 with FHA-VA and conventional financing available.

Influential Homes, West Covina, may be reached by taking either the Pomona (60) or the San Bernardino (10) Freeway to the Azusa Avenue offramp. From ths San Bernardino Freeway, go south on Azusa to Amar. Then, turn east on Amar to Wooodgate Drive and right on Woodgate to the models.

Prices Jump 20% Annually

41.9 months later, of $81,983, for an annual appreciation pace of 17.3 per cent.

The calculations leading to the survey results have no way of accounting for any improvements, such as landscaping, draperies or wall coverings that may have been added to a home by its initial owner, thereby directly influencing the resale value, and in any event, the sampling is just that; a sampling of residential resale activity in the county.

A 32-parcel sampling of one geographically diversified builder, Standard-Pacific Corp., headquartered in Costa Mesa, with nine parcels from Huntington Beach, three from Placentia and 20 from Santa Ana, shows an average original sale price of $39,155 throughout the three areas. The average resale for Standard-Pacific amounted to $70,728 after three years and seven months (42.84 months). That averages out to a $31,573 difference and an annual percentage increase of 22.58 per cent.

The Residential Research Committee, a group comprised of representatives from title companies, financial and educational institutions, has found that an Orange County home that sold for $18,300 in 1960 would have sold in October 1976, for $54,717. The 1976 figure is $10,250 higher than the projected cost one year earlier, in October 1975, when the same home would have sold for $44,469. The percentage change from the Committee's 1975 to its 1976 figure is 18.73.

The committee also reports that, of the seven Southern California counties, Orange County has consistently shown a somewhat greater appreciation.

With 1960 equaling an index number of 100, Orange County's index as of October 1976, was 299. Next in line was San Diego County with an index of 263.

PLAN A VACATION HOME

GET AWAY FROM IT ALL

By STEVE ELLINGSON

The growth of leisure time is one of the greatest by-products of our economic system if it's used right. Fortunately, most Americans are converting their spare time and money into practical do-it-yourself projects to save money. And that includes planning and building a vacation home.

'Second' homes are a growing phenomenon of our society. The desire to get away from the smog and congestion of our cities is part of it. However, there's also that love of our country's great outdoors that keeps driving folks onward and outward...that old call of the wilds.

In the past we have offered many great vacation cabin plans but our readers have also asked for "an ideas book" that would help them decide on what style they want. So that's exactly what we're offering our do-it-yourself fans today as a service. There are 38 vacation homes pictured, including floor plans. These have been selected by architects as the most popular designs and include some year-around living homes.

To obtain Vacation Home Catalog (No. 587), send $3.00 (includes 1st class postage & handling) by cash, check or money order to:

Increased Control Of Land, Breakthroughs Needed

ly advocate free enterprise, but there are those who believe land should be treated like a utility."

Control To Become Absolute

As a utility, Goodkin predicts that the control that commenced with EIRs and zoning will become absolute. "What the government insists absolutely is going to become the rule."

The result? The private builder will be under the rule of both regional and national standards and will be building on land owned by national and regional land banks funded by a government body, he said.

"The person who buys will own – there always will be an affluent group, I hope," he said. "Others will own through condos and straight fee simple, but the growing tendency will be to lease and to rent with both the purchaser and the renter not owning the land. A throw-back to the old Irvine Co. days," he said.

Several years ago most homes on Irvine property were built and sold on lease-land contracts.

Besides dollar pressures, there is a worldwide shortage of both energy sources and water, Goodkin points out. "There is a lot of available land that is not usable until we have some technological breakthrough."

"To desalinize seawater is expensive and has put a crimp on how much land can be used for housing and how much can be used for agriculture in many prime areas of the Mideast," he said.

"Imagine for a moment what would happen on the Irvine Ranch if they were told that only one-half the water and one-half the natural gas now available would be forthcoming. The spread of housing would stop. Density would be way up, and a lot of land would be left in its natural state," Goodkin said.

"We need more technological breakthroughs and smarter land use. We have had some incredible wastes through lack of common sense," he said. "There has been a mishmash way of development and stupid use of land."

It's no longer the builder versus the government. It will be a matter of government's getting control of the best use of resources," he said.

Goodkin's view is not a bright prospect and the question is whether the American people who oppose this sort of thought have the capacity to organize in an effective way to prevent such events.

According to Edwin Meserve and Gary Pederson of the Grubb & Ellis Co.'s Newport Beach and Beverly Hills offices, respectively, who represented both buyers and sellers, the building is leased to Westsail Corp. for boat construction.

Morning Sun Nears Sell Out In Placentia

A location adjacent to the Imperial Golf and Country Club, Tri-City and Tuffree Parks, is spurring strong sales at The William Lyon Co.'s Morning Sun/Placentia homes, says Peter Ochs, president.

He said, "We have enough land available to complete 241 homes. Our next, and final units, will total 72 new homes to be constructed on a 20 acre site near the present location."

Currently, the few remaining Morning Sun/Placentia homes are priced from $64,990.

There is a choice of three floorplans, ranging in size from 1,451 to 1,975 square feet or larger lots. The one and two story designs, with three or four bedrooms, have panoramic views of Brea, La Habra and Yorba Linda foothills.

Plan 3 is a split-level floorplan with four bedrooms, two full baths and a guest powder room. It has a covered entry leading to the formal foyer. Cathedral ceilings are in both the large living room and the formal dining room.

An expansive family room has a fireplace and features an optional wet bar. Upstairs, the master suite has private bath, walk-in closet, while the second full bath includes a practical double vanity, Ochs said.

Morning Sun's Plan 2 two story home which has the option of three or four bedrooms, with the former featuring a full-size room retreat off the master suite, in addition to a dressing area with vanity, walk-in closet, and private bath.

A second full bath and the other bedrooms complete the upper story. Downstairs, a covered entry porch leads to a raised foyer. A step-down living room has a cathedral ceiling, as does the separate formal dining room. The step-down family room is equipped with a fireplace with a fireplace and has a sliding glass door access to the patio areas. The rear yard is also served by a pass-through window and service counter in the kitchen with breakfast nook. A guest powder room is centrally located on the first level.

The third, and final floorplan offered is the Plan 1 which starts with a raised entry leading to a step-down formal living room with fireplace, and to an over-size step-down family room.

The open kitchen has a pass-through window with service bar to the patio area. An option is a doorway off the entryway to create a den out of the third bedroom. Two full baths are provided, with one serving the master suite exclusively.

Lyon Experiences Strong Westbluff Sales In 1976

Demand for The William Lyon Co.'s Westbluff homes in the Sunny Hills area of Fullerton remained unusually strong throughout the year, reports Peter Ochs, president of the statewide building company headquartered in Newport Beach.

The Lyon Co., which opened three new units representing 141 homes in 1976, has announced plans to open at least two new units in 1977, which will total 90 homes, currently priced from $63,000.

The sales appeal of Westbluff's one and two story, split-level homes is particularly strong for a variety of factors, Lyon's president said.

First, there is a wide range of different homes available; from a two bedroom floorplan with extra "grow into" space, right on up to a five bedroom home for the large family. There is a definite emphasis on space at Westbluff, with homes starting at 1,482 up to 2,265 squarefeet of living space.

Some of the architectural highlights, which vary by plan, include the Westbluff Plan 1 which has a second story tha can be converted into a rumpus room with bath; an upstairs master suite with bath and a family room; or two additional bedrooms can be constructed in this space.

Some homes feature formal dining rooms with vaulted ceilings, a breakfast nook in the kitchen, guest powder rooms, and even wet bars can be optionally added in some plans. Buyers can choose from five floorplans each with its own special architectural design. Fifteen different elevations give Westbluff a customized neighborhood appearance.

The development is in the hills of Fullerton, with many of the homes viewing on the Rancho Los Coyotes Country Club and golf course.

While each home is a single-family detached unit on its own large lot, the neighborhood is a Planned Unit Development which provides open space and greenbelts throughout.

Two separate recreation centers featuring both an adult pool and children's pool, cabanas and picnic areas with barbeques.

Upon completion, there will be a variety of mini-parks and tot lots. Eventually, there will be over three miles of meandering greenbelt pathways for bicycling and walking. For tennis players, Westbluff provides the use of two private competition-quality courts.

Model homes may be reached by taking the Santa Ana Freeway to the Beach Blvd. (Hwy 39) exit, then north on Beach Ave., and right on Malvern to Burning Tree Road, between Euclid and Beach Blvds.

IRVINE PACIFIC FOLLOWS TRADITION

The newest generation of plans created for Irvine Pacific Development Co., the home building division of the Irvine Co., promise to maintain the company's well-established tradition of presenting award-winning new home designs.

To date, Irvine Pacific has received national or regional honors for its Rancho San Joaquin Townhomes, a 343-home neighborhood built around the Rancho San Joaquin public golf course in Irvine; and for The Cove in Newport Beach, an ultra-sophisticated bay front condominium complex of 58 homes, just west of the Balboa Island Bridge. Both projects are sold out.

Irvine Pacific created two new residential series for the Irvine village of Woodbridge, which opened in June.

One of these, Woodbridge Estate, is a series of five townhome plans dressed out in an elegant array of traditional architectural forms. The estates were selected as the major theme project for the village, and they are being built along Woodbridge's major thoroughfare, in the style of an old, established main street.

Second of the Irvine Pacific offerings in Woodbridge is the Woodbridge Place series; a distintice neighborhood of single family detached homes, displaying Irvine Pacific's architectural versatility.

Latest of Irvine Pacific's creations are the Turtle Rock Glen Garden Homes, being built in the Irvine village of Turtle Rock.

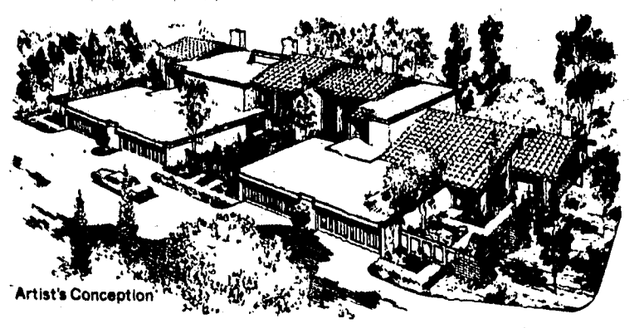
Architects Richardson, Nagy, Martin, of Newport Beach, nationally recognized for superior design, created the five basic plans being utilized in Turtle Rock Glen Garden Homes for Irvine Pacific.

"These single family attached homes combine the best elements of attached and detached living," according to Tony Gleason, Irvine Pacific's sales manager for the project.

The two and three bedroom, split-level homes contain a series of architectural features, including a number of 14-foot vaulted ceilings, skylights, balconies and luxurious master suites that create a highly livable atmosphere.

Gleason described the way the architecture has been designed to blend into the rolling hills of Turtle Rock: "The roof lines flow into the contour of the terrain. At the same time, the strengths of the exterior architecture flow into and blend with the interiors, maximizing the advantages of the hillside setting."

To reach Turtle Rock go south on Culver Drive from the San Diego freeway to Campus Drive. Turn left on Campus into the village of Turtle Rock. Signs will direct you to the garden homes.



LEADS GROUP – Douglas S. Stenhouse has been installed as 1977 president of Cabrillo Chapter, the American Insitute of Architects. He succeeds Dwight E. A House-Sold Word

By Ruth Nippe

Since there really is no crystal ball to accurately predict future events prudence suggests persons buying property should protect themselves by filing a homestead declaration.

The home is considered of utmost importance to the welfare of the family, and reliable lending institutions have shown considerable leniency in matters of debt, often extending payment periods rather than create hardships. But not so other creditors.

By recording a declaration of homestead, the homeowner's property is exempt from a court judgement to the extent of $20,000 in cases of involuntary liens. In other words, up to $20,000 equity is safeguarded in event of a suit.

It is necessary for the claimant to be head of the family and be living on the property when the declaration is filed, but he has the option of moving later and still hold the homestead.

A declaration of homestead is of no effect until it is recorded. It may be abandoned if the property is sold or if a declaration of abandonment is recorded.

And if he should sell, the law allows a homesteader protection in his exemption for six months while he purchases another dwelling and files a new homestead declaration.

For the first quarter of the 1976 fiscal year, the company had revenues of $2,497,000 and after-tax earnings of $62,000 or 2 cents per share.

Christiana is a community developer/merchant builder with three major planned communities currently under development: Huntington Harbour in Huntington Beach, Tierrasanta in San Diego, and Hudson On Memorial in Houston.

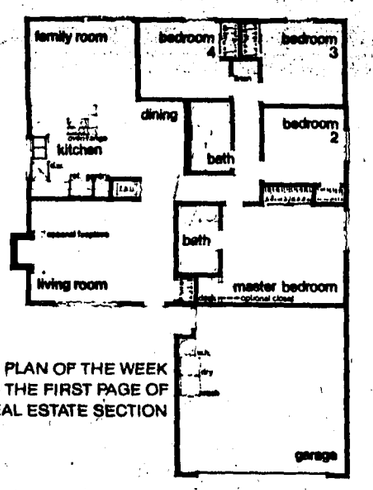
Shocked by the high cost of new homes? Consider this. Let's suppose you invest a lot of money in a piece of land. You want to build a residential subdivision.

First, you must hire an engineer to design the entire project. You'll probably have to file an Environmental Impact Report, and maybe you'll also need approval from the Coastal Commission. Possibly, you'll need to seek a zoning change, too.

With all of these in hand, you submit your site plan and Master Plan to the Planning Commission, which will likely tack on a bunch of conditions before passing it on to the City Council. If county land is involved, it goes to the Board of Supervisors. Either way, more conditions are certain to be involved.

Then, your engineer gets back to work, revising the plans to include all of the conditions. That's when the real fun begins. Every government agency which may be even remotely affected by your proposed development must approve.



Then, back to the Council or the Supervisors for final approval before being submitted to the County Surveyor's Office and the Department of Real Estate. Any snag anywhere along the line can delay the whole project.

In all, you could spend a small fortune and invest months or years in time and effort, long before the first piece of grading equipment ever arrives on the scene.

So, if you agree that homes are expensive, don't put all the blame on the high cost of labor and materials. Look to the bureaucratic jungle which the developers have to face. They really earn their profits.

Astral Projection

Out-Of-Body Travelers Tell Of Strange Experiences; Could They Mean The Soul Exists?

Register Staff Writer

Dale Gelskey is a nuclear physicist and as such, is hardly the type to engage in flights of fancy. Yet the Idaho man insists that six weeks ago the astral, ethereal "he" left his physical body to float upward horizontally toward the ceiling of the room he was in.

He claims he then went beyond the ceiling about 500 feet, feeling the resistance of wood and plaster as he passed through the top of the house.

Coming back into the room, Gelskey said he next entered his head to explore the gray matter of his brain, after which he followed an artery down to get a microbe's eye-view of his heart. He was "totally amazed," he said, as he watched the heart valves rhythmically open and close, open and close.

And like a child waiting until the rope slaps the pavement before he jumps into a game of skip-rope, Gelskey gaged his entry into the organ to coincide with the moment the valve gaped open. The turbulence and noise, he recalled, were tremendous.

Leaving the pulsating organ, he "toured" the rest of his body, finally emerging from a femoral artery in his right leg.

Then Gelskey claims, he rocketed back out through the roof, soon finding himself in outer space. As he "flew" along he held his arms out to protect his face from meteors he said were pelting him.

Suddenly he crash-landed back into his flesh and blood shell, not as a visitor this time, but as the prisoner psychics say we all are until death permanently releases our astral selves.

How and why he made the incredible journey Gelskey isn't ready to say. He admits only to having had a "strange experience" that left him exhausted and that he still remembers in vivid detail, "not like a dream.

"I know it happened, but my mind just can't accept it," he said. "I'm looking forward to doing it again, though."

According to his friend, former San Francisco school psychologist David Christensen, Gelskey experienced the phenomenon of astral projection or out-of-body travel.

Christensen, also an Idaho resident, was in Orange County recently to conduct astral projection workshops.

In fact it was during one of the psychologist's workshops in Idaho that Gelskey had his out-of-body experience. His girl friend had taken him, he said.

"I was very skeptical; I've never delved in the occult."

Christensen said he was merely preparing the group for "take-off" when Gelskey jumped the gun. Then he continued slipping in and out of his body the rest of the evening.

Concentration and relaxation are the keys to successful out-of-body experiences, Christensen said, and training focuses on the development of these. Gelskey's profession, which requires strict mental discipline in solving long, complicated mathematical problems, probably accounted for his early and unexpected proficiency in the technique, the psychologist said.

According to Christensen, and also to Dr. Elisabeth Kubler-Ross of Chicago, whose work with terminally ill patients has revolutionized attitudes about death and dying, out-of-body experiences are not an unusual phenomenon and can be induced at will by most persons with relatively little training.

"I can easily go out of my body and see what's happening elsewhere even though my body is here," she said. "There are research labs where this is done experimentally. Many people do it during certain sleep stages and spontaneously at times of crises."

Some of the research labs mentioned by Dr. Kubler-Ross are right here in California, Christensen said, most notably at Stanford and the University of California at Davis, where "they're really serious about astral projection."

Early experiments involved the placement of words and numbers at heights and angles that made them impossible to read unless a person got out of his body and "flew" up to take a look at them.

Even though results were impressive, researchers thought it necessary to go beyond such simple tests in order to rule out clairvoyance and ESP, Christensen said.

"They theorized that the astral body is an actual, measurable unit with weight (one to two ounces) and volume, and as such, should be able to do work. So they devised a diving pool in which a feather was hooked up to a machine that recorded movement of the feather by the astral body."

These experiments, too, were successful, according to the psychologist, but not conclusive because it was not possible to disprove the involvement of psychokinesis, the production of movement by the mind.

However, the fact that animals brought to the laboratories react to the invisible (at least to most people) astral bodies tends to convince all but the most skeptical that there really is something there, Christensen said.

And Gelskey still is skeptical.

"I don't trust other people's research. I like to do my own."

His attitude is understandable to Christensen, who said he, too, was a confirmed skeptic at one time, as well as a dyed-in-the-wool atheist.

"My background is strictly scientific. I got my degrees at rigid, behaviorist schools where I was taught, 'If you can't see it or measure it, forget it.'

"When Edgar Mitchell, the astronaut, came back from space and started talking about the occult I thought he was an idiot. It really turned me off."

Christensen's "conversion" came about in Idaho, he said, where he was special education director for a class of gifted children.

"One of the students recommended a book to me called 'Stranger than Fiction.' It piqued my interest in the psychic world and I decided to read more.

"But what really opened up my mind was 'Psychic Discoveries Behind the Iron Curtain.' In fact, I think that book was responsible for the psychic revolution in America."

Later on the psychologist said he obtained the astral projectionist's "primer," 'Journeys Out of the Body.' The author, Robert Monroe, is a broadcast industry executive whose Virginia laboratory is a major center for research and training in out-of-body phenomenon, according to Dr. Kubler-Ross.

Christensen said he "cut his teeth" on the Monroe book and the author's getting-out-of-the-body technique is one he uses in his workshops.

"Monroe's first step is to work yourself into a trance to the point where your physical body feels numb. Then you roll your eyes up toward the top of your head and wait for the vibrations."

Christensen likens these to a "freight train roaring through your head." They can be frightening the first time one experiences them, though certainly not painful, he said.

According to Dr. Kubler-Ross, patients declared clinically dead and then revived also speak of the vibrations, which they describe as a loud ringing, whirring or buzzing.

The vibrations soon smooth out, Christensen said, and are followed by a power surge, a "pleasant feeling."

Then "you simply will yourself out of your body; you can either roll or float out."

Monroe's technique works fine, according to Christensen, if one is into Transcendental Meditation or yoga because it requires intense concentration. However, the mentally undisciplined could try a year before taking their maiden astral voyage.

No master of meditation himself nor particularly psychic, Christensen usually "gets out by the back door" when he flies alone, he said.

"I sort of hypnotize myself before falling asleep. I tell myself that tonight in my dreams I'm going to 'fly' and I'm going to awaken before the dream is over. When I do wake up, before I'm wide awake (i.e., essentially in Monroe's trance state) I roll over, take several deep breaths and I'm out."

If you're not good at auto-suggestion, Christensen said you can try setting the alarm clock to interrupt a dream cycle.

"It's best to zero in on the last dream before morning since it's the longest, with a duration of 15 to 30 minutes."

The psychologist said his first out-of-body experience occured the December before last, the first month I tried.

"I was so excited. My wife, Martha, was in our kitchen cooking breakfast and I wanted her to come into the bedroom and witness my great accomplishment.

"I started yelling, 'Martha, Martha.' But by that time I was half back in my body, more or less rolling in and out. Of course when you're out of your body you don't have vocal cords, so I was only making sound during the part of my roll when I was in my body. Consequently, my wife heard me uttering something like 'wa, wa, wa wa.'

"She ran into the bedroom to see if anything was wrong, but then I was already all the way back in my body."

Christensen said he usually "flies" about once a week – not more often because "it's tiring."

Why he flies is simple – it's "high adventure.

"I'm incredibly alert. For me it's largely a visual phenomenon, but some people say all their senses are heightened.

"I notice that colors are more vivid, so much so much that at first I didn't recognize my own bedspread.

"I fly at night 99 per cent of the time and it seems like I have on one of those miner's hats that have a light on the front. Everything's dark except for an area ahead of me about five feet in diameter.

"I can see only in one direction at a time, just as I do normally. They say clairvoyants have a 360-degree view. I can't imagine it."

Once out of the body, Christensen said the best thing to do is to get out of the immediate area.

"The first thing most people want to do is turn over and look down at their physical bodies. It's hard to stay out of your body anyway, and usually when your thoughts turn to your body you zap back in."

Many novice flyers, however, don't think they can get out of the room. Christensen suggests tentatively putting a hand through the wall. Once they see how easily that slips through, they are able to pass their whole bodies through with equal ease.

Then the astral voyager is ready to go "anywhere in the universe he wants to go." Christensen said it's just as easy to fly half way around the world as it is across the room.

Astral navigation is accomplished by "picking a point and willing myself to go there.

Although the psychologist believes he has gone further, his "longest verifiable trip" took him from his Sun Valley home to southern New Mexico.

Many of Christensen's students, however, have embarked upon longer and lengthier journeys. A 16-year-old boy, for example, once left his corporeal self behind for two and a half hours while he frolicked around the cosmos. And the psychologist hypothesizes that comatose individuals may stay out of their bodies for days at a time.

Death of the physical body cannot occur, according to Christensen, as long as the "silver cord" (as mentioned in the Bible) remains to connect it with the astral body. Though he has never seen the cord or his astral body, many do see their own, he said.

Out of the body, "I'm just a point of consciousness."

But he thinks he has seen another person's astral self. Once in a workshop, during the period when participants actually try to leave their bodies, Christensen said he focused his eyes on a certain spot in the room.

"I saw a shadowy form hovering in front of a radiator. Afterwards, I talked to the fellow who had been lying there. He said he'd left his body, but couldn't get further away than two or three feet above it," confirming what I saw."

At another workshop, although he couldn't see her astral body, Christensen said one of his female students presented evidence that she, too, had really left her body.

"A few of us were gathered in my cabin near the ski lodge of which I'm part owner. A woman present who had never physically entered the lodge 'flew' to it and we were able to verify her statement.

"She described the main room in detail, correctly identifying a magazine on a table and giving the relative position of two or three people in the room. She also told us what the ski instructor was wearing at the time of her visit. It would have been difficult for her to guess; he had on a turtleneck sweater and white shorts – not your usual cold-weather attire."

Christensen said that initially he taught astral projection to juvenile narcotics users to "turn them off to drug tripping and on to out-of-body tripping."

Not only did he accomplish what he set out to do, he said, but he also noticed that "learning to fly really did a lot for their self-esteem."

As for himself, the psychologist realized "that there is an inner person, for lack of a better word, a soul, a spirit, a second real you that continues to exist when your body no longer functions," to quote Dr. Kubler-Ross.

"I used to want to rush through life in order to cram everything I could into it," Christensen said. "But now that I know I have all of eternity before me, my earthly existence has become more meaningful. I see things from a different perspective and I'm no longer afraid to die.

"No one who gets out of his body can ever be the same again."

According to the psychologist, he began giving public workshops because "I didn't see why the benefits of astral projection had to be confined to kids on drugs."

And aside from personal satisfaction, Christensen sees the day when the phenomenon will prove to have practical value.

"Right now X-rays show us only about 10 per cent of all brain tumors. I'd like to go in myself and look for them.

"Soon I think we'll have psychic diognosticians who will be able to find cancers before they really start to grow.

"Astral projection could also help in police work; in locating missing persons, for instance. You wouldn't have to know where they are – you'd get to them simply by wishing to see them."

If all this sounds a bit fantastic, one would do well to remember what Hamlet said to his friend Horatio: "There are more things in heaven and earth than are dreamt of in your philosophy."

And perhaps one of these nights one could even see for himself whether or not there is truly any such thing as astral projection.

According to Christensen, if you've ever had a dream in which you were struggling to climb a ladder or a mountain or you were frustrated by a door that wouldn't open or you were poised terrified on the edge of a cliff, your astral body may have been telling you symbolically that it wanted out.

Next time you're up on that cliff, let yourself "fall," the psychologist advises. You could wake up outside your body.

And don't worry that later you might think you were still dreaming.

"When you're astral projecting there's no question about it," Christensen said.

'It's A Weird Thing This Guy Has Done'

By MURRAY OLDERMAN

SAN FRANCISCO (NEA) – It strains credulity to hear Bob Hoffman relate how he got into the role of spiritual advisor and patient teacher to the world of people out there – 98 per cent of them, he says – who don't know how to love themselves.

Bob was, after all, merely a custom tailor in Oakland, Calif., with a troubled marriage before he decided dramatically to devote his life to saving souls.

Hoffman received his calling, by his word, when he was awakened one midnight out of an uneasy sleep. His old friend, Dr. Siegfried Fischer, dead for six months, had come back to him clairvoyantly on this January night in 1967. And for the next five hours, claims Hoffman, Siegfried, who had been a Vienna-trained psychiarist while on earth, outlined to him the resolution to most peoples' emotional problems.

Now this might be a little hard for you and me to take, but Bob Hoffman, who never got past high school, looks at you earnestly and insists there is no other way he could have acquired the foundation of what is now the Fischer-Hoffman process, which is administered to questioning patients at a place called the Quadrinity Center in a warehouse type of building a few blocks from the San Francisco waterfront.

He claims that in the last decade more than 1,000 people have gone through his program, shedding what he calls "negative love" and finding "natural beauty in themselves."

This is all outlined for the inquisitive in a book he wrote recently, "Getting Divorced from Mother & Dad."

California – especially this little niche centered around San Francisco bay – has been peculiarly receptive to the vibrations of the occult, the mystic, the psychic, to messages that will heal or put persons at peace with themselves. Everyone's a seeker.

The consciousness revolution which has suffused America has found vivid expression in northern California. Here is where Esalen was founded by Michael Murphy, who had gone to India in search of self, and ended up starting a center for group psychotherapy and gentle disciplines, a forerunner of many others to come. Here is where Jack Rosenberg, a former used car salesman out of Philadelphia, received enlightenment while driving a freeway, changed his name to Werner Erhard and started "est," refining it to mass production which has pulled in more than $20 million.

Here also thrive such other self-awareness movements as Transcendental Meditation (T-M), Bio-Energetics, Humanistic Psychology, Tai Chi, Yogi centers, Transactional Analysis, Scientology, the Arica Institute and the Laughing Man Institute.

Hoffman is a little different than other gurus and spiritual leaders. "I'm just a straight talker from the 'shmatas' (rags) business," he says. "No bull manure." He is an ordinary looking middle-aged man (53) in ordinary vestments with a gift of gab. You can see why he was a successful tailor. For tax purposes, he proclaims himself a minister, and the Quadrinity Center is his non-profit church.

"He's sort of an outrageous guy," says a practicing psychiatrist in the area, "like a used car salesman."

The psychiatrist has gone through the Fischer-Hoffman process himself and even refers patients to it but prefers not to be identified by name because "it's a weird thing this guy has done – it's demonstrated the validity of the psychic realm."

The psychiatrist, whose alienated sons first turned him on to Hoffman's teachings, also admits, "It's not for every body, but for somebody who has had trouble with his parents.

"I don't know of anybody who's been hurt by it."

Dr. Lee Sannella, a research psychiatrist, says, "The most valuable thing about Hoffman's work is that it's centered on the nuclear faculty – a person's own relations – rather than some outsider. This is a clear and easily understood Freudian dynamic on which it works.

"It becomes almost religious in its orientation. You learn to forgive your mother and father. You blame them first and then forgive them. He combines a lot of stuff other psychics have done. (Hoffman went through 'est' himself and in his book paraphrases Erhard's, 'What is, is.') He's added the Christian ideal of forgiveness which has been around a long time."

To the skepticism about Hoffman's midnight revelations, Dr. Sannella shrugs, "You fall back on the knowledge that there are more to things than meet the eye. You don't have to be a nut – just have some psychic orientation. I have spent 20 years trying to become deskepticized."

Hoffman calls his methods "a spiritual alternative to psychotherapy."

It doesn't come cheap. The intensive three-month course covers 105 hours of sessions at a fee of $1,500. A group numbers 30. "They range from low-end hippie to executive," says Hoffman. He claims he leads a frugal life of self-denial and takes only $1,000 a month out of the program. He calls it the Quadrinity Clinic because it reveals "four aspects of self – the physical, emotional, intellectual and spiritual."

And if he needs any refresher knowledge, well – there's always the option of getting in touch again with Siegfried Fischer, clairvoyantly, to fill him in.

"It's not unusual," he scoffs. "Everybody has natural psychic ability."

Stocks In Sharp Selloff

By CHET CURRIER
AP Business Writer

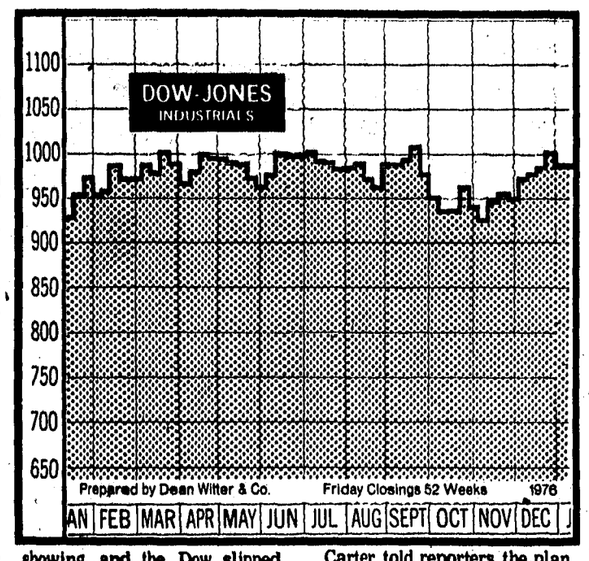
NEW YORK (AP)—The stock market crossed up the optimists by opening 1977 with a sharp selloff this past week.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks, which had climbed 54.10 points in the last four weeks of last year, dropped 21.52 to 963.13.

Standard & Poor's 500-stock index fell 2.45 to 105.01, and the New York Stock Exchange's composite index was off 1.09 at 56.79.

Big Board volume continued to set a moderately active pace, averaging 22.95 million shares a day against 22.14 million the week before.

The stage was set for the decline, analysts said, when bullish sentiment began to run higher and higher in December.



Investors recalled very clearly that the Dow had staged powerful rallies of 87 and 123 points in January of 1975 and 1976.

With the economic outlook brightening, the belief gained wide acceptance that the market would get off to another strong start this year.

Naturally, traders accumulated stock enthusiastically in the waning days of last year to be in position to benefit from an early-January advance.

But the problem was that few would-be buyers were left by yearend to make that New Year's advance happen.

When Monday arrived, consequently, the best the market could manage was a mixed showing, and the Dow slipped back below the 1,000 mark after finishing the old year just above that landmark point.

That, in turn, prompted a scramble of profit taking that drove the average down nearly 12 points Tuesday and almost 10 on Wednesday.

The market was able to recoup about 5 points of its loss in the last two sessions of the week as some buyers moved in to hunt for bargains and close out previous short sales.

It was a quiet week for economic news. But late Friday investors got something to ponder over the weekend when President-elect Carter and leading Democrats from Congress set forth some details of their proposals for the economy.

Carter told reporters the plan called for a $30 billion combination of tax cuts and spending programs over the next two years.

Also looming in the immediate future were government figures on retail sales last month, due Monday, and the December wholesale price index, slated for Wednesday.

Housing stocks came under pressure after a brokerage house analyst issued a cautious report on the group's prospects.

National Semiconductor, trading at less than half its 1976 peak of 55¾, gave ground when the company posted sharply lower quarterly earnings.

RCA moved ahead after the company sought approval to withdraw a planned offering of 5 million new shares.

GM Betters Its 'Lion's Share' Of Car Market

DETROIT (AP) – Nearly 56 of every 100 new U.S.-built cars sold last year bore the name of a General Motors make.

"It's the first time we're above 55," said a GM analyst who checked records dating back to 1926, when Ford Motor Co. dominated the industry.

Official sales figures released Wednesday showed the world's largest auto maker captured a record share of the domestic market, producing 4,800,716 of 8,606,573 American cars sold last year – a 55.8 per cent share.

GM's penetration of the market it shares with Ford, Chrysler Corp. and American Motors Corp. increased from a 53.2 share in 1975 and 49.6 in 1974.

Chrysler's share went up from 14.1 per cent in 1975 to 15.1, Ford declined nearly two points to 26.2, and AMC fell from 4.6 to 2.9.

In 1976, each one-point change involved 86,000 cars worth more than $500 million at retail.

GM overtook Ford for good in 1931 on the marketing philosophy of providing a car for every taste. Since 1954, the auto giant has captured between 45 per cent and 55 per cent of domestic sales with the names Chevrolet, Pontiac, Oldsmobile, Buick and Cadillac.

Analysts attributed this year's gain, in part, to last fall's four-week strike against Ford.

GM's analyst said sharp gains in mid-size car sales – the industry's hottest segment – was a big reason for the firm's bigger share.

Until recently, GM concentrated mostly on the big-car market. But when its market share dropped sharply during the oil embargo in late 1973, it rushed a bevy of little cars onto the market and now is the industry's small-car leader.

Code Tells Tire Brand

The scores of different brands of domestic tires on the market are all made by the same 17 manufacturers.

The manufacturer's name is identified by a two-letter code on the tire wall.

ONLY FACTORY CLOSES

Steel Experiment Goes Sour

BRIDGMAN, Mich. (AP) – When the Hoover-Ugine Co. closed its steel wire manufacturing plant this winter, an experiment, that firm officials say never worked, finally came to an end.

"I think somebody, somehow, will find that last step of the process," said Charles Keller, official of Hoover Ball & Bearing Co. of Saline, Mich. The firm owned the Ugine plant with Cefilak, a subsidiary of Pechiney, Ugine, Kulhmann of France, a steel-producing firm.

When the $15 million plant opened in 1973, it launched a special process, the first on record, of producing low-carbon bar and wire rods for use by steel products companies. When the plant closed Dec. 31, it still was the only factory to use the process.

The Hoover-Ugine plant took metal scrap, compressed it into short bars called billets and heated it in a furnace. When the billets were hot but not to the melting point, they were put through an extruder, which formed the bars into coils.

The process was unusual in that the original steel was scrap, that it was not melted or remelted and the furnaces used electricity. Hoover-Ugine officials hoped their product would be cheaper and the process would use less energy than traditional plants. The steel produced was less uniform chemically, but still useful in products like metal grocery carts or fences.

The plant in western Michigan could not produce enough wire rods to break even financially and could not get enough uniform scrap metal to make the process work, Keller said.

The plant went through several refinements as furnaces were built and rebuilt, he added.

Several customers purchased Hoover-Ugine wire, which ranged from five-sixteenths of an inch to nine-sixteenths of an inch in diameter, he said. Many buyers then reduced them to suit manufacturing purposes.

Hoover-Ugine employed 110 workers. Of those, 43 were laid off last fall and another 60 were let go when the plant closed. Those remaining were in management positions and would "continue to explore possible alternative uses of the plant," according to a Hoover Ball & Bearing statement.

Keller said the plant might be reopened in the future, but probably would not try the same process.

CBS Acquires Fawcett Inc.

NEW YORK (AP) – CBS Inc. continued its diversification into the publishing business Friday, announcing it has acquired Fawcett Publications Inc. for $50 million.

Agreement in principle for the sale had been announced last September.

Fawcett, which had been privately held, was founded in 1919 and publishes paperback books and magazines including "Woman's Day." Its sales in 1975 were $135 million.

The company said its president, Roger Fawcett, planned to retire.

Publishing has become an increasingly large source of revenue for CBS, once known only for its television, radio and recording operations.

Its publishing group, which includes 34 magazines and the Popular Library paperback book line, accounted for 11 per cent of CBS' total 1975 profit of $1.9 billion. Revenues from publishing in 1975 were $207.4 million.

Simon Drops Proposed Curbs On Tax Shelters

WASHINGTON (AP) – Proposed curbs on tax shelters extensively used by high-income individuals have been withdrawn by Treasury Secretary William E. Simon.

Simon said the measures had been formalized without his knowledge and he wanted to discuss them with Internal Revenue Commissioner Donald Alexander and Charles Walker, assistant Treasury secretary for tax policy.

Simon acted within hours of publication of the proposed regulations in the Federal Register. Such publication is routinely the first step in implementing such proposals.

The proposals would have substantially toughened the tax treatments of limited partnerships. They were designed to make it much more difficult for tax shelters that function like corporations to get the special tax benefits of partnerships.

The regulations were approved Dec. 29 by Alexander and William M. Goldstein, thendeputy assistant Treasury secretary for tax policy. Goldstein now is in private practice as a tax lawyer.

In a telephone interview with the Washington Post, Walker said it never occured to "Bill (Goldstein) or me that the secretary would have an interest" in the proposed regulations.

Walker said many protests came from the Department of Housing and Urban Development and other real estate interests. Many HUD low-income project are financed through limited partnerships.

Under existing regulations, most real estate developers gain special tax advantages by forming a limited corporation. Housing interests maintain this is only way money can be raised to build low-income projects. Critics contend the rules are too generous.

Limited partnerships give investors the advantage of taking losses from depreciation, startup costs or interest as writeoffs on income derived from other sources. At the same time, such investors get the advantage of limited liability of a corporation. And owners can change, but the venture remains a partnership.

If the venture was determined to be a corporation, the losses for tax purposes would remain in the corporation itself.

Simon said he felt that changing tax treatments of limited partnerships was a controversial step that could affect many people. Steps as consequential as that should be reviewed by the secretary of the Treasury, he said.

Simon said the discussions on whether to modify the regulations would be completed before he leaves office with the Ford administration on Jan. 20.

The new regulations were part of a much-larger amendment of the circumstances under which business entities are treated as corporationsfor tax purposes. The entire proposal was withdrawn.

Grain Futures Rise; Livestock Closes Weak

CHICAGO (AP) – Grain futures prices rose slightly last week on the nation's major exchanges, but livestock futures closed on weak tones.

The advances in grains came in mixed and fairly active trade. The rise was linked with the bitter cold and snow that hit at parts of the Southwest, where the winter wheat crop is in the ground, and in the Upper Plains area.

Another buying factor in grains and, to a degree at midweek in livestock futures, was a statement attributed to Agriculture Undersecretary Bell before a national egg producers group in Florida. Bell said that it was not likely that farmers in 1977 would produce crops of near record proportion because sub-soil moisture will be inadequate.

Gains were rather sharp in the distant 1977 and 1978 contracts as buyers flocked to get some of the action. Sellers were scarce, many times in corn, wheat, oats and soybeans. At week's end, deferred options were, in most cases, higher than nearby months.

The rise in soybean meal prices was associated with trade talk of an improved demand abroad for the product. Also, many traders thought the inclement weather would bring about expanded use of meal for livestock.

Soy oil trade was moderately active and mixed, but support was not of a sustained type. Iced broiler trade was, at best, slow. Price moves in broilers were generally linked with red meat futures.

When trade had ended Friday, for the first full week of activity of the new year, soybeans were 5 to 17 cents a bushel higher, January 7.12; corn was 4½ to 7 cents higher, March 2.61; oats advanced 4¼ to 5¾ cents higher, March 1.73¾ wheat was ¾ to 1¾ cents higher, March 2.79 bean meal was 3.00 to 8.00 (dollars per ton; higher, January 210.20; soybean oil was 30 points lower to 35 (nearly ½ cent a pound) higher, January 20.63; and iced broilers were 23 points lower to 65 higher (2-3 cents of a pound higher), January 36.70.

Live cattle futures fell as much as $2.70 per hundredweight. The cash market was rather listless and demand was thin. Live hog futures fell $1.00 per hundredweight on the weakness in cattle and a belief that marketings will rise in future months. Pork belly futures, down 220 points, appeared to follow the moves in hogs. Shell egg trade improved. Wholesale prices eased a little, however, bringing some sellers into futures. Cold weather influenced buyers.

BUSINESS LIMELIGHT

No Oil Surplus, Shannon Says

The reported surplus capacity of crude oil production worldwide "is not real," declared Edfred L. Shannon Jr., president of Orange-based Santa Fe International.

Shannon said those quoting the surplus figures are probably adding up the statements of producers and countries which have given possible production figures.

The problem with these figures is that when the increased capacity is called upon, it usually is not there, he said.

He gave the example of the oil wells in Texas. The Texas Railroad Commission has the authority to set production amounts of oil produced by the various companies in Texas.

"When the commission set the figure at let's say 80 per cent of production capacity and then later allowed 'full' capacity, the operators discovered that the 80 per cent was pretty near capacity of the wells," Shannon said.

Reasons given for this by Sahnnon included needed well repair, old wells that have problems plus other factors.

He pointed out that some countries may have increased well capacity available but not have the needed pipelines and port facilities to bring the oil to market.

Shannon has been head of Santa Fe International since 1962 and has steered his company from gross revenue of $26 million to more than $400 million.

Move To Orange

Santa Fe moved to Orange County five and a half years ago. They had offices in Los Angeles, San Francisco and Santa Fe Springs which were consolidated in the Orange location.

The company pioneered in international drilling when it was awarded a one rig labor contract in Venezuela in 1948.

Prior to this producers in foreign countries would do their own drilling. Santa Fe presently owns and operates 57 on-shore and offshore drilling rigs.

It has projects in the Mideast and Southeast Asia, Africa, Latin America and the North Sea.

The North Sea operations are important to Santa Fe. It has an investment in the Thistle Field of more than $200 million. This will give the firm a 22 per cent share of the crude oil that will be produced from the field.

Production is expected to be on line in 1979-80 and is estimated in the 200,000 barrel-a-day range. This will make Santa Fe International's share about 40,000 barrels per day. At $10 per barrel, it will produce $400,000 a day in revenue.

This income will surpass the income of any other division and possibly the total of all other divisions.

The company has had producing properties for many years including some gas production in California. Present production totals about 700 barrels a day of crude oil and more than 3,000,000 cubic feet of gas per day.

Exploration Program

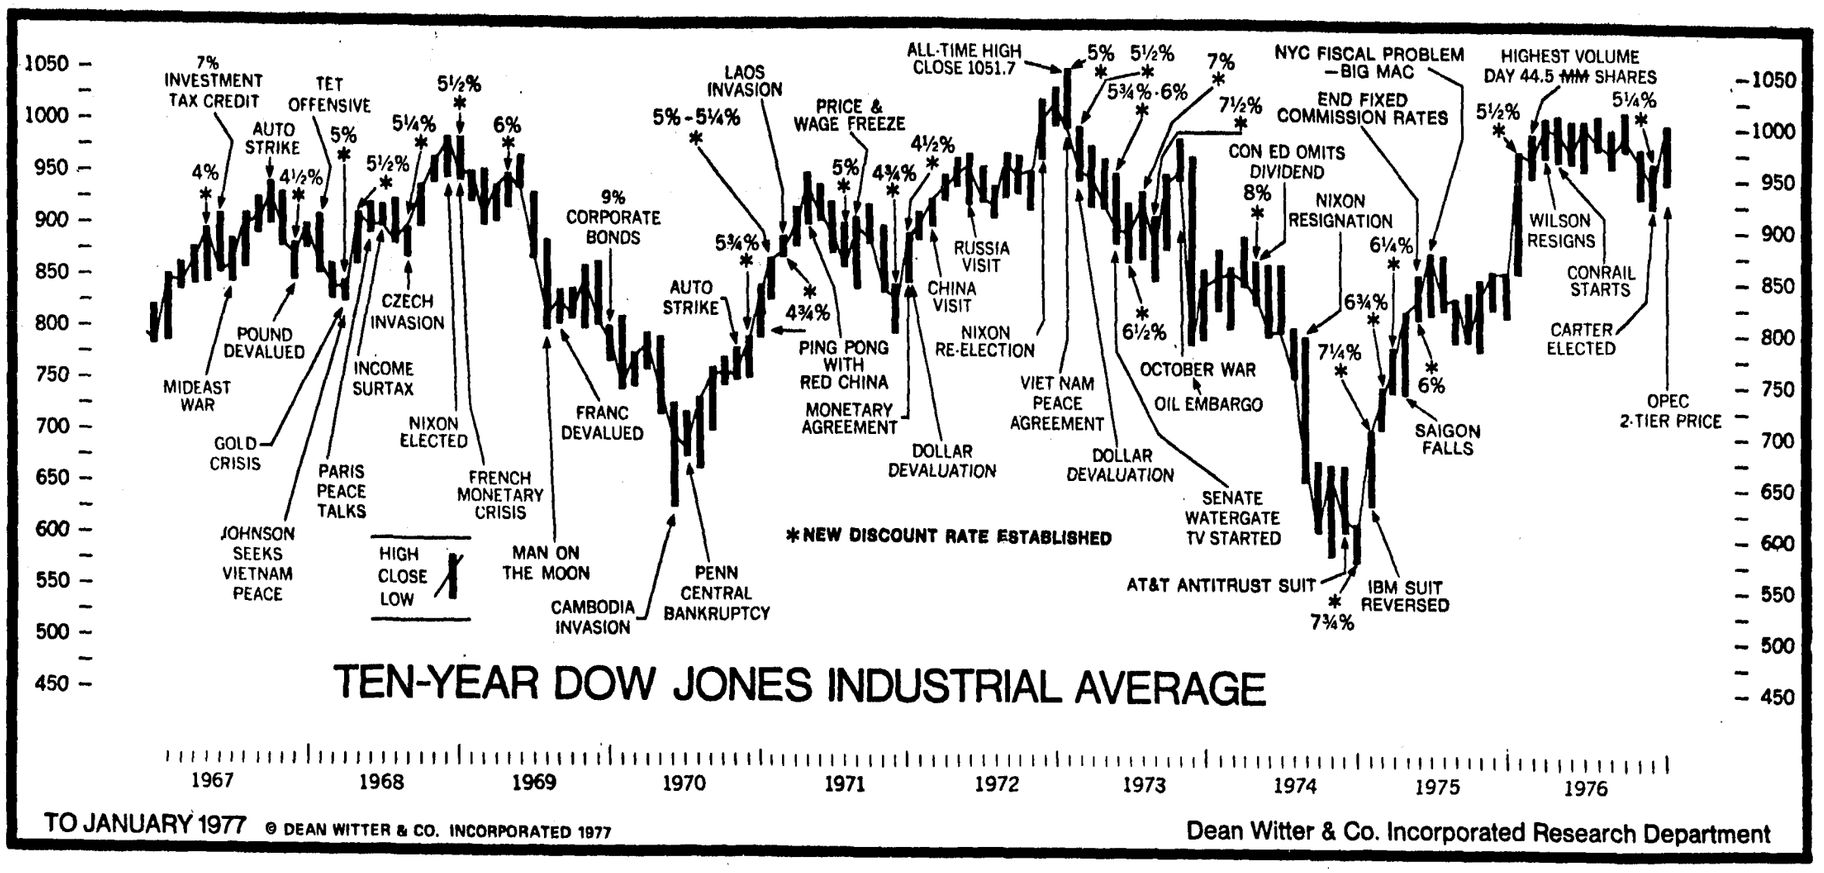
About two years ago the company started investing in exploration within the United States and has increased the annual investment from $6 million to more than $12 million last year.

In addition to the drilling activities, Santa Fe International also has divisions which provide engineering management and construction.

The firm is building a new port at Ras Al Mish'av, Saudi Arabia under a $160 million contract and it does pipeline construction including many such projects in the North Sea.

In discussing his firm's move to Orange, Shannon, who is also president of the Western Oil and Gas Association and a member of the National Petroleum Council, said, "California is becoming and unattractive place to live from a corporate viewpoint."

Legislation, and in particular the "Berman Bill," were some of the reasons that the business climate here is deteriorating, Shannon said.



The Berman Bill is the anti-Arab boycott legislation.

He said the firm would continue to stay in California as long as possible "because we like to live here."

But there is no doubt that should the anti-business legislative and tax climate pose more problems, Shannon would consider moving to another state.

He was born in Oklahoma where he said he father had "head rights" to the Choctaw nation. He explained this gave his father rights to a farm when Oklahoma became a state.

The farm now lies beneath Lake Texoma, he smiled.

Brazil '76 Coffee Profit More Than Double '75

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) – Brazil more than doubled its coffee export earnings in 1976 although the volume exported increased only by about 7 per cent, according to figures announced here.

The Brazilian Coffee Institute said that the country earned $2.32 billion from exports of 15.6 millions bags of 132 pounds each in 1976, while the previous year it earned $934.1 million with a total export of 14.6 million bags.

The Coffee Institute is a government agency that strictly regulates the flow of exports. It operates as a national cooperative, buying and selling coffee grown in Brazil.

During 1976 the institute tightly regulated exports of Brazil's sizable stocks of coffee in reserve in order to give Brazilian growers time to recover from a frost that destroyed coffee trees in Parana and other southern states in July 1975. Before the frost Parana produced about a half of Brazil's total average annual production of about 20 million bags – 2.64 billion pounds.

The frost in Parana is considered to have played a major role in the current world shortage of coffee, which in turn produced price hikes.

The Brazilian Coffee Institute's current estimate of stocks on hand is 22.4 million bags, the equivalent of 2.95 billion pounds – about 40 per cent of the annual world demand.

The recent increase in world demand allowed Brazil to export 2.7 million bags in December alone, for a revenue that month of $530 million, according to the institute.

It estimated that the 1976-77 harvest will be only about 13 million bags, although previous predictions for the harvest were for 15 million bags.

USS, Beth Steel See Improved Economy In '77

PITTSBURGH (AP) – The nation's two largest steel companies predict that the American economy will improve in 1977 and that steel production will also make modest gains.

"Most of the economic indicators, after several months of decline, began moving upward as 1976 came to a close, and there seems to be a general attitude of confidence among businesses and consumers alike," said Edgar B. Speer, chairman of U.S. Steel Corp., the nation's largest producer.

Speer predicted that the total steel industry would ship between 95 million and 100 million tons this year.

Shipments for 1976, which had been expected to top 100 million tons, probably will not exceed 90 million tons.

Lewis W. Foy, chairman of Bethlehem Steel Corp. in Bethlehem, Pa., also forecast higher shipments in 1977, but he did not elaborate.

Both executives characterized 1976 as a disappointing year for the industry.

"Steel consumers continued to draw part of their steel needs from their own inventories throughout the year. In addition, both public and heavy construction failed to reach expected levels, and there was little real strength in the capital goods sector which represents the major portion of the domestic steel market," Speer said.

According to Foy, the key to success in 1977 will be a recovery in the heavy construction and industrial goods markets.

"We believe a recovery in these sectors is coming – the question is how soon," he said.

Both chairmen called on the Carter administration and the new Congress to address the problems of capital formation in U.S. industries.

Speer called for a change of federal tax laws to allow faster depreciation of production equipment, a one-year write-off on the cost of pollution control equipment, and an increase in investment tax credits to a permanent level of 12 per cent.

In addition, Foy stressed the need for a coherent national energy policy, which he said should include development of domestic sources of oil and gas; deregulation of energy prices; expansion of coal production and increased use of nuclear power.

THE WEEK IN BUSINESS

Consumers More Confident

NEW YORK (AP) – Sales of automobiles and general merchandise in December gained strongly over a year ago, figures released this past week show, indicating consumers are gaining confidence in the state of the economy.

Domestic and imported new-car sales rose 15 per cent to about 805,500 units from 700,000 in 1975.

And the major retailers reported sales gains for the holiday month in the 10-12 per cent range, well above the 5 per cent inflation rate.

Edward S. Donnell, chairman of Montgomery Ward & Co., which reported a gain of 10.7 per cent for the month, said the company's performance pointed to "a renewal of consumer confidence and an upward trend in buying levels that portends well for 1977."

When consumers become more confident, they tend to borrow more money, a theory borne out by credit statistics released Friday by the Federal Reserve.

The Fed said consumer credit outstanding in November increased by a seasonally adjusted $1.24 billion in November. In October, the increase was $1.56 billion.

Analysts who chart Detroit's Big Three automakers were surprised by the brisk December showing.

"The month went from better, to significantly better, to excellent," said one analyst.

U.S. automakers delivered 694,457 new cars, up 16 per cent from the previous December. And they announced that production for the first week in January was up 17 per cent over the first week last year.

Exxon Corp., meanwhile, announced that it would begin using lower-priced Saudi Arabian oil in addition to Venezuelan crude at its facility in the Caribbean island of Aruba. The decision was expected to spark an oil-production battle now that some oil-producing nations are charging more for their oil than others.

In the securities industry this past week, directors of the New York Stock Exchange approved in principle the trading of options on the Big Board. But no formal trading plan was presented.

The action was criticized by the American Stock Exchange and Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith Inc., the nation's largest securities firm. They assumed the NYSE would trade options already listed on five other exchanges. Such trading, they said, would be unnecessary duplication before a central market is in place.

Options trading is the right to buy or sell a certain stock at a specified price within a specified time.

The Federal Communications Commission this past week authorized a subsidiary of International Telephone & Telegraph Corp. to establish a domestic computer network.

Such a network would compete with the two others – one operated by a Western Union Corp. subsidiary and the other by Graphnet Systems Inc. The two firms said ITT's plan would adversely affect their business, but the FCC said its approval would prevent ITT from "competing unfairly."

Machu Picchu Hotel Opposed

WASHINGTON (AP) – The Inter-American Development Bank's recent approval of loans to Peru to build a large hotel two miles from Machu Picchu, the lost city of the Incas, has heightened archeologists' concerns that by making the area more accessible to visitors, its charm may be lost forever.

Machu Picchu, discovered in the isolated Andean jungle by Hiram Bingham in 1911, is a score of granite shrines, fountains, dwellings and steep stairways built on a saddle between two peaks. Part of its appeal is its splendid isolation.

Already hundreds of visitors reach Machu Picchu each day by a long train and bus trip from Cuzco, but the small hotel at the site allows only a privileged few to remain overnight.

NYC Scores First

The first strike in America took place in New York City in 1741. It was a bakers' strike protesting municipal regulation of the price of bread.

500,000 Spares For New Cars Slow In Coming

DETROIT (AP) – Owners of some 500,000 new cars and light trucks are still driving without spare tires even though a lengthy rubber strike ended four months ago, according to the Big Three car makers.

The auto companies say it could be until March 1 before the last of the vehicles gets its missing spare – which may be of a different brand name from the four that were factory installed.

General Motors, Ford and Chrysler left spares off their late 1976 and early 1977 models so they could conserve dwindling tire stocks and avert plant shutdowns during the four-month rubber strike, which ended in September.

American Motors was the only domestic maker which did not have to omit spares from its vehicles, because it had an adequate supply.

The Big Three companies, however, charged customers for five tires and promised to supply the spare through dealer notifications as soon after the strike as possible.

The makers had hoped to provide all missing spares by the end of 1976, but now say they have run into a few snags.

Some in the auto industry blame the delay on the rubber companies, saying the tire makers supplied their own retail outlets first rather than take care of Detroit's missing spares.

Others say the paper work involved took longer than expected.

Toyota's U.S. Sales Set Record

TORRANCE (BW) – Toyota dealers across the country reported an all-time sales record of 29,015 new cars and trucks during the month of December and 396,723 for the year, according to Toyota Motor Sales USA Inc.

The year's sales performance represents an increase of 20.6 per cent over the 1975 year end total of 328,918 cars and trucks. In cars alone, 1976 sales exceeded 1975 by 22.2 per cent while truck sales moved up 10.7 per cent.

Isao Makino, president of Toyota Motor Sales USA Inc., said the sales totals for each of the last eight months of 1976 were individual monthly records. He said the success was based on a variety of factors including the popularity of the Corolla and Celica liftback models introduced last spring, a broad range of half-ton trucks and strengthening of the company's advertising and sales power.

Footwear Retailers Against Restriction

WASHINGTON:D.C., – The retailers who sell Americans more than half the footwear they buy each year said that a tariff quota system for footwear imports was the least objectionable form of restriction. They commented however, that retailers did not believe restrictions were necessary.

Speaking as head of the Volume Footwear Retailers of America, a trade association, Julian I. Edison, president of Edison Brothers Shoe Stores, Inc., of St. Louis, said: "A tariff quota system stabilizes without penalty the present level of imports while still providing a deterrent to unchecked future growth. If properly blue-printed tariff quotas could be less inflationary and less injurious to our national interest than sharp increases in tariffs or absolute quotas on imports."

Edison added that the four commissioners who today recommended a tariff rate quota system have recognized this. However the recommendation is unnecessarily restrictive in that it allows too few imports to enter at normal rates of duty, does not exclude low priced footwear and sets over-quota rates that are too high.

Edison said that the President must now decide how much the American public should be charged for an effort to help the domestic shoe manufacturing industry. "In meeting his responsibilities the president should consider the impact of these recommendations on foreign trade, on the cost to consumers, and gain or loss of jobs for American workers. Jobs could be lost importing, retailing, agriculture and many other export-related industries. These lost jobs could outnumber possible gains in domestic shoe employment," Edison said.

ERDA Awards UNC Contract

FALLS CHURCH, Va. (AP) – United Nuclear Corp. has been awarded a $39 million contract by the Energy Research and Development Administration for the production of nuclear components.

The work will be performed by UNC's naval products division at Montville, Conn., and increase the backlog of the division to a level in excess of $270 million, the company said.

UNC is a diversified company in the energy business involved in the mining and milling of uranium ore and coal and the production of nuclear components.

Schlitz Seeks To Keep Files From Probers

MILWAUKEE (AP) – Jos. Schlitz Brewing Co. has asked U.S. District Court to help withhold files from a grand jury investigation of brewery sales promotion practices.

The brewery, one of several questioned by government investigators about alleged deals with beer sellers, asked the court to protect certain files against subpoenas.

Schlitz said the material, defined as a fact book, should be protected by attorney-client privilege.

The material was prepared by a New York law firm which Schlitz retained in May during an investigation by the Securities and Exchange Commission.

The government has yet to submit any evidence of illegal activity, the brewery argues.

Pontiac Layoff Set

PONTIAC, Mich. AP – General Motors' truck and coach division is laying off 200 hourly workers next week because of cutbacks in medium-duty truck production.

However, the company said it is adding a light-truck assembly line at the plant, and will recall the laid off workers in May, when the operation begins.

Studios To Close

NEW YORK (AP) – RCA Records said Friday it will close its Nashville and Hollywood recording studios this month to save money and give its artists more flexibility.

This means RCA artists will record at independent studios or at RCA's New York studios. But RCA said its New York studios may also be closed.

Olympia Sets Record

OLYMPIA, Wash. – (BW) – Olympia Brewing Co. reported record beer sales in excess of 6.3 million barrels last year, up 14 per cent from 1975 and more than double the 1971 rate.

Robert A. Schmidt, chairman and chief executive, said his firm has posted sales increases for each of five consecutive years since 1971.

EVER STRIVING FOR SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Coveting Commandment.

Ethical Silliness

Jimmy Carter's intentions to institute a new code of ethics for appointees in his administration scarcely will do the trick. His campaign promise of returning morality to the highest political offices of the land had to be made good on somehow; this is his stab at it.

The president-elect proposes some devices to insure against conflicts of interest. He wishes to snuff every temptation his officials might have to manage private gain from their government duties.

Accordingly, Carter will require full public disclosure by his appointees of their holdings, sources of income and even liabilities. When potential conflicts appear, so the formula goes, an appointee may divest the pertinent holdings by placing them in a blind trust.

Then Carter would extract a pledge: appointees will remain at their posts for the full term (unless fired) and they will not take employment, upon their leaving, with any firm dealing with the government departments with which they were involved.

This latter provision is supposed to prevent what the critics of regulatory agencies have uncovered: namely that many regulatory persons come right out of the industries they are charged with regulating. The chances for favoritism are obvious. Indeed, many of the largest industries seem perfectly happy with the status regulatory law has accorded them, at the expense of competitors.

Carter correctly identified the problem during his campaign, even sounding as if he'd adopted the free-market critique (the only cogent one around) of the regulatory agencies. But to identify the problem is not to solve it. The problem actually is an argument for abolition of regulatory powers, something Carter is not inclined to do.

Just what sort of regulators, in order to rectify the matter, do you people the agencies with if not men and women whose expertise has developed in the pertinent industry? Surely you do not plunk a Bella Abzug down on top of the Commerce Dept. (though Carter does seem to think you can place a conscientious objector in charge of the CIA).

The point is that, theoretically at least, government regulators ought to know something about what they're doing. Not that such a consideration mattered to the Nixon and Ford administrations – in which the millers couldn't make enough hats for Elliot Richardson – which Carter supposedly shooed out of Washington.

It is naive to suppose Jimmy Carter will change things greatly along the Potomac. The two-year moratorium merely delimits the immediate liberties of people who, wanting to be chastened after their sins in Washington, try to escape their regulatory posts. And two years is but a twinkling of an eye to sophisticated grafters; they'll merely collect later.

The whole business of government codes of ethics comes down to a travesty. Even if the Carter administration successfully avoids the usual conflicts of interest the heart of Washington immorality pulsates in the "legitimate" power of government itself. How an economy manipulated and distorted by a club of self-important planners can ever be thought moral defies the understanding. What the budgetary people euphemistically call "transfer payments" are nothing more than robbing Peter to pay Paul; and that is immoral, albeit legalized.

To our knowledge the Son of Man never awarded dispensation to thieves and coveters who got themselves appointed to government positions.

Mrs. Swope's 'Fight'

Mrs. Ruth Swope, 81, really does deserve a medal for valiantry against City Hall. You can go back 12 and 14 years to find news stories about her struggles with the officials of Costa Mesa. Time was when she wanted a parcel of her property rezoned so as to sell it to a convalescent hospital builder. Her neighbors and the City Hall prevailed against her.

Not that she was always the lone tiger. Mrs. Swope freely admits she stumped for the annexation of her five acres so that Costa Mesa could be incorporated in 1951. She lived there 61 years, 36 years before Costa Mesa was a city.

Now an ungrateful city wants to grab her land so that the local potentates can develop a $2.8 million downtown community center they call the "super block." The mayor inarticulately contends the "super block" will feature parks and playgrounds and other altruistic-sounding boondoggles (none of which, ironically, has quite the humanitarian authority as a convalescent hospital).

But Mrs. Swope isn't budging. The city condemned her property, along with 17 other parcels. She has a great, great, great niece, 12, she still wants to put through college, and getting eminent-domained out of her home would put her on welfare. She abhors welfare. The city agreed to pay $36,000 for the property, but she claims, not unrealistically, she could still get $60,000 had the city not condemned it.

She's not holding out for any price, $60,000 or $160,000. She wants to stay put and get the child through college. Eminent domain is not another pretty phrase to her. "What kind of communist law do we have here?" she asks.

Exactly.

A Los Angeles television newscaster last week cheered Mrs. Swope for her sense of "fight." Win or lose, he gave as his peppy opinion, it's the "fight" that counts.

Not quite. It is Mrs. Swope's complete victory that counts if decency is to prevail in Costa Mesa.

Caveat Emptor Revisited

In recent years the phrase, "caveat emptor" — Latin for "Let the buyer beware" — has fallen out of favor with people who regarded it as a main constituent of "doctrinaire" free enterprise. If customers ever bought shoddy goods unknowingly, defenders of the marketplace contended, the cost should fall on them alone.

Caveat emptor, then, originally, was taken as the most efficient and least costly way of absorbing bad products. Why should the costs of shoddiness be spread over taxpayers, who would pay for the "consumer protection" legislation that supplants caveat emptor?

In the end, a sound concept. Legislated protection usually impedes competition while forcing the costs of regulation on the consumers — exactly the opposite of what militant consumerism was supposed to sew.

There are signs, though few will admit it, that caveat emptor is returning. Most of the trendy publications include some sort of consumer pointers, from care and feeding of ferns to "being street wise about dope." David Horowitz's TV series, "California Buy-line," seems to be a local hit.

Sometimes the advice goes afield. It's called the "There oughta be a law" syndrome, which infallibly costs taxpaying consumers more while, again, impeding competition. Horowitz, for a silly example, once happened into a cafe without — get ready — a public restroom. He's been pulling a long face about that ever since, calling for mandatory restrooms in restaurants. But if the owner transferred the costs of the new plumbing fixtures to customers, Horowitz presumably would counsel customers to eat elsewhere.

Much mischief can come out of the trendiness, but much that is worthwhile as well. Learning how to shop is also the same as letting the buyer beware, caveat emptor, which derives from the idea of wariness.

Caveat emptor should be held as a positive consciousness, not the pejorative the anti-captialist mentality loves to throw around. What's more, it never really left us. It is an unabolishable feature of individual perception and will — the "helpful" legislation notwithstanding.

SENSING THE NEWS

Inflation And Unemployment

By ANTHONY HARRIGAN

The great danger in the immediate future is that the politicians will decide to "stimulate" the economy. Stimulation, as liberal economists employ the word, is a synonym for more inflation. And more inflation means more unemployment.

The truth is this was set forth in a brilliant essay prepared for the Tax Foundation's Tax Review by Dr. David Meiselman, the distinguished free market economist at Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University.

"I would fervently hope," he wrote, "that those responsible for public policy will be able to resist the great pressures...for excessive stimulation, that there is enough understanding in and out of government that still another shot of inflation would add to our difficulties without solving our problems, and that inflation is neither good for the country nor acceptable to the voters."

Unfortunately, not everyone shares this conviction. Liberal economists regard inflation as useful on occasion because it "stimulates" the economy and capital formation.

Free market economists concede that inflation may temporarily reduce unemployment, especially, Dr. Meiselman notes, "if the inflation comes as a surprise and is thereby not already discounted and adjusted for in other prices and wages."

Today, Americans are sophisticated about inflation. They are tremendously sensitive to inflatonary pressures. In short, they can't be fooled by artificial prosperity. In any case, Dr. Meiselman says, "eventually the entire economy, including all wages and prices, adjusts to the ongoing inflation. Because there are no permanent surprises left, there are no permanent government gains."

Thus, in the long run, inflation causes unemployment to rise rather than fall.

Professor Meiselman points out that when governments use "stimulation" (read: inflation) as a tool to attain prosperity, they attempt to fool the people. "As time goes on," he warns, "it becomes progressively more difficult to fool people." As Lincoln said, you can't fool all the people all of the time – not about basic economics, anyway.

In addition, inflation retards the growth of capital. Dr. Meiselman gives this explanation: "Some of the bad effects of inflation result from basing income tax liabilities on conventional accounting standards, which depend on historic costs for inventories, plant and equipment and the like. Taken by itself, the extra inflation tax on business capital would result in a reduced rate of capital formation."

Inflation is, in a real sense, an unseen tax – the cruelest form of tax. It erodes the well-being of the American people.

It is a basic truth that the United States can't spend itself into prosperity. The American people can't become more prosperous if the Federal Reserve prints an excessive amount of money and, thereby, cheapens the money in circulation.

In order to achieve prosperity, Americans must work harder and longer. In other words, they must increase their productivity, and restrain demands for excessive payments. The wage settlements the United Auto Workers imposed on the auto industry are the sort of settlements the country can't afford. Tax cuts provide desirable incentives, but cuts in public spending are far more important.

In the tax area, Dr. Meiselman recommends reduction or elimination of multiple taxes on the same income: the taxes on corporate income and the taxes on dividend income, for example. Congress also should refrain from imposing mischievous estate and gift taxes which really hit at incentives to create wealth.

As Dr. Meiselman says in his Tax Review essay, the American tax system is "heavily biased against saving and investment." Far too high a percentage of the wealth of the American people is devoted to government spending.

Whatever actions are taken by the Carter administration and the 95th Congress, common sense dictates that both branches of government strive to end years of accelerating and roller-coaster inflation.

INSIDE WASHINGTON

Bunker On The Outs

By ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON – President-elect Carter and Secretary of State-designate Vance are getting jolting warnings on the menacingly volatile Panama Canal issue.

Congressional leaders are forcefully telling them:

• Get rid of 83-year-old Ambassador Ellsworth Bunker as negotiator in the years-long dickering over a new treaty.

• Any treaty tampering with the "in perpetuity" provision in the original 1903 Panama pact is certain to be fiercely resisted in both the Senate and House. While treaty ratification is a Senate function, the House will be involved because a Panama accord will entail transfer of U.S. territory and property which requires approval by both branches of Congress.

Primary basis of the tough demand Bunker be replaced is his close ties with Secretary Kissinger.

As one senator bluntly put it, "Bunker is a Kissinger patsy and that's all there is to it. If he weren't, he wouldn't be handling this job – at his age. He'd have been retired long ago. Obviously he's been kept on because he's willing to take orders and do exactly as he's told."

Brainwashed

Recalled as envoy from South Vietnam and headed for retirement, Bunker instead was handpicked by Kissinger for the Panama negotiations.

In a grandstanding ceremony in Panama City in February 1974, Kissinger had just signed an "eight-point agreement in principle" which he initiated and which, in effect, surrendered the 1903 treaty provision guaranteeing U.S. rights in Panama "in perpetuity."

This key concession to Panama strongman Omar Torrijos and his leftist clique of lieutenants is the crux of the subsequent secrecy-cloaked negotiations – and the main target of the intense and widespread hostility in and out of Congress to relinquishing U.S control over the strategic waterway and adjoining Canal Zone.

Throughout Bunker's deliberations with Torrijos and his henchmen he has scrupulously abided by Kissinger's guidelines and views.

Not only has there not been the slightest digression or deviation, but Bunker has publicly defended Kissinger's "giveaway" policy on the ground it is essential to come to terms with Torrijos in the interest of "improved Latin American relations."

In speeches, statements and private testimony before congressional committees, Bunker has consistently and emphatically evinced complete approval of Kissinger's concept of eventual U.S. yielding of Panama control.

Because of this pronounced "bias," congressional authorities contend Bunker should be promptly replaced with a younger and more "open minded" negotiator.

Undoubtedly, that would arouse Panamanian suspicions and muttering.

Under Kissinger and Bunker they've had it pretty much their own way, and they most emphatically don't want a new negotiator and possibly tougher stance. That would really gripe them – and sundry Latin supporters, notably President Carlos Perez of oil-rich Venezuela, a leader in clamoring for a 10 to 15 per cent price hike.

Never mentioned in Perez's anti-U.S. barbs is that Venezuela is the recipient of more than $300 million is U.S. aid.

Squarely offsetting likely Panamanian grousing is the starkly adverse situation facing a new Panama treaty in Congress – first in the Senate where it has to be ratified, then in the House which must pass legislation transferring U.S. territory and property.

Carter and Vance are being told that shelving Bunker and designating a new envoy could importantly help on Capitol Hill.

The point is made that Bunker is too intimately tied to Kissinger and his widely disliked "giveaway" policy to effectively plead for a new Panama treaty before avowedly hostile legislators. It's argued a "less prejudiced" spokesman might make a more favorable impression.

There can be no question on the urgent need for a more friendly atmosphere on Capitol Hill.

A treaty modifying the "in perpetuity" provision faces the toughest kind of bipartisan opposition. It will be filibustered to the utmost – possibly to outright rejection.

Fortuitously, the November election gave opponents an unexpected advantage.

That was the surprise upset of Sen. Gale McGee, D.-Wyo., seeking a fourth term and the most vocal champion of Kissinger's Panama policy. Chairman of the Western Hemisphere Affairs Subcommittee, McGee was in a strategic position to win committee approval for a Kissinger-type pact – as well as to spearhead the fight for it on the Senate floor.

But his unexpected defeat removes him from the scene, and whoever McGee's successor is he is not likely to be as high-powered.

Court Help

Another tactical break for the opposition is the little-known decision of federal District Judge Guthrie Crowe – in the challenge by Canal Zone employes of the treaty negotiations.

While upholding the constitutional authority of the president to conduct such negotiations, Judge Crowe flatly and unequivocally ruled that the U.S. owns the Canal Zone. Declared the jurist in this momentous finding:

"I think the United States is the owner of this property by reason of the treaty with Panama and Colombia, payments to the French (Canal Co.) and creation of the land commission in which people from Panama and the United States functioned as a court with thousands of claimants. (The land) was paid for with United States money."

Significantly, six prominent legislators joined in this suit – Sens. Jesse Helms, D.-N.C., James McClure, R.-Idaho, Strom Thurmond, R.-S.C., and Reps. Daniel Flood, D.-Pa., Larry McDonald, D.-Ga., Gene Snyder, R.-Ky.

George Leonard, Washington attorney, is appealing Judge Crowe's rejection of an injunction request to the Fifth U.S. Circuit Court in New Orleans. There is little likelihood this will get anywhere. Whether it does or not, Judge Crowe's resounding affirmation of U.S. "ownership" of the canal and zone is a landmark precedent – about which a lot more is sure to be heard in the heated battling over Panama.

The Challenges Of 1977

By ALLEN C. BROWNFELD

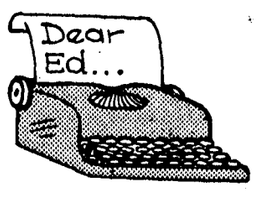
WASHINGTON – With the beginning of each new year there is always the hope that, somehow, man will abandon his previous pattern and will begin to learn from the past.

More often, men turn their backs upon history and repeat its errors, having rejected the notion that there is something to learn from the experience of previous generations.

We in America seem to be very much like our predecessors. In our schools we are in the process of abandoning the teaching of history, for we see little merit in studying the past, believing it to be "irrelevant" to the future. The ancient sage who said that, "The future is only the past again, come through a different gate" has little to say to modern man. The recent meeting of the American Historical Association dealt with massive unemployment among historians. The reason since the late 1960s universities began dropping course requirements in history – as well as other fields. Thus, the American society – even its academic community – seems to have declared in no uncertain terms that we are prepared to chart the future with hardly a look to the past.

The challenge is hardly an esoteric one. As the new Carter administration assumes power in Washington it is confronted with a range of national problems – inflation, unemployment, declining military strength in the face of the growing strength of our adversaries, demands by various minority groups for a "fair share" of cabinet and other positions, crime in the streets, the breakup of families, a situation in which in the nation's capital in 1976 there have been more abortions than births, and the majority of the live births were illegitimate. By any standard, this is a society in trouble.

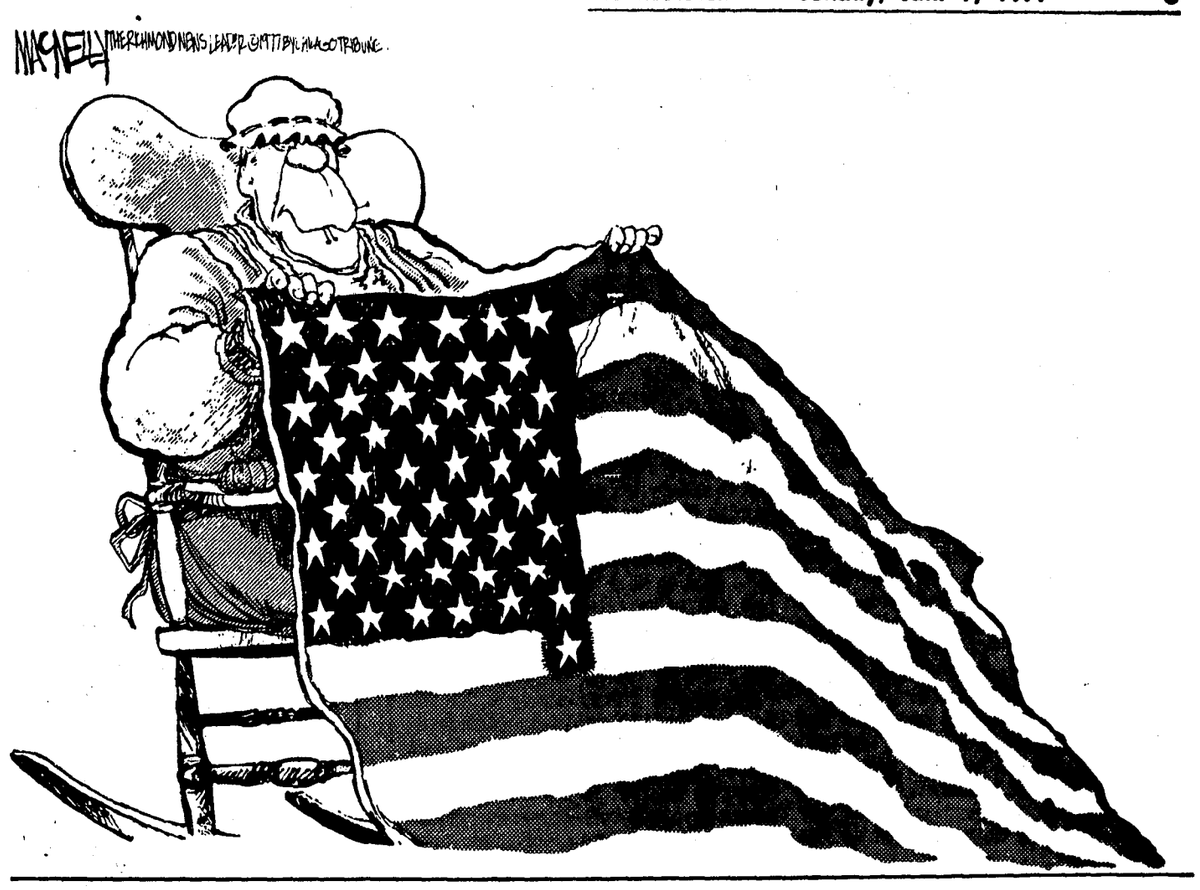
We spend more money on education than ever before, yet our young people often graduate from high school not knowing how to read, and many educators declare that reading is not really important in the age of television and movies. We speak of sexual freedom and sexual equality as marriages dissolve, as juvenile delinquency grows, and as the suicide rate for young Americans is at all time high – not to mention the rate of narcotics and alcoholic addiction.



We must assume that Mr. Carter and the men he has chosen as advisers are serious men, although such an assumption often proves unfounded when we observe political men. If they are serious, if they are concerned with the future of the American society, the question they must ask themselves is this: shall we do the same politically popular things which win elections but do not solve problems because they often ARE the problem, or shall we dare to learn some lessons from history and treat the causes rather than the symptoms of problems – even if it is momentarily unpopular?

Do black activists, labor union bosses, agricultural interests, business groups, and other pleaders for special interests have so much power in Washington that no administration will dare to reject their demands because of a concern for the future stability of our society? In recent years this question could only be answered in the affirmative.

Our economy, for example, is in trouble ONLY because of government intervention in it. Government has inflated the currency. It has prevented the expansion of private business by monopolizing the capital markets. Recently, Democratic leaders in the Congress called for a huge new spending program to restore "health" to the building trades industry. Do they really not understand that one of the real obstacles has been that the federal government has itself borrowed the money from the economy which would otherwise have been available to finance private housing construction? Perhaps their economic understanding is so limited that they really do believe their proposals would solve the problem rather than make it worse. The only conclusion is that such men are either too opportunistic or too limited to serve the nation. Perhaps it is a combination of the two.



We have slowly been moving toward a collectivist economy and it is for this reason that we have ceased to be competitive in world markets, thereby increasing unemployment. What other society offers millions of men and women an incentive to stay on welfare rather than work? The tragedy is that, in the end, we will lose not only our prosperity but, more important, our freedom. Economist Wilhelm Roepke put it this way: "Every limitation of economic liberty, every state intervention and every single act of planning and directing contains some constraint. It is this constraint which, together with compulsory state taxation, takes away from us bit by bit that genuine freedom which is so dear to us all. Everybody ought to know that the market economy is an economic system where constraint, intervention, or limitation of freedom is confined to the framework, the regulations, within which economic intercourse itself is free. Collectivism, on the other hand, is marked by compulsory planning of individual economic operations. If anyone fails to understand this fundamental difference . . . he should be asked: Is it the same to you whether you have to stop at a traffic light as a free man at the steering wheel of your own car, or as a prisoner in a police wagon?" Wilhelm Roepke, who fled from Nazi Germany, knew about collectivism all too well.

For President Carter, the past teaches many lessons about how to deal with the challenges of the present and provide a future of freedom to coming generations of Americans.

Hazlett Scored

Re: "Are Women Really Being Paid Less?" (Monday, Dec. 20) by Thomas W. Hazlett in The Register.

Statistics, although a science, are like raw building materials, the user builds to his satisfaction. Thomas W. Hazlett's interpretation has no more validity than those he condemns.

His reporting of the "truth" leaves something to be desired. The insinuation he makes is that women are not as well educated nor are they as experienced as men. That might have been true in years past. The fact of the matter is that women were not hired regardless of their education or experience. They belonged at home!

The Department of Labor's statistics discloses that business as well as governmental employers still do not hire women unless legislated or forced through labor contract. They will pay the woman less money than they do man for exactly the same job.

Articles such as Mr. Hazlett's are divisive. The overtone is evident. Mr. Hazlett's statement that women are better off today than they were yesterday does not cloud the fact that they are behind men in opportunity and equal treatment.

Suggest that Mr. Hazlett try to keep his political philosophy out of his reporting.

In Name Only

Everyone wants peace. Peace means different things to different persons.

One kind of peace is the peace of the grave. There is also a kind of peace when a war ends. Most persons think of peace as the absence of war. But that kind of peace in no way guarantees justice. Absence-of-war peace exists in the Soviet Union, Cuba, Poland, Vietnam, and many other unhappy lands.

Let us turn our attention to a group called Members of Congress for Peace Through Law (MCPL). Because of its appealing name, a sizable number of Americans undoubtedly rejoice that 138 Congressmen and 35 Senators belong to MCPL and support its goal of settling world disputes through the use of law rather than force.

Let us pause to realize that law is also force. In fact, law must be backed up by military or police power, or it is meaningless. Law that is enforced can be employed either to guarantee a just peace, or to establish tyranny.

What kind of law and what kind of peace does MCPL seek? Its own publications tell us that it is working for "a strengthened United Nations and other steps necessary for the achievement of general and complete disarmament under enforceable world law." The "world law," of course, is whatever the "strengthened United Nations" comes up with. The "disarmament" is for individual nations, including our own. But, at the same time, MCPL seeks added U.S. support for a "permanent UN peacekeeping force." MCPL agrees that unenforced law is meaningless, and seeks to put teeth in the UN's world law.

Of the 145 member nations of the UN, half are out-and-out tyrannies and another 25 are only technically free. Representatives of these nations are the framers of the UN's world law.

By a simple majority vote in the General Assembly, these nations can send UN troops anywhere to enforce their laws. The precedent for such action was established when troops were sent into Korea in 1950, not by the Security Council where the U.S. has a veto, but by the General Assembly where hatred for America is practically a badge of honor.

In the Security Council itself, the post of Undersecretary for Political and Security Council affairs, charged with responsibility for all military and disarmament affairs, has always been held by a Communist. Arkady N. Shevchenko of the Soviet Union holds the post today. Yet MCPL wants to strengthen the UN's power.

No UN troops have ever been sent into Hungary, Czechoslovakia, Tibet, Angola, or the numerous other scenes of Red aggressions. History confirms that UN peace is the absence of opposition to Communism.

MCPL prefers to ignore the obvious threat to real peace posed by the UN. At the same time, the group preys on Americans, even Congressmen and Senators, with a high-sounding but dangerous semantic name. If your Congressman and Senators belong to MCPL, urge him to resign. Then press him to join other Americans in the drive to get us out of the United Nations before "UN peace" descends on the United States.

Biblical Tenets

President-elect Carter provides an example of the nominal, if sincere, Christian proponent who, however, exhibits a mistaken construction of Biblical tenets. It has become the fashion to relax viewpoints in conformity with "modern" thought regardless of accepted tradition or consequences. The view seems to be that a perverted Christian concept having largely failed, the only solution lies, not in a true seeking for genuine Bible principles, but in a blatant apostasy.

Oddly enough, or not so oddly to one who is informed of the facts, the whole thing is prophesied in the Bible. A few quotations will illustrate the point:

"And they shall turn away their ears from the truth, and shall be turned unto fables" - II Tim. 4:4.

"Teaching for doctrines the commandments of men" - Mark 7:7.

"There is a way which seemeth right unto a man, but the end thereof are the ways of death" - Prov. 14:12.

Even more touchy in the present context are the passages dealing with race, a few of which follow:

"Strangers have devoured his strength, and he knoweth it not" - Hos. 7:9.

"Make the land waste...by the hand of strangers" - Ezek. 30:12.

"Receive a stranger into thine house ...and he will turn thee out" - Ecclus. 11:34.

The word "stranger" is used in the King James version as a translation for words which, in other versions, are translated variously as "alien," "foreigner," and "sojourner."

Yorba Cemetery

This is in response to the letter entitled "Neglected Cemetery" which appeared in the editorial section on Dec. 22.

The historical Yorba Cemetery and surrounding Woodgate Community Park were officially dedicated by the Orange County Board of Supervisors on March 5, 1976. Prior to the county's acquisition, the cemetery was indeed the recipient of much neglect and vandalism.

Since the county acquired this historical site vast improvements have been made to preserve the historical significance and enhance its aesthetic quality. To date, the cemetery has received an extensive "facelift" including, irrigated turf and landscaping, flagstone pathways, wrought iron gates and chain link fencing.

Presently, Yorba Cemetery is maintained by a landscape contractor once a week and inspected by county employees. The cost to the county for this service is $74 a month. This facility and surrounding Woodgate Community Park is located in a high population density area. Maintenance requirements in such locations are constant.

The county's Public Facilities Operation Division takes pride in providing Orange County citizens with clean, safe recreational facilities. We recognize the importance of the Yorba Cemetery to Orange County's heritage; therefore, strive to preserve its history.

Option To Fight

Now that the holidays are over I am again asking all of the 576 other Lakewood taxpayers who have been leaned on and liened by our city attorney, John S. Todd, and the city hall cabal for non-payment of trash pickup - a "service" we neither use nor want.

Since there are so many of us who have been kicked by Todd and his supplicants on the city council, I thought there would be a wave of eager response to my previous plea for funds to attack the constitutionality of this oppressive trash ordinance, but so far I have been wrong.

My sincere thanks to all of you who have sent donations, but I think due to the busy season most have decided to let this go for the time being. I earnestly hope it is only that and not just plain don't-give-a-damn apathy. People ought to be concerned when their pockets have been picked!

Come now, are you going to stand by and let this audacious junta get away with usurping your rights? Any abrasive edit which attempts to force the citizenry to use an alleged service whether or not it is desired and then demands payment for it when it is not used, has to be unconstitutional. We must, we have to challenge it!

My attorney advises that it will cost about $2000 to haul Todd and his high-handed gang into court, but if all 577 of us who have had our property liened by our tax collector, that modern-day publican, H.B. Alvord, who conspired with them to extort our money, will just contribute $3.50 apiece we will have more than enough. Isn't it worth that infinitesimal amount to get back what you have been bled for? I know how extensively each of you has had your wallet picked: I have the list right before me.

Folks, a great number, more than you realize, of city ordinances are unconstitutional, but the average Joe Blow, the put-upon, overtaxed All-American boob hasn't the wherewithal to haul the profligate perpetrators into the courts where justice might be done, so these mephitic fiats are allowed to go on working their nefarious and odious burdens on the people. Legal counsel is not available, is beyond the financial reach of the working man today.

Let me assure you that all money received will be acknowledged, either by phone or postcard, whichever is cheaper, as I have thus far. If insufficient funds are forthcoming then all your contributions will be returned. I most assuredly am not out to make anything on this; in fact, I am in the hole right now. I am not concerned about that though, because I want to see this detestable ordinance dumped into the unconstitutional ashcan where it properly belongs.

If I have to spend the entire $103 the city has extorted from me just for postage and phone calls, it will be well worth it to ultimately yank His Arrogance John S. Todd up before the bar of justice!

The city hall combine has taken our money and given us nothing in return. Please-do not let this pretentious gang get away with it! Write me at 20814 S. Hawaiian Avenue, or call me on 865-6754.

Fiat justitia!

Another Law

Recently The Register brought to the attention of the public a new law quietly passed by the state legislator. Under this bill, which became effective Jan.1, homeowners and renters are required to purchase workman's compensation insurance, as any other business employer.

This means persons hired to do odd jobs may sue the employing homeowner or renter for injuries sustained on the job. The "employee" may be entitled to disability payments, lump sum settlements, medical costs and other workman's benefits. The disagreeing employer must present his case to the State Appeals Board. The long arm of the state will now control simple maintenence hiring-relations of every home in the state!

The new mandatory requirement will permit insurance companies to reap additional annual premiums from every household in the state. With lawsuits being a common everyday occurance, widespread abuse of this law is to be expected. Workman's compensation claims no doubt will be big business for California attorneys.

Urgency legislation to delay enforcement of the new law was introduced by Assemblyman Richard Robinson (D.-Santa Ana). Assemblyman Alister McAlister, (D.-San Jose), has authored Assembly Bill 132 which would repeal the new law. Opposition from powerful special interest groups is expected.

Citizens are urged to write their state legislators expressing their opposition to this new law.

Happy Subsidies

We will soon have Dial-A-Ride to replace the private tax-paying taxi-cab companies. Perhaps we could have the name "Smile-A-Ride" on the OCTD buses carrying the tourists over the Town Tour Fun Bus Tourist routes. You do know, I suppose, that the tourists pay all their own way on Town Tour Buses, but then, I'm sure, as fine citizens, all residents want to pay part of the cost of the tourists riding around.

I see where RTD is going to run buses to Santa Anita. I know everyone has real compassion for the gambler and would want to subsidize him. Chances are he might need a little assistance and I know you are charitable.

I suggest we run buses to each and every bar (at homeowner's expense or automobile owner's expense). We would wipe out the drunken driver problem and at the same time employ thousands of drivers, mechanics, office personnel, endless legions of lawyers, planners, engineers, etc. (I've always wondered why bars are given parking lot permits when probably 90 per cent of the drivers are slightly inebriated). Certainly the drinker couldn't buy his drinks and afford a little extra for some form of private transportation, and I know the citizens of Orange County are filled with compassion. OCTD could have 1000 "Saloon Specials".

We might have a problem with OCTD bus pollution before long, but then being as you won't be able to afford to drive your car, certainly we wouldn't have the pollution problems from automobiles, crowded campgrounds, or off street parking. Who will have a car? We might not be able to even afford the bus fare but then walking is good for you. The cost of all these assistance programs is expensive, but a little sacrifice on the part of us all will help to pay the tab.

Open letter to Barbara A. Walters, re her interview with President and Mrs. Ford on Jan. 2, on channel 7 television.

Barbara Walters, you ruthless, rude, feminist . . . !

What's the next sensational interview, Barbara? Possibly with Mamie Eisenhower and her innermost thoughts on Ike's so-called "affair" with his WWII driver Kay Summersby. Or - possibly a woman-to-woman chat with Col. Dick Arnold's widow on his WWII affair with the same Kay Summersby.

I repeat, Barbara Walters, you are a ruthless, rude, feminist . . . !

Let's fight the outrageous price of coffee by boycotting it. Don't say "I won't buy any," but cut way down on the amount you drink, starting right now, for say, one month. Take a beer break, or a sex break, or a something else break, instead of a coffee break.

Fan Mail

Year's end is universally accorded the honor, or the task, of stocktaking. I, like many if not most of us, don't take time to review the advantages, profit and pleasure, of the well-planned and fully rounded-out format of The Register, its editor(s), staff writers, photographers and lay-out personnel, as well as the roster of syndicated columnists, and the rest of its complicated and highly satisfactory structure. I take this opportunity to express my appreciation of the foregoing.

Reading The Register is no more of a habit than eating, but like the latter has become a daily requirement (along with other reading matter). For 16 years I have been a "fan".

I speak of the whole paper and the people who put it together. I am not unacquainted with the largest of metropolitan newspapers, but The Register is the one for which I champ-at-the-bit when it is late. Though I am not always prepared to agree with the editor's viewpoints, I always look forward to reading his column. The photographs are often a dream.

I miss McFeatters' cartoons when they do not appear. I rate him tops in his field. I find it difficult, quite often, to "get the message" that seems well-hidden in some of the political cartoons; but then, there's not much that's humorous relating to the current and future political scene (though humor is not always intended.)

Outside of mixed up story headings once in a while, there's not too much to say in criticism except: receiving the paper late (sometimes after being "scooped" by the evening video news) and my preference for the "Family Weekly" over "Parade". Also, the daily crossword puzzle sometimes takes odd turns which make it more challenging.

All in all, The Register is undeniably an asset to Southern California.

Bircher Polemic

I wish to respond to two recent articles on your pages. First, David Brudnoy's usually worthwhile column was most unfortunate on Dec. 31. Half of his criticism of the John Birch Society and its views was based on his encounter with individuals, whom he claims were Birchers and may well have been, who were irresponsible in their research and who were definitely not reflecting the official positions of the organization.

The Society can only be held responsible for disassociating itself from such individuals when persons like Brudnoy let a member of the Society's staff know about the situation. But for Brudnoy to structure an evaluation of the organization and its views on such an incident, is the sort of logical fallacy (generalizing from a specific case) which would be equally invalid if employed to suggest that all libertarians are anarchists because Murray Rothbard happens to be one.

Had Brudnoy read Robert Welch's "The Politician" and his subsequent writings in the last 20 years, he might have been able to discuss some of the evidence which Mr. Welch offered to substantiate his indictment, as well as understanding better what that indictment meant, since much of it was further supported by the book "Operation Keelhaul" for the exposure of which its author, Jules Epstein, earned the personal appreciation of Alexander Solzhenitsyn. Instead, Brudnoy was content to parrot the superficial humor of Russell Kirk.

Brudnoy does not examine a particle of the mountain of evidence the Society has available to support their conspiratorial view of world events, something increasingly acceptable after Watergate. He simply resorts to abusive ad hominem arguments about "drivel" and "discrediting serious anti-Communism".

The Society is successfully communicating this evidence to the public, while too many Brudnoid conservatives and libertarians remain frustrated, talking to themselves. But perhaps this is due to Brudnoy's use of fallacious arguments. After all David's field is journalism, not logic.

But a more incredible example of argumentum ad hominem was provided in Dirik Lolkus' polemical diatribe against Joseph McCarthy (Clearinghouse, January 2nd) in which not even a single factual datum was mentioned; hence no response is possible. But to all the Dirik Lolkuses among your readers, I make the same offer I have made elsewhere without response: find one example of a person who was falsely accused or criticized by Joseph McCarthy (I will gladly direct you to the evidence), or begin examining the state of your own intellectual honesty.

To Put It Plainly

Nowhere is the ignorance and intolerance, as well as bigotry and prejudice, of a people more graphically depicted than in the Letters-to-the-Editor columns of publications.

The self-serving, and even the bigotry, is to be excused in a free society but the ignorance and the desire to continue in ignorance, is not.

In Friday's edition the Cro-Magnon and Neandethral thinking was quite evident in the front page story on the school property-tax decision and on the editorial page in Hugh Smith's subject (not his letter)."Amnesty."

First, all the tons of newspaper editorials and attempts of different committees to make the property taxes more equitable (or fair) end up in futility.

Never is it brought out that persons who have no children and those whose children no longer are in the public schools should not have to pay taxes. Never! It is as if the editorial writers and the pusillanimous committees, preaching moral standards, etc., are phantom ghouls on a ship that derives its motion from inertia and other ineffable and inexplicable reasons, desires and/or motives for robbing Peter to pay Paul.

I, for one, would much rather see idiots without diplomas roaming the streets in front of homes with low taxes than those idiots now roaming the streets with diplomas. A rare few have basic knowledge of geography and a smaller number can speak audibly and plainly.

Even more ridiculous is the subject of amnesty.

It appears those parents and persons who were duped into the warmonger's Asian attempts to hold the Strait of Malaca for hardnosed commerce still have not seen the evil of our sending troops to Vietnam. Those people have been fighting in those rice paddies over there for 500 years from neighbor to neighbor and they will continue. There is nothing the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics or the United States of Socialist America, or the mafia-punchboards-and-slot-machine-ridden American Legion can do about it. When the legionnaires take time out from the punchboards, slot machines and other Mafia-controlled gambling in their places, they come out full of beer and espouse a jaundiced patriotism. That makes me sick. I fear their Nazi ways just as much as I do the communists.

Amnesty is ridiculous in the first place. Here we interrupt a citizen to send him to a war in which he had no interest. We weren't attacked.

Besides, always it is the 18-year-old who is picked to go. Why not pick first, those with the largest amount of money and stand to lose the most and second, those past forty, the decision makers.

So long as man can dip into the pools of the poor and dip out its youth for war at will, the world will go on with its madding, psychotic destruction.

I am a veteran, almost 50 years old. I begged to get into the Great War, and with only one eye, to stop a madman. I wish I had had a larger part in that, but I would be ashamed today if I did not evade the draft and run from Vietnam.

The question is not amnesty. It is mental retardation and the jerks that run this country.

All In The Act

After reading Vito E. Ales letter in the clearinghouse (Jan.5), I wondered if there was anyone who ever drove a car who hadn't reflected the quality of ancestry of some traffic engineer many times over. Yet, the truth is that no field of information specialty has less impact on the results you see than the traffic engineer.

Everyone who has ever crossed a street or driven any type of vehicle, fashions himself a traffic expert. Then, of course, there is the P factor (Political), responsible for many unwarranted traffic markings and control devices. Very often various stop signs, lights and other controls are the result of petition by the people or the whim of an elected official and directly in conflict with the best traffic engineering advice.

The traffic engineer uses all of his technical training, working within state and federal law to provide a public right-of-way that will give the public the most efficient travel-way consistant with reasonable safety considerations. From this point on, everybody gets into the act.

More often than not, the very stop sign or traffic control that frustrates the motoring public, is a device installed against the advice of the traffic engineer.

Bad News Papers

Newspapers should be called bad newspapers!

Of what importance is a fire in New York, Chicago, Canada, etc. to justify the front page of your bad newspaper today (Jan. 3)? Someone must have had a hangover to put such large type on the front page, when there were many important news stories to be found inside the sheet.

That is why I spend five minutes or so looking for important news items and the ads, and then turn to The Christian Science Monitor for news about important things, as well as information on things that we should know all over the globe. I usually spend a half hour or longer going through the Monitor.

No wonder The Monitor has achieved such high honors in the world's press. It might be well for you to study what they do. One thing they avoid is sensational stories, but they do give us the facts, pleasant or otherwise, on important things going on in the world.

You should be ashamed of today's Register!

Fine Line

Your front page article about the trouble the Amish farmers in Indiana are having with that state's milk regulations brought to mind part of our trip in November.

We traveled to Nappanee, Indiana, to receive delivery on a new fifth wheel trailer. It was not ready when we arrived, so we spent a weekend in the area. The town is a mixture of modern day people and their ways and Amish and Mennonite people and their ways. It was interesting to see how store parking lots reserve an unpaved area where the Amish can leave thier horse-drawn carriages tied up while they shop. There is one entire section in the middle of town, referred to as the Amish "airport," which is the main parking lot for the horses and buggies.

We were surprised to find several Amish women at the laundromat on Monday morning doing the week's washing. Evidently, there is a fine line drawn by some of them as to when it is all right to use electricity and when it isn't.

By the way, one reason we chose the particular make of trailer which we did was because it is mainly built with Amish labor. They are marvelous craftsmen. There again, the men in the factory were using electric equipment.

Enraged Vet

It grips the - out of me to read about President Ford granting amnesty to all the yellow draft dodgers and deserts from Viet Nam. I wish Mr. Ford would visit the Veteran's Hospital in Long Beach with me on one of my visits for medication in order to save my life.

If this goes through, all the future G.I.'s will have a reason to desert and avoid the draft because they will, anyway, be pardoned by our Presidents, so why worry
They don't have to go through what we in the European Theatre of Operations and the Pacific Theatre went through.

All veterans should write to their Congressmen now, before President Ford signs the bill for pardoning all these - -.

I, and my fellow Ex-Prisoners of War, DAV, Veterans of Foreign Wars, and American Legion, are outraged to hear of this preposterous deal we are getting. I just hope President Carter will feel the same as we do on this issue.

The Chosen Instruments

By JENKIN LLOYD JONES

Should the American transport airline companies be granted the right to violate the anti-trust laws and agree among themselves on the type of plane for the next generation of jets?

Should the great air frame manufacturers bid on such a plane, and the company having established the lowest price be granted a monopoly on its production, also in violation of the anti-trust laws?

Former astronaut Frank Borman, now head of Eastern Airlines, thinks this is an idea whose time has come and the Europeans and the Japanese may force it.

Here would be a gross breach of the most precious of American business traditions, that of free and open competition. Some would say that it would be like handing Ford the subcompact and compact car market, GM the intermeditates, Chrysler the luxuries, and squeezing out American Motors altogether.

But the analogy is not apt. The development costs of designing and tooling up for a new automobile are spread over hundreds of thousands if not millions of units. Competition among car makers is not only affordable, but healthy.

The same may not be true where the cost of a commodity runs between five and 30 million dollars a unit, where volume is reckoned in hundreds, and where design, testing and tooling expenses are figured in billions.

The golden age of American transport plane-making could pass quickly if not only the Japanese but a consortium of European nations get deeper into the business of airframe manufacture by cartel agreements among companies and cozy arrangements with governments.

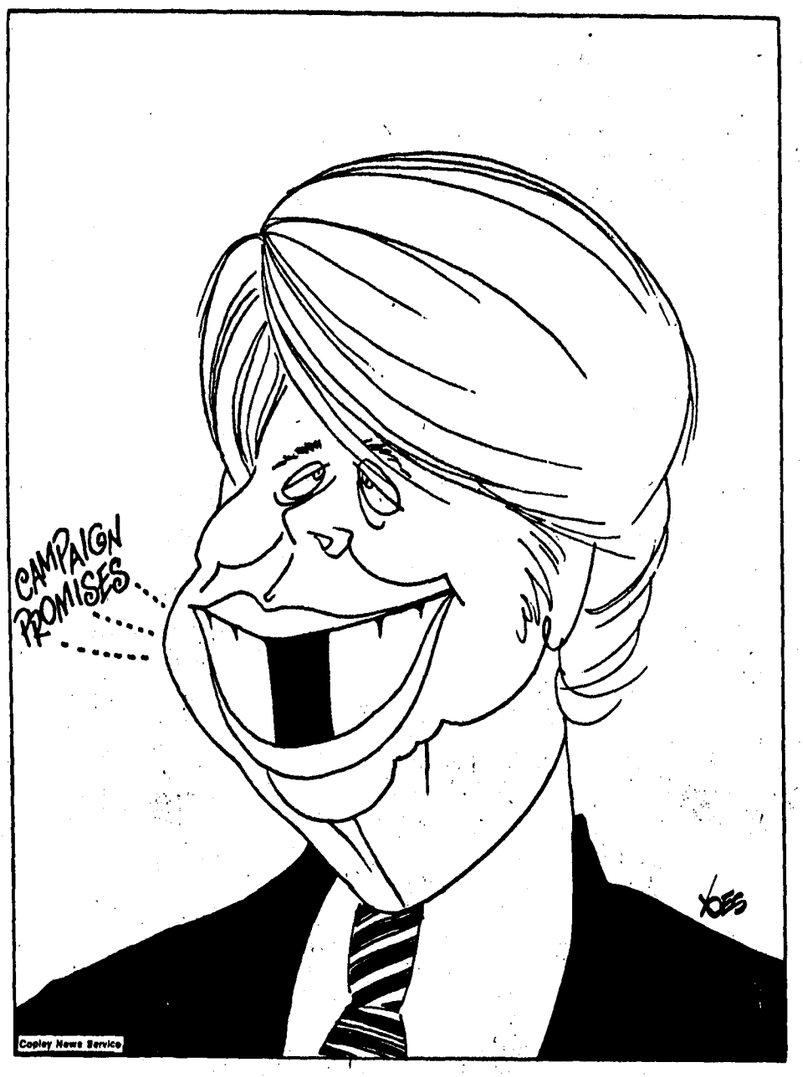
European moves in this direction have not been notably successful, first because the Concorde was a badly designed plane, too small for profit and too long in gestation, and, secondly, because the A-300-B, the so-called European "Airbus," is not much of an advance over older and well-established American models.

But this could change. Europe doesn't lack design imagination or mechanical genius, and the Japanese didn't become the world's greatest ship builders merely because of relatively low wages.

Traditionalists who believe that government action should have no effect upon competition among American planemakers overlook an already-old fact of life.

A quarter of a century ago Boeing bid successfully on an Air Force jet tanker, the KC-135, which enabled it to charge to Uncle Sam the design of a fuselage and wing that became, essentially, that of the 707. Its chief competitor, Douglas, had to design the DC-8 from scratch, at enormous expense to itself.

The jostling of too many plane manufacturers for too small a market has other evil fallouts. The Lockheed 1011 is very close in capacity and performance to the DC-10. But the world market would, apparently, only sustain one manufacturer in the profitable production of such a plane. This squeeze certainly contributed to the international Lockheed bribery scandals that have toppled foreign governments and blackeyed all American business.



The first job of a competitive system is to gain or hold the market. The second job is to return enough on risk capital to attract more, to provide for adequate research and development to safeguard the future.

The trouble with monopoly is that the market is held by artificial means, inviting profiteering, complacency and sooner or later decay in quality. The cure, of course, is competition. But where too much competition reduces or eliminates the return there arises a demand for hidden subsidies in the form of government orders.

We are seeing this in the American airframe business today. More and more congressmen are doing nip-ups trying to tilt military orders into plants in their districts, pleading economic need and hoping for political dividends. In these shoving matches the simple criterion of the company able to do the best job at the best price often gets lost.

How free enterprise United States airlines (as opposed to the majority under other flags which operate with heavy government subsidies) can afford the next generation of jets is a good question, since none is accumulating the necessary reserves. But the situation won't be helped if duplicated effort among competing American manufacturers raises that prices of planes, nor will the American airframe industry retain its world position if co-operative efforts in foreign countries succeed in cutting their unit costs.

The strict enforcement of American anti-trust laws may prove an expensive luxury when applied to airplane makers heavily dependent on foreign orders and up against competition from nations which never heard of such laws. There may, indeed, have to be areas of negotiation, agreement and co-operation in the aviation business that would be properly looked on with horror if tried in other fields.

What Is Moscow Up To?

By LEE EDWARDS

While Soviet Communist Party leader Leonid Brezhnev coos and billows, declaring his eagerness to negotiate a SALT II agreement with President-elect Carter, hard facts are coming to light about Moscow's true intentions.

The CIA's national estimate of Soviet strategic objectives over the next 10 years, yet to be formally released, states flatly that "the Soviet Union is seeking superiority over U.S. forces." This, of course, has been asserted by a number of conservative analysts for several years. But this is the first time the CIA has so reported to the White House.

According to the CIA estimate, as reported in the New York Times, "worriesome signs" include newly developed guided missiles, a vast program of underground shelters and a continuing building of air defenses.

The Commission on Security and Cooperation in Europe, just returned from a 2-1/2 week tour of Europe to study the impact of the 1975 Helsinki agreement, reports (a) emigration and movement is more difficult and dangerous than ever before; (b) Western newspapers, books and journals are not any more available in eastern Europe than they were before August 1975; (c) jamming of Eastern radio broadcasts persists, and a "Warsaw Pact propoganda barrage against these radios has continued incessantly since the early part of 1976."

Soviet dissident Vladimir Bukovsky, recently exchanged for the head of the Chilean Communist party, revealed that inmates of Soviet labor camps and prisons suffer reprisals every time they protest their jail conditions. Bukovsky, aged 33, spent more than one-third of his life in Soviet camps and psychiatric hospitals.

"The worst was being put in the isolation cells," the young Russian biologist said in Zurich where he now lives. They are "miniscule concrete holes, cold and damp, without ventilation or lighting and with the stink of the latrines. Some prisoners used to pass out.

"And since they used to lock up tubercular prisoners who had to spit blood, the walls were covered with stains. They were never disinfected."

If he is as committed to morality in U.S. foreign policy as he says he is, President Carter must bring up such outrages and unforgivable practices when he sits down with Brezhnev. The Soviets will naturally try to dismiss Bukovsky's testimony as propaganda or internal politics beyond the purview of the U.S.

But the Kremlin is caught in a trap of its own making: the Helskinki agreement. It was a signatory of the accord which confirmed Communist domination of Eastern Europe through acceptance of the post-World War II borders.

But "Basket Three" of the agreement was devoted to the question of human rights, specifically the right to reunite families, to travel and to make and maintain individual contacts for professional, tourist or personal reasons.

What more basic human right is there than the right of a man or woman to a fair trial, humane treatment while in prison, the expectation that some day he or she will be able to resume a normal life?

Andrei Sinyavski, imprisoned for seven years in the Soviet Union for publishing his essays in the West in the 1960s, told the Commission on Security and Cooperation in Paris that he wept when he first read the Helsinki accords, seeing them as another Western abandonment of captive peoples.

But on rereading them, he decided they held great potential as an instrument to expand freedom in the totalitarian societies of the East. If they were strenuously and sincerely applied, he argued, they would promote security and cooperation.

But if they were allowed to become a dead letter, Sinyavski warned, they would represent an abandonment of the hopes stirred in the East and a defeat for the West.

What are the prospects that the Helsinki accords will be "strenuously and sincerely applied"? The answer lies with President-elect Carter. He can press Brezhnev to pay something more than lip service to human rights. Carter is in a strong bargaining position. The Soviets need our technology, our grain, our goods. We should place a reasonable price on them.

Say, one advanced computer for the release of Mrs. Meita Lekina, still as far as is known in a psychiatric prison hospital in the Soviet Union.

Anna, Mrs. Lekin's daughter was allowed by Sovit authorities to leave for Israel in 1974 but not to bring her violin with her. Mrs. Lekina later gave the violin to a visiting friend to take to Anna.

Mrs. Lekina was arrested, charged with the crime of smuggling her daughter's violin out of the Soviet Union and placed in various "hospitals" that no civilized country would dignify with that name.

How about it, Mr. President-elect?

Teamster 'Cleanup' Coming?

By VICTOR RIESEL

WASHINGTON – All local leaders in the brotherhood have just been told by their national chief Frank "Fitz" Fitzsimmons that "Teamsters have a heart."

And the full story of their "unsung generosity" hasn't been reported. Fitz wrote them that "the bad press we've been getting" is due to their own failure to get the story across – the story of the brotherhood's charity to the handicapped, to those hit by natural disasters, to the Boy and Girl Scouts and their help to orphans.

So the Teamsters' general president urged his hundreds of regional subchiefs to rush all the news of their charity to headquarters there. Then it can all be told daily.

Fitz is being ably advised, discreetly, by one of the nation's best, if not the best, New-York-Park Avenue-type, world-sprawling public relations firms.

But not all this polished skill, not endless reports of Teamsters' millions given to the needy and the helpless, will mollify that "bad press." What we of what Fitz believes to be the malevolent media want to know, for example, is how come the Teamsters' $1.36-billion central states pension fund can lend one young man of La Jolla and Las Vegas $146 million. Almost $100 million of that money went for gambling casino operations. The rest for "real estate investments."

Most of us can run through a long litany of loans to other men who were either intimates of the vaporized Jimmy Hoffa or men with connections with the recent czar of central states pension loans, Allen Dorfman. He is the son of the late Red Dorfman, who considered himself "Hoff's partner" and long has been believed by many to have been the link with the Chicago crime "family." Allen Dorfman was the fund's consultant and assets manager.

Many answers will come. There's a three-pronged investigation into the big pension money pool which now is directed by the 42-year-old, ex-Notre Dame, highly political Daniel Shannon. He says, in effect, forget the old evil. Look to the future. Well, the enemies of the future are always the very nicest people. And Dan Shannon is known to be a nice guy.

It will take time. One of our government's highest law enforcers says sagely, "It is naive to expect anything in less than two years because if we are pushed to produce in less time, we will come up with a few convictions and then it will all collapse and be forgotten."

This source – and you can believe it, he knows – adds that one prong, the Justice Department, has just completed the first of two "phases" of a "really thorough probe."

"And in the second and final phase of this overall investigation our object is to straighten out the fund so it operates on a sound and equitable basis," he adds, "and not to throw a few people into prison."

He's not talking of peanuts. This fund has an annual income from 18,000 trucking employers estimated at anywhere between $300 million and $500 million. The old age security of some 400,000 truck drivers and warehousemen depends on the solidity of the loans – some $808 million of which are in "real estate."

The other day, in Chicago, this Dan Shannon made much of his release of a 31-page list of pension fund loans. The data was carefully prepared. It appeared that the secret files were going public — voluntarily. The hell they were.

This simply was the information which must be in the government files on form 5500 by Jan. 15.

Now the investigators and the "bad press" know where the money went. And now the government and news people will start tracing the shell games concocted by shell corporations in some cases. And the people will know in a year or so who the money angels are.

But truly it will be the second prong which will be doing the deep digging – meaning the Internal Revenue Service. It grooved in with the Labor Department task force in November. Now they are one team. The IRS has the enforcement clout and the Labor Department, under Secretary-designate Freddie Ray Marshall, has the power to explore the pension processes. The IRS is searching for possible income received from kickbacks, skimming, finders' fees and simple washing of moneys from the original loans, my source says.

The IRS never forgets. It still is after Teamsters' president emeritus Dave Beck. Treasury says he owes them some $850,000 in back taxes. And, says IRS, he can pay. He's a multimillionaire. But it did take him 82 years to amass the money.

The third prong is the interdepartment civil and criminal task force. Slowly it will build cases which it believes won't be thrown out of court. It's digging into all circles – the political as well as labor and the big investors who have carefully pulled loans from the fund sometimes totalling $18 million; sometimes $200 million via interlocking corporations.

There won't be any easing of the three-sided vise. Senate Labor Committee chairman Harrison (Pete) Williams will tell Ray Marshall during confirmation hearings that this central states pension fund and later little-known companion, Chicago Teamster welfare fund, must be among his first priorities.

So, though the Teamster locals do open their hearts and pocketbooks to the Girl Scouts, the United Way and drug abuse aid centers, the "bad press" is apt to hang around for a while. A good press, like charity – of which the brotherhood dispenses much – begins at home.

And I Quote

"I want to make Stan Musial commissioner. He's qualified and he says he will take the job. Kuhn – to heck with Kuhn – he never smiles."

– Ted Turner, owner of the Atlanta Braves, who wants to get rid of baseball Commissoner Bowie Kuhn.

"I've played Santa Claus for so many years, I do it with my eyes closed."

– Irving Sells, executive director of The Associated Blind, who is blind himself, on his organization's annual Christmas party for blind children.

"I've been a woman for nearly 62 years. I really don't think about it too much."

–Gov.-elect Dixy Lee Ray of Washington, on being only the second woman to be elected governor in the United States.

"The peanut can help alleviate the world food shortage. Do you know it's almost a perfect food?"

–Billy Carter, brother of the president elect, discussing the complexities of the world food shortage.

"The 1970s have witnessed the greatest ripoff in history as literally millions of dollars in hard-earned and sorely needed tax dollars have been mismanaged, squandered, wasted and stolen from federally funded health programs."

–Samuel K. Skimmer, U.S. attorney for the northern district of Illinois, testifying before a Senate committee investigating fraud in the Medicaid program.

LAND AND LAW

Freedom And The Press II

By BERNARD SIEGAN
Distinguished Professor of Law
University of San Diego Law School

By BERNARD H. SIEGAN

Several friends from the press have taken exception to the views expressed in those columns that the newspaper business is entitled to no more nor less liberties than the construction or any other competitive industry. They believe, along with many commentators on the subject, that the press warrants select treatment.

The grounds presented for this position typically are three fold: First, the rights of press are absolute and unlimited under the Constitution; second, a completely unrestricted press is essential to the functioning of a free society; and, third, government is incapable of properly regulating the press. While not all of these arguments are accurate, there is enough truth in them to support the special legal status the press presently enjoys. They do not establish that the rights associated with the press deserve preference over those of other producers and sellers.

The First Amendment to the U.S. Constitution states: "Congress shall make no law...abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press...." Some insist this is an absolute requirement and commands complete freedom of expression without government regulation of any kind.

The late Justice Hugo Black championed this view, but in spite of his thirty-four years of service on the high court, only Justice William Douglas, to my knowledge, agreed with his interpretation. Moreover, both justices qualified the applicability of this constitutional provision so that it was absolute only within a limited sphere. Thus Justice Black drew a distinction between speech and conduct and thereby excluded many activities involving expression from constitutional protection.

The problem with the absolute position is that society could not function in the absence of any restraints on expression. The irresponsible could, with impunity, shout "fire" in a crowded theater. Newspapers could print lies and misrepresentations and destroy reputations without fear of legal reprisal. The home, business, church, club legislature, courtroom and military, both on and off the battlefield, would not be immune at any time from uninterruptible harangues. Once it is accepted that the First Amendment does not safeguard these forms of expression, a line has been drawn, and the provision is no longer absolute; but subject to distinctions and controls.

No one has ever shown that the framers of the amendment intended the provision on expression to be absolute. The evidence would suggest otherwise; there probably was far less concern for free speech and press in the early years of the nation than now. Many leaders in colonial times and subsequent to the revolution were not opposed to punishing people for making political statements that today would pass largely unnoticed.

The commentators on speech present a more convincing argument in asserting that a free and repsentative society cannot exist without freedom of expression. This is unquestionably true for it would not otherwise be possible for the electorate to understand, discuss and sound off on political issues.

But not all speech leads to political wisdom and progress. Most of the contents of newspapers – features, advertising, comics, sports, market reports – do not further the airing and spread of political and governmental information. These pages are devoted largely to the pleasures, conveniences and material needs of people. On these pages, the publishing business contributes little more to the public welfare than does the housing, auto, transportation, food, etc., industries. To survive and flourish, publishers, like these others, must serve the demands of the consuming public.

Nor do the news and editorial columns always improve the public's comprehension of the issues. Splashy headlines, inaccurate reporting, partisan coverage, sensationalism, concern with personalities and not issues and promotion of favored causes and exclusion of others, tend to detract from, rather than benefit the cause of self-government and enlightenment.

It is far from clear that the press is enhancing the condition of man more than the businesses that provide food, clothing, shelter and other essentials. Publishing appears to be just as appropriate for government regulation which is supposed to soften or remove the excesses and overcome the limitations of the private market.

Newspapers are on the firmest ground when they contend government regulation of the press would operate tyrannically and incompetently. Censorship is wrong both for philosophical and pragmatic reasons. It is not a device reserved solely for the press, however. Government regulators who decide what can be produced in the economic market and where, and make aesthetic judgments – as for example, zoning authorities continually do – carry out essentially the role of a censor. The most persuasive rationale for press freedom accordingly, applies equally to other sectors of society.

A Different Year

By RALPH J. KAPLAN

Close as we are to the year Two Thousand, with only some twenty-odd years separating us, we have begun to find out that change does not require our counting in centuries or eras.

We have come to accept that there is constant change: the imperceptible which comes upon us gradually, and the sudden which descends upon man through war, epidemics or natural disasters or other events of which we may not gain instant knowledge. Even our astronauts remained earthbound although they descended upon the Moon because their entire relationship to life needed relevance.

A change of government in any country, be it the U.S., China, or a former African colony, is not significant enough to bring about anything more drastic than a situational change. It is rather in the area of human change that we must look for the newness which enables man to find new goals and an improved meaning of life itself.

The economic richness of our country gave us advantages over other nations which we took for granted to the envy of the rest of the world. But as the economic progress of both western and developing nations advanced over the last few years, we found ourselves suddenly in competition; we were no more unique and superior in all aspects of life. As the old year changes into a new one, we are bound to become more introspective and critical of ourselves and our goals.

The termination of the Vietnam disaster not only gives our nation its first period of actual peace with no global or regional conflicts interferring in our quest for peace of mind, but also the first full opportunity to measure the bounty of good fortune bestowed upon us by circumstances of birth in equal portion to our industry and capability to pursue happiness successfully.

But it is surely going to be different in 1977, with millions of Americans looking for new goals and objectives and an escape from the traditional. Especially America's older people have come to feel that they occupy an increasingly important place in our society. Through their organizations and representatives they make demands upon government for more acceptance as active citizens. They refuse to be relegated to the musty backpages of yesterday's history. They know that they have active contributions to make and seek channels through which this can be done – and I'm not just speaking of our 35 million senior citizens, but also of the uncounted millions who are about to approached or have just passed the age of retirement – i.e., the traditional 65.

Older people possess skills not yet acquired by a younger generation. They are not just a source of information from which the younger American can obtain data in library fashion. Government and industry are beginning to regret the institution of compulsory retirement just because of age, and there has been a great deal of discussion on Capitol Hill regarding the need to change that legalistic status.

Again, President-elect Jimmy Carter will find himself busily coping with straightening out the relationship between age and competence as they hitherto apply.

The next few years will undoubtedly see a new role for the "vintage" American.

Collector Plates Blossoming Art Form

By MARIA NORRIS
Register Staff Writer

For many people, the term "plate collecting" evokes warm memories of grandma's kitchen, where small blue and white dishes decorated with snowy Christmas scenes were perched on shelves alongside bone china cups and dainty flowered tea pots.

To others, plate collecting is just one of those avoid-like-the-plague schemes that promise impossibly big returns for small investments.

Charming anachronism or fool's gold? Neither conception of collector plates is completely fair or accurate, in the opinion of Tom Werner, owner of Werner's Fine Gifts and Collectibles in San Clemente, although "Copenhagen Blue" plates are still a Yule tradition and the value of most dated discs tends to appreciate with the passage of the years.

According to Werner, a former electrical engineer who started acquiring plates as a hobby about a decade ago, the 1970s have seen collector plates blossom into the "most widely collected art form in America."

The reason? Such plates "enable people to obtain a fine work of art on a fine piece of porcelain at a price almost anyone can afford," Werner said.

With a few exceptions, dated and numbered plates produced before the 70s were of the blue and white variety, he continued. Featuring designs by no particular artist, they were turned out only at Christmastime, for the most part by Scandinavian companies.

Today, however, full-color paintings of such famous artists as Keene, Ted DeGrazia, Norman Rockwell, Lorraine Trester, Leo Jansen, Irene Spencer, Leroy Neiman, John Stobart, Don Ruffin, Edna Hibel and even Red Skelton, to name but a few, grace plates offered by innumerable porcelain makers from the world over.

In addition to Christmas, the discs now commemorate Mother's and Father's Day, our bicentennial, the Olympics and, increasingly, no occasion at all.

For rather than commemoration, the trend in plates nowadays is toward celebration; children and motherhood in particular are being exhaulted by plate artists, Werner said.

Trester's carefree children who gather flowers in windswept meadows are some that have been captured on china, for example. And DeGrazia's stylized Los Ninos (The Little Ones) now dance around the rim of a plate.

Edna Hibel, according to Werner the current most popular china painter, extols motherhood. Her sentimental "Mother and Child" series produced by Royal Doulton is the biggest seller.

Quoting the Chicago-based Bradford Exchange, the "world's largest plate dealer," Werner said Ms. Hibel's 1976 plate, "Marilyn," issued at $55, is presently valued at $110.

Although noted especially for his nudes, Leo Jansen is another artist who has recorded tender moments between mothers and their infants in oils specifically for plates.

His lovely, long-tressed "Scandinavian Mother" who will make her debut in time for this coming Mother's Day, promises to be a big hit with plate buyers, Werner said.

Other subjects that have found favor among connoisseurs of the decorative discs include the changing seasons, 19th Century barnyards, rugged cowboys on a roundup, Indians, clowns, ships, flowers, woodland creatures, plus such whimsical characters as Snoopy and Raggedy Ann.

In general, plate art is typified by conservatism and nostalgia, by idealized yesterdays, according to Werner. It is pleasant, devoid of stark "slice of life" reality, harshness and anything that smacks of poor taste.

Noticeably absent, too, is the abstraction of a Dega or Picasso or the hazy expressionism of a Monet.

Paintings for porcelain, which are usually executed on canvas and then transfered to the plates via decals, are clear in focus and well defined in the main and tend to portray large subjects rather than "busy" landscapes.

Although "95 percent of all collector plates are porcelain," said Werner, the art form does have wood, silver, ceramic, pewter and alabaster representatives.

The very first plate produced exclusively for collecting, however, was of the porcelain variety, originating in Denmark.

In days gone by, it was a Danish custom at Christmastime to present servants with wooden plates filled with cookies, Werner related.

Then one year Harald Bing, who headed the old Copenhagen porcelain company of Bing and Grondahl, began the tradition of serving up the sweets on dated and decorated chine plates, or so the story goes. And in 1895 he decided to manufacture the plates commercially.

Bing called his first collector's plate "Behind the Frozen Window," and sold it for the equivalent of 50 cents, according to Werner. It was, of course, blue and white and precisely 7 3/4 inches in diameter.

Until 1949, Americans showed less interest in collector plates than did Europeans, Werner said. That year, the plates were first offered for sale in U.S. department stores.

Chairman Of New Space Board Says His Job Holds 'Exciting Potential'

By BARD LINDEMAN
Knight News Wire

MIAMI – Can men and women safely live in outer space for as long as three, four, even six years?

Can the two sexes procreate in a weightless environment without fear of genetic harm to their "space children?"

Is it possible – and feasible – to build "space colonies" for up to 500,000 Americans?

While these may sound like questions out of science fiction, they are not. They are bona fide inquiries that a University of Miami researcher must confront as he and his Space Science Board explore new frontiers in 1977.

For Dr. Neal S. Bricker, professor and vice-chairman of medicine, his latest assignment means "a hell of a lot of work," but with an equal amount of "exciting potential."

"Our major thrust," he said, "will be to learn things in human physiology that ultimately will help people on earth."

Dr. Bricker is no stranger to space medicine. Over the past six years the specialist in kidney disease, with a three-inch biography in Who's Who, has helped NASA on a number of missions.

At the NASA station near Aimes, he agreed one morning recently to accept the demanding responsibility as chairman of the new board. The National Academy of Sciences, which recruited Dr. Bricker, explained he must "volunteer" 25 per cent of his time to the unsalaried commando "because it is in the national interes5."

His first job now will be to appoint the members of the Bricker Committee. "There can be up to 25 scientists, and they don't all have to be from the United States," he said, adding, "I haven't decided whether to pick a Russian or not."

To the chairman, his mandate is both broad-based and sharply focused: "We must design scientific experiments that will recommend how the United States should proceed with future exploration in space."

And beyond that, Dr. Bricker said: "If we perform the right studies, I feel very strongly we can learn things that will relate to a number of diseases, including heart failure, certain liver failures, kidney disease and even diabetes."

Then this serious, sober scientist, who began his academic career as an instructor in medicine at Harvard when he was 28 and has since published 88 research papers (Sample: "The Electrogenic Nature of Active Sodium Transport Across the Isolated Frog Skin"), turned enthusiastically to the obvious "science fiction character" of his work.

"Should we go to Mars?" he asked, smiling at the sound of this uncommon concern. "Can we live in space for the three years the trip will take? Our committee is going to have to answer these questions."

Strictly as a guess, the university vice-chairman added: "I think there will be manned flight to Mars before the end of the century – provided Congress appropriates the funds."

But by 1980, there definitely will be a Skylab orbiting earth, with space shuttles running back and forth to it. Aboard the shuttles, said Dr. Bricker, will be astronauts and "some scientists."

Both sexes are to be represented, working and living in close, stressful, potentially dangerous conditions. With this cue, Dr. Bricker admitted that, "Yes, we will also study the biology of reproduction in space. But I think we'll begin with animal studies."

He explained that since almost nothing is known about space reproduction, it is natural to worry about genetic damage. "If the animals can reproduce, that in itself will be a significant piece of information."

(He explained that because of zero gravity or weightlessness, strange things occur in space: hearts shrink in size; there is a loss of body fluids, chiefly potassium and water; mucus cannot drain and so an astronaut can damage his ears by blowing too hard; and there is no sense of "up" or "down.")

Another area of mystery is the so-called "Space Colony" concept. As Dr. Bricker said, "The premise is perhaps as many as 500,000 persons might ultimately be living in a giant capsule. But is this feasible? What about bacteria? And what of the emotional and psychological impact of weightlessness and all the other factors?

"Obviously, there aren't very many experts in this field we're calling 'Ecology of Closed Environment.' But the government is going to want information from the committee on all of this."

VARIETY KEYNOTES PLATE ART – This painting by Red Skelton of his Freddie the Freeloader character and the Indian mother and child by artist Leo Jansen can hardly begin to show the variety of subjects that adorn collector plates today. Prior to the 70s, most of the discs came out each year at Christmas time sporting only appropriate-for-the-season subjects in blue and white. Now, however, plates are issued just about anytime. Plates that feature the new mother/child theme as well as children by themselves are especially popular now, according to Werner, though he says the more traditional designs continue to do well. In fact, the former engineer says the porcelain discs constitute America's 'most widely collected form of art.'

Dominoes More Than Mere Child's Play

Dominoes, the sometimes spurned cousin of oh-so-chic backgammon and intellectual chess, is coming out of the children's toy closets and into their parents' living rooms.

On the West Coast, especially in San Francisco, dominoes are as ubiquitous as trolley cars. Businessmen play dominoes in their clubs with a little discreet wagering over lunch; dominoes parties rival the popularity of bridge parties; and dominoes tournaments and marathons raise money for such causes as needy children and symphony orchestras.

In Oklahoma, churches hold dominoes matches to supplement the Sunday collection plate. And in Texas, men gather in dominoes parlors, not unlike pool halls, to engage in a bloodthirsty Texas version of the traditional dominoes game.

Dominoes sets are a steady though not big seller in Chicago, reports Esther Lambert, a clerk in the game department of Marshall Field & Co.'s State Street store. "But they may be coming into their own because people are constantly on the lookout these days for games they haven't tried before."

That would be a great help to dominoes buff Jim Jones, 14, a freshman at Gordon Tech High School. Jones learned to play dominoes from his grandmother but says he has difficulty finding partners.

Dominoes sets are showing up everywhere – in the poshest mail order catalogs and in Bloomingdale's, New York's pacesetting store.

"The popularity of the game is increasing," says Dominic Armanino of San Francisco. Armanino is director of the International Domino Association (which holds annual tournaments), author of several books on the game, and a "dominoes addict."

"Most people think dominoes is a simple game, a child's game, but it has more possibilities than a deck of cards," contends Armanino, who also is president of the Five-Up Company, a small but growing business that sells dominoes sets, books, and other related items.

"It takes skill, but it's not as complicated as chess. In chess, there's no element of luck. If you're a better player, you'll win. In dominoes, there are elements of chance and skill."

Dominoes is played with 28 rectangular blocks known as dominoes; also rocks, tiles, and bones. The face of each tile is divided in two, each half containing markings similar to a pair of dice, except some ends are blank.

The 28 tiles represent all possible combinations from double-blank to double-size, hence such 28-piece sets are called "Double-Six". Other games are available with combinations up to double-twelve.

The origin of dominoes is rather obscure. A 21-piece set was found in King Tut's tomb. In China, dominoes are as ancient as playing cards and apparently were designed to represent all possible throws of the dice.

Monks in Florence, Italy, are credited with adding seven pieces to the 21-piece set. The game appeared in France during the 18th Century and, it is believed, was introduced into England by French prisoners of war. From England, it came to America.

The name may have been derived from pieces made of ebony with ivory faces, resembling the black cloak called a "domino." The Innuit Eskimos gambled wildly at dominoes, in which they used as many as 148 pieces, and sometimes staked and lost their wives in the process.

The principle in nearly all versions of the game is the same: the matching of one identically numbered end to another.

Armanino's books have popularized a version called "Five-Up," a version of the game that surfaced in San Francisco at the turn of the century. Players draw some of the tiles, leaving others in a pool or "boneyard." Armanino says this version, with its certain scoring plays, makes it a more challenging game.

Armanino, a retired banker, began playing dominoes by chance. Now 77, he was in his 40s when he experienced heart pains and his doctor told him he must learn to relax. One day, a friend suggested lunch and a game of dominoes at the San Francisco Commercial Club. Armanino got hooked.

"We played for a few bucks," he recalls, "And I was losing money. I don't consider myself a poor loser, but I didn't want to be a sucker either; so I started analyzing the game. Pretty soon I had so many notes I figured I had to write a book."

Popular among California's smart set, dominoes also has a bastion of support in the South.

Hugh Stone, owner of the La-Mor Recreation Club in Dallas, says the popularity of the game in Texas, Oklahoma, Arkansas, and Louisiana is "one of those unexplainable things like why they play cribbage out East and not here."

The notion that dominoes is a kid's game is unfortunate, says Armanino, because "children usually set up the tiles like soldiers and knock them down. They don't play."

Sometimes playing style is linked to the material used to make the dominoes. Medium-priced sets usually are plastic or some sort of syntnetic. Neiman-Marcus has sold handcrafted mesquite wood sets for up to $45 made by A. L. "Babe" Kingle, a retired oil man who lives in Big Lake, Tex.

Kingle, who has been playing dominoes since he was "a little bitty kid," carves his tiles, sands and varnishes them several times, then works in the dots, or "pips," with a drill and paints them with a cotton-covered toothpick.

A jade factory owner has a set made, naturally, from jade. Armanino says he once thought of having a set made from gold, but that was before the price of that metal skyrocketed.

Actually, any kind of set will do, as long as the backs cannot be marked. That's about the only way to cheat at dominoes.

ERMA BOMBECK

Missing Excitement Might Be In Shower

Do you ever get the feeling that life is a parade and you're standing behind Bill Russell?

While I was watching television the other night, a commercial came on about a shower nozzle that massaged your entire body with four different sprays. The bathee twisted and squealed with such delight that I sat forward in my chair to see what was turning her on.

Finally, she flipped her head and whispered huskily, "Have a GOOD time with your water spray."

I shrugged and figured here was a woman who could make a party out of a tax audit and forgot it.

During the next break, a commercial came on of a man so beat I thought he was going to expire before my eyes. All he wanted out of life was a decent burial. Then he stepped into the shower and began to cover himself with lather. Within seconds, his entire body sprang to life. The last glimpse showed him sniffing his soap in pure ecstasy, and yelling to his wife to get his bowling ball out of the closet.

After that I began to watch the bath commercials closely. They were all the same. Everyone had such a swell time I felt guilty watching them. One woman who looked like a walking ad for sweat, eased herself into a tub of suds and immediately turned into a sex kitten. She snuggled down under the bubbles, closed her eyes and purred and invited everyone to join her.

What really sent me to the plumbing supply was a commercial for a water spray filmed at a resort in Florida. A hidden camera and microphone recorded the rapture felt by the people who stood under the assault of water. (The last time I saw that look on anyone's face, it was worn by my mother at my wedding.)

Maybe that's what was missing in my life. I had tried raucous parties, jet travel and baking from scratch. Maybe all I needed to create some excitement was a shower spray to sweep me off my feet.

It took 45 minutes for my son to relinquish the bathroom to me. The steam opened up pores that had been closed for repairs. Turning on the spigot caused the shower to drench my head in water as he had forgotten to push down the plunger. The soap was in a liquid form in the soap dish. A bottle of shampoo without a lid spilled onto my feet. The spray was at eye level and knocked me into a wall.

I don't think showers will ever replace volleyball.

DEAR MOTHER EARTH

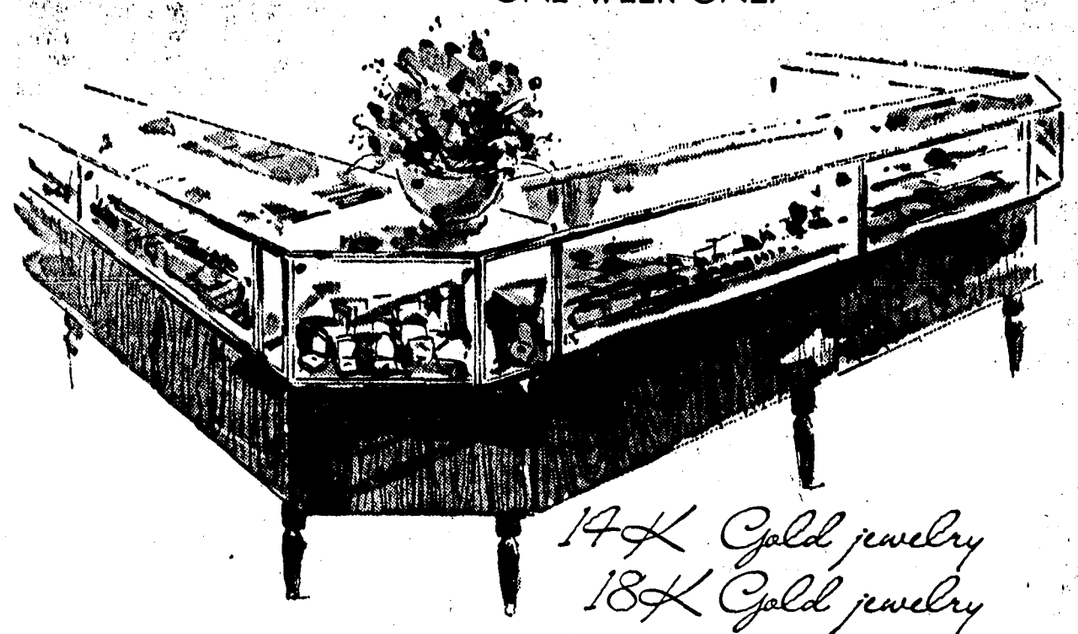
Garden Soil Is No-No For Indoor Plant Use

By LYNN AND JOEL RAPP

Dear Mother Earth: You advised in one of your columns against using garden soil for indoor plants. I had been doing just that and couldn't understand why my plants were so unhappy. Can you tell me more about soil and how I can prepare it for indoor use? — H.G., Tampa, Fla.

Dear H.G.: It's a definite no-no to use outdoor soil for houseplants! When you prepare soil for planters, remember that the physical state of the soil is even more important than its chemical composition. In other words, the primary requirement for any planter soil is adequate drainage. Plant roots require plenty of air. In order to insure a constant supply of air, the soil must encourage good drainage and so should consist of fairly coarse particles.

Plants growing in containers exist under artificial conditions. The soil is more firmly packed than garden soil and is watered more often so the planter soil quickly becomes drained of nutrients and filled with roots. Because of this, planter soil should be specially mixed. In general, your indoor plants will grow better and require less care if the soil you use is combined with ingredients that will provide better drainage, hold additional moisture and increase fertility.



Indoor potting mix is available at every nursery, plant store and supermarket. Some are better than others and we recommend you try them all and find the one you like best. They are all made of basically the same ingredients: sterilized soil, sand, leaf mold, humus or peat moss, manure and charcoal. You can make your own soil mixture, but unless you have many plants and lots of room, it's just not worth it. And remember, if you do prepare your own indoor potting mix, it must be sterilized. Always be sure the soil is damp when repotting or replanting, never dry. Keep soil stored in plastic bags to keep it moist. Happy growing!

INTERIOR DESIGN

Give Depth To A Small Living Room By Decorating Its Adjacent Patio

By SHIRLEY FAIR

Dear Shirley:

We just bought an old home and it is very small (layout enclosed). As you can see the kitchen is an L off the living room and the living room is only 13 X 16.

There is just my husband and I as our only daughter is married; so, we don't need a lot of room. But I would like what we have to be nice.

I am at a total loss as to how to furnish this house. We are going to start from scratch, so we can do anything we like. I like a very light, airy contemporary look, and I want to make the house look as roomy as possible.

Can you tell me how to furnish it, and is there a way to make the kitchen pretty and still functional enough for everyday use. The cupboards actually face the living room, and I don't think there is anything we can do about that. Also I don't know whether to use kitchen carpet or a hard floor, and if I use a hard floor – what type?

I like lots of plants, and I like light greens and yellow with white. Wallpaper would be nice, but I don't know if it would be wise to use it in such small rooms? I would appreciate your help.

Mrs. G Stimpson

Dear Mrs. Stimpson:

You don't have a good wall to mirror; therefore, you will have to make the most of your window. When you open your front door, the first thing you see is the living room window, which covers the whole end of the room. Don't cover this window with sheers. Frame it with a lovely valance and traverse draperies that are kept open except when you feel you want complete privacy.

If you have a patio outside this window, cover it with an outdoor green carpet and decorate it with the same care that you would use indoors. White wrought iron furniture with cushions of white vinyl with bright yellow flowers and green leaves would be pretty.

Use lots of plants and hanging baskets filled with greenery and yellow and white flowers. By doing this, you extend the living room into the outdoors, giving your room depth and making it appear larger than it is.

Paper all living room walls with a white wallpaper with light green lattice work all over it. Your kitchen has no wall space, so select a white wallpaper with a small yellow and green floral pattern and use it on the ceiling. Have a carpenter come in and put a small ½ inch molding around your cupboard doors (set the molding in about 2 inches all the way around). Paint cupboards and molding white, and put wallpaper inside molding.

Carpet the living room with a light green plush carpet and use a white brick vinyl flooring in the kitchen. Purchase enough carpet to make a large round area rug with fringe to use under a round table in the kitchen.

Kitchen table and chairs should be yellow bentwood with a white vinyl top. Spray a large round basket bright yellow to match table and chairs, and fill it with white daisies for centerpiece.

The small window at side of kitchen would look nice with small white shutters. Use plain light green draperies to match green in paper for living room.

Place an 8-ft. sofa in the center of long wall facing the kitchen. Use a pair of upholstered chairs, one at each end of the sofa facing each other. Place a small oval coffee table in front of sofa and three prints framed in pure aluminum frames with 3 inch green mats (matching green in paper) above the sofa. These prints should be uncluttered and in yellow, green and white.

On the short wall, opposite sofa, use two eterge stands side by side or open shelves mounted on wall. One shelf must be large enough for a portable TV. Others will be used for plants, books and accent pieces.

Cover sofa in plain light green with yellow cording. Cover two chairs in the yellow fabric used for cording. Toss yellow pillows in each corner of sofa. White parson tables with contemporary crystal lamps will finish the room.

Questions for this column may be mailed to Shirley Fair, Box 1514, Whittier 90603.

STRICTLY FOR DADS

He Cared Enough To Insure Her Future

By CHARLIE SHEDD

"Dear Dr. Shedd: Have you ever written a column on the importance of insurance? Well, I thought you might consider it if I told you my story. I am really a very fortunate woman, because I have had two good husbands. The man I am married to now is successful and a good father, and he treats me like a queen. My first husband and I were started on that kind of marriage too, only he was killed in an automobile accident two years after we married.

"Now here is where the insurance comes in. Just a week before the accident he took out a policy which has made more difference in my life today than I can tell you. Because of it my present husband and I have been able to develop a good business, very good in fact. We've gone places we couldn't have gone, done things we couldn't have done. In addition, our children have had schooling they might not have had. I'm sure we would have made it somehow without that insurance money. But I can't tell you the number of times I've thanked the Lord for it.

"I should probably tell you also that I wasn't so much for buying that insurance as my husband was. We had so many debts, and we were struggling hard. I kept telling him we should put it off for a year or two until we could get caught up and things would be easier, but he insisted.

"I can hear him telling me yet that he felt responsible to protect me if anything should happen to him. Sometimes I wonder if he had a premonition. Nobody knows, of course, but I know this. It is possible for a woman to love her second husband completely and reserve a place of special appreciation for a first husband who would care enough to underwrite her future."

Guess I better go do a check on my policies.

OC Collector Owns 500 Plates

Plate collecting was given impetus from another direction in 1951, when a Chicago antique dealer started pricing the old plates he had in stock according to their age. No collector plate is technically an antique, however, Werner pointed out, since none is yet 100 years old.

Before the antique dealer revolutionized pricing, all the old Danish plates sold for around $3.50 to $4 regardless of age, Werner said.

By 1955, "Behind the Frozen Window" was worth $75; its current Bradford Exchange quotation is $3,000. Anyone lucky enough to own the entire Bing and Groundahl Christmas series possesses $15,950 worth of china, according to the exchange.

Royal Copenhagen came out with the most successful single plate ever produced: the "Little Mermaid" of 1962. Issued at $11, it now sells for $190.

In 1965, the French company Lalique introduced the first collector plates to be made of something other than porcelain. "Deux Oiseaux," birds etched in crystal, has climbed from $25 to $1,750 in the last 12 years, Werner stated.

That same year, Frankoma of Oklahoma became the first American company to come out with a collector's plate. It was made of pottery.

Today plates are proliferating at a fast clip, according to Werner, who counted some 50 different Christmas discs on the market this year. Virtually every well-known maker of porcelain, including Wedgewood, Royal Bayreuth, Haviland and Goebel, now produce plates.

The great number and variety of plates currently available are making the problem of selection a difficult one for buyers, Werner said. And therefore he has drawn up guidelines to help them make intelligent decisions.

The most important criterion for prospective plate owners to remember is personal preference, he said.

"You've got to like it. There's no guarantee a plate's value will go up, so buy it as a work of art rather than an investment. There are just too many promises today of fantastic increases that fail to materialize."

One can, however, usually count on the likelihood that the first plate of a series will increase in value, according to Werner, because those who start collecting in mid series often want to pick up the ones they missed. Speculators, therefore, will purchase only that first plate.

The second of Werner's buying guidelines suggests doing business only with reputable dealers and generally staying away from mail order firms that can't always assure satisfaction as to quality.

And thirdly, one should "get the plate to hang and enjoy. Don't put it under the bed for fear of breaking it."

Along with his wife Marilyn, Werner follows his own advice. The couple own around 500 plates, over 200 of which dot the walls of their Tustin home.

The Werners purchased their first plate, "Kerner's Farm" by Andrew Wyeth, in about 1968 or 69 in a Big Bear antique shop, recalled Marilyn.

"It was $50, and I said, 'That's so much money.' But Tom really liked it," she said.

Visits to the antique shop became more frequent, Marilyn continued, and "Tom's interest in plates just grew and grew."

It grew so much, in fact, that last May Werner quit his job of 16 years as vice president and general manager of Remex in Irvine and opened up his shop in San Clemente.

According to his wife, Werner graduated from Annapolis with Jimmy Carter's class. After serving five years in the Navy, he spent the next 26 working on the business side of the electronic computer industry.

"Tom was putting in 18-and 19-hour days. There was so much pressure," she said.

Marilyn admitted she experienced moments of trepidation due to their impending change of life-style.

"We are both 52 years old, and we have invested most of our savings in this shop."

BEAUTY TODAY

Wintry Weather Chaps Skin, Hair

(Editor's Note: Orange County cosmetologist Steve Eisenbeiss will answer beauty questions mailed to The Register, Box 11626, Santa Ana 92711.)

By STEVE EISENBEISS

Does winter weather cause as much damage to your skin and hair as the summer months?

Definitely!

You may love winter, but your skin and hair never will. Winter winds and freezing temperatures can rob them of their natural oils. This is why you should line up special cold-weather products and plan on giving your hair and skin more protection than ever. Southern California winters are mild compared to back East, but don't overlook the cold days we do have. Be prepared.

Q: Can you get sunburned on a cold winter day when it is overcast and gray?

Debby,
Costa Mesa

A: The haze and cold are deceiving even on the grayest winter day. At least half the sun's burning, ultraviolet rays can penetrate the clouds.

When skiing, you are at altitudes where the air is a lot thinner and you are closer to the sun. Also, ice and snow reflect sun as much as beach sand and water do.

Take extra precautions – if your skin needs a sun-block in the summer, it needs it just as much in the winter. Watch out for windburn too, it can be worse than a sunburn; especially if you are skiing and tobogganing.

Q: Does the winter wind speed up the evaporation from the skin?

Christie
Corona del Mar

A: When there's a cold winter wind blowing, it robs the moisture from the skin fast. Just taking a walk on a cold windy day can give you a case of windburn.

The trick is to put on lots of moisturizer, wait awhile, blot it with a tissue and then apply your make-up. You can change your make-up to use a creamier type of foundation and blusher.

Q: What can I do to protect my hair during the winter?

Sue
Santa Ana

A: Hair needs protection too against dryness.

If your hair is long, count on more problems because you have more hair exposed to the wind and cold. You may have more winter frizzies because it takes longer for the oil to move down your shaft to the ends.

Use a conditioner on your hair every day when you are up in the mountains. If you can, wear a hat or scarf to protect your hair. When your scalp is warm, the blood circulates and your hair roots get their proper supply of nutrients to keep them healthy.

Q: What makes hair brittle ans stiff?

Jan
Newport

A: There is water in the molecules found in the hair shaft, and when it gets chilled in cold weather, your hair gets brittle and stiff. Once it's buffeted by cold wind, you end up with chapped hair.

OUR CHILDREN

Grandpa May Need The Direct Approach

By DR. WILLARD ABRAHAM
Copley News Service

Q. Grandparents can be a pain in the neck! Do you think that's a cruel thing to say?

I feel so strongly about it that if I don't talk it out at least a little I think I'll explode.

In this case it's not a mother or mother-in-law relationship, but my father who is tying my family in knots.

He butts into everything – what we feed our children, their sleeping habits, what they wear, what TV they watch, how they choose their friends. You name it – he has an opinion, and expresses it again and again.

I love my father, but this situation just cannot continue.

A. And it shouldn't either. A direct approach accompanied by other activities to occupy his time may be the way to go.

Your telling him how you feel plus a direct effort to help him get occupied in hobbies, work or friends may get him off your back.

Family relationships and the many years of accumulated reasons for them are often very complicated for older people.

As it usually is with all of us, we are often the least realistic in seeing ourselves as we really are and recognizing what we do to other people.

Your father needs your suggestions, lovingly offered.

Q. Our eldest child is certainly not our brightest one, and yet I've read a number of times about the firstborn being the smartest.

Is that true – or is the research wrong?

A. Perhaps the research is correct, but misinterpreted.

It doesn't necessarily mean that all firstborns are brighter than their younger siblings. The tendency may be there, or seem to exist, because the eldest is an only child for a time and often receives more attention, conversation and privileges from parents.

Any statement that starts out with the words "all children" is bound to be erroneous. Generalizations about human beings just have too many exceptions to be taken at face value.

'Advances' Can Be Hazardous To Your Job

By ANN KOLSON
Knight News Wire

PHILADELPHIA – Melissa Wolth had finally gotten her dream job. Young and pretty, she was on her way.

Then, the dream became a nightmare.

First there was the friendly pat on the knee from her boss that quickly progressed to surprise hugs, unwanted kisses, constant sexual inuendos, lewd remarks and altogether unwelcome attentions. Wherever she went – down the hall, into the lab or out on field trips, he was there.

She politely rejected him and kept her distance. He became angry and offended.

She dressed dowdily and kept conversation to a minimum. He gave her a bad work report – "Unfriendly personality," it said.

After 18 months of what the unemployment compensation board decision later termed "abuse and personal indignities," she knew that she had to quit. She has been unemployed ever since, more than a year now.

Ms. Wolth is still shaken by the experience; she goes over it again and again in her mind. "There is a lot of pain and suffering caused by sexual harassment on the job," she says, "and it goes on every day."

A large majority of working women – the best estimate from the few surveys done is about 75 per cent – have experienced sexual harassment on the job – in the steno pools on assembly lines or at executive offices. Even if a woman is not fired, demoted, held back from advancement or forced to quit, an office Lothario can make the work day uncomfortable or humiliating, especially if that Lothario happens to be the boss.

Tales abound of women afraid to be alone with their bosses, of pinching and grabbing in an empty supply room, of threats, both implied and stated, of appraisals of breast and derriers and of propositions, both outright and maneuvered.

To avoid these advances, some women will go to great lengths to signal their unavailability. They may dress down, or in severely tailored clothes, wear wedding bands, invent boyfriends, or just act plain unfriendly. But the subterfuge can cause almost as much stress and anxiety as the harassment. "It became easier and easier to monitor my behavior, dress and personality," one single office worker says, "but after 5 p.m. it became harder and harder to unwind with men I might want to attract. I began to feel amost schizophrenic."

Traveling can pose other problems for the working woman. Andra Prill, a young, attractive public relations executive for a national Philadelphia-based corporation, now tries to arrange all her trips alone. She'd rather have company, but found that a friendly dinner with a coworker out of town often turned into a sexual duel. "One man," she recalls, "not one to take no for answer, pounded on my door at 2 a.m. Another arranged for adjoining rooms."

When she must travel with men, it's one drink at dinner – just one – and then up to her room before 11 p.m. "It's really not fair,' she complains, "that I'm the only one who must watch my behavior. I don't always feel like being in my hotel room at 10:30 p.m., but when I'm on the road, that's the way it is."

In the past, women would not speak out about this problem, for many reasons. Most women who have encountered this have not even discussed it with other women.

Embarrassed and guilty, they often feel isolated and alone not knowing if other women at work are receiving the same come-ons. As in rape or wife abuse, the victim, Joanne Bykofsky of the Pennsylvania Human Relations Commission says, "always feels that deep down she is somewhat responsible for what happened."

One woman kicked a habitual fanny-patter right in the shins, she said, but most women handle these situations politely.

"It's so hard for a young woman," Ellen Greene says. "They were trained to be pleasing to men...to be compliant and polite. And they want to keep their job."

"If you yell and scream you look like an idiot," Jane Rabin says, "and if you ignore the men, they says, 'Oh, she's a cold bitch.'"

A seemingly logical step is to take the problem to the offender's boss, usually a man, as well.

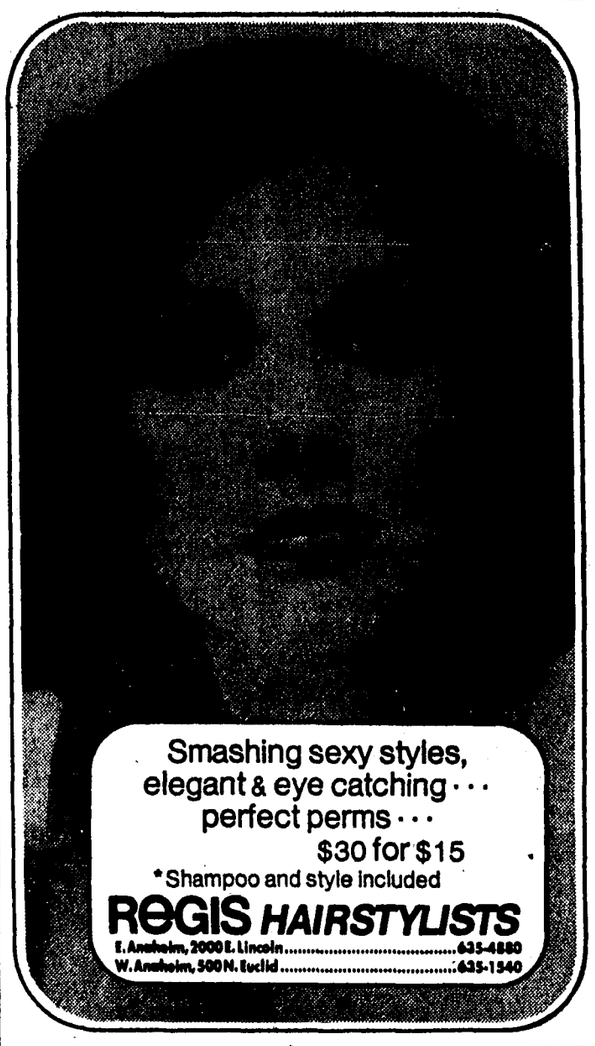
Andra Prill finally complained to her supervisor about an executive who made suggestive comments, lewd suggestions and grabbed her breast on several occasions. The supervisor said he would handle it right away. Several minutes later, she saw the executive and her supervisor laughing together in the executive's office like conspiring schoolboys. So much for that.

In Melissa Wolth's case, she went to the personnel office to complain. "I couldn't confront him (her boss) directly," she says. "I felt it would do no good. I was afraid to put anything in writing, that it would be held against me. I was afraid he'd blacklist me somehow and I'd never get another job in my field."

The personnel people told her there was nothing they could do. Normally, they would transfer someone to another department in this situation, they told her, but since her job was so specialized, there was no other place to transfer her.

Not all women, of course, find these attentions unwanted. Some are flattered. Some even expect it; it makes the days exciting or makes the women feel desirable. And the casting couch syndrome does still exist, along with the expectation that sexual favors can launch careers, both in the movies and at the office.

In a 1976 Redbook magazine survey, 15 per cent of the respondents said that office advances were flattering, while 59 per cent termed them "embarrassing" or "demeaning."



With the realization that harassment is a real and often unfortunate fact in a working woman's life, some groups are taking action. The Screen Actors Guild set up a morals complaint bureau, and wrote into its contract a prohibition against conducting interviews outside the office.

"I think industry has a responsibility to correct the attitude of most men," Melissa Wolth says. "They need to raise consciousness. Men don't understand what women find offensive; they should understand what kind of things invade women's privacy and what kind of things are abusive."

Most men, the women interviewed pointed out, can't understand the guilt that most women feel – one reason why none would allow their real names to be used.

WEDDINGS

Ruhl-Flores

David Flores claimed Debra Diane Ruhl as his bride Saturday, Jan. 8, in ceremonies performed in Buena Park Community Church.

A reception in the Hawaiian Gardens Lion's Club followed the exchange of vows between the daughter of the Harold Ruhls of Garden Grove, and the son of Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Flores Jr. of Cerritos.

The bride's gown of white polyester chiffon lined with bridal satin was trimmed with alencon lace and featured floral appliques and a chapel train. Seed pearl appliques embellished the bodice and venise lace tiara which confined her tiered elbow-length veil edged with matching lace. Her flowers were burgundy roses, pink baby roses and baby's breath with a white orchid.

Pamela Ruhl was maid of honor, and Robert Gutierrez served as best man. Bridesmaid was Cecilia Flores, and ushers included David Ruhl and Paul Serao. Gilbert Flores also participated.

The newlyweds will live in Cypress.

St. Paul-Diersing

St. Justin Martyr Church, Anaheim, was the setting for the Saturday, Jan. 8, Nuptial Mass and reception of Marianne St. Paul and Paul Robert Diersing. The Rev. Timothy German was officiant.

Parents of the newlyweds are Mr. and Mrs. Robert St. Paul and the Robert Diersings, all of Anaheim.

The bride's gown and train were fashioned of ivory satin and antique lace, and her tiered fingertip-length veil was edged with scalloped lace and confined by a crown adorned with seed pearls. She carried a bouquet of baby roses, apricot and white stephanotis and baby's breath.

Nancy St. Paul was maid of honor for her sister, and Albert Centeno performed the duties of best man. Bridesmaids were Kathy Steward, Kathy Clark and Kathy Lynch, and guests were seated by Bob St. Paul, Harry Okula and Steve Diersing, brother of the bridegroom.

The new Mr. and Mrs. Diersing will make their home in Anaheim after a honeymoon at Mammoth Lakes.

Carey-Broussard

The Rev. Charles L. Rose heard the marriage promises of Miss Joan Ellen Carey of Weisbaden, Germany, and Dwight Ole Broussard, son of the Wallace Broussards of Lafayette, La., Saturday, Jan. 8, in Waverly Church, Santa Ana.

Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Penman of Orange, parents of the bride, hosted a reception in their home following the ceremony.

The bride was attired in a gown of chiffon over taffeta trimmed with rows of lace flowers and a ruffled neckline. Her 12-foot veil was attached to a floral headpiece of pink and white organdy, and her flowers were white roses, baby's breath and stephanotis.

The former Kathy Marie Meador, daughter of the Oscar Meadors of Stanton, was attired in a gown and chapel train of dacron polyester organza with French chantilly lace. Her matching fingertip-length veil was adorned with seed pearls, and her flowers were peach carnations, miniature white roses and baby's breath.

A honeymoon in San Luis Obispo followed the wedding and reception in Cameo Wedding Chapel, Anaheim. The newlyweds will reside in Cypress.

The bride is the daughter of Reva Hackett of Cypress, and her husband's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Adams of Garden Grove.

Honor attendants were Deanna Williams and Dan Spears. Others in the wedding party were Linda Butcher, Cindy Certain and Kerry Thompson, bridesmaids; Judy Williams, junior bridesmaid; Craig Robinson, John Lazar, Bill Runion and Bob Laverty, ushers; and Eric Williams, ring bearer.

The bride designed her gown of ivory satin and silk organza trimmed with French reembroidered lace. A matching lace headpiece held her fingertip-length veil which was trimmed with the same lace, and her bouquet was made up of ivy, cymbidium orchids, white roses, stephanotis and baby's breath.

Florida English Students Consider 'The Inevitable'

By RICK RATLIFF
Knight News Wire

MIAMI – She couldn't look. Not until 16-year-old Susan Strauss saw the rest of her high school class watching morticians embalming a body could she turn to face it herself.

"I was prepared for something really bad, really gross," recalls Strauss of that field trip to a funeral home. But it wasn't so bad, she decided, even though at one point an embalmer dropped the dead man's head.

"It went bang on the table," she says, "and I realized, since he was a dead person, he had no feelings."

Susan Strauss is a student in an elective English course at Miami Beach Senior High School called "Attitudes Toward Death."

Designed to consider the inevitable through literature and student research, the course has been part of school curriculum for two years.

Death is a topic that only recently has been considered appropriate for classroom study. The first courses were offered in universities and colleges.

Several Miami Beach High School teachers – like high school teachers in other parts of the nation – became aware of these college-level developments and decided to offer similar courses for high school students.

Ricki Weyhe, 37, a Miami Beach English teacher, helped draw up a proposal for the course and discussed it with language arts teachers throughout the system before instituting it at the school.

Margaret Dinn, language arts consultant for the school system, was apprehensive when she first heard of the proposal.

"I had misgivings, myself," she says, "perhaps because I don't accept death in a very mature manner." But she realized death bombards students – through the news media and in their own lives. "It is very much a fact of life," she says.

A fact of life it is, but a sensitive one for many, so the course is one of few in the school system requiring written parental permission.

"This takes care of religious and moral concerns," says Dinn. Otherwise, parents, fearful of the impact such a course could have on the religious convictions of their children, might protest their involvement.

So far, Rita Gold, 27, who also teaches the course, says she has found students with strong religious beliefs have less difficulty than others in dealing with the "fear of the unknown" thoughts death can evoke.

What prompted interest in the course, Gold says, is the fact that death is something everyone will experience, but which some misunderstand and others are afraid to face at all.

"In this class," she says, "students can release tensions and fears."

Some students in one of Gold's classes say they have never known the loss of a relative or close friend.

"Last year, as a sophomore, I was afraid about death a lot," says Angie Miranda, 16. "I have never experienced death in my family ... I had never been to a funeral.

"But I did a report on funerals (for the class), and now I feel better," she says, although, "I never think about myself dying."

Oral and written reports on death are an important part of the course, Gold says, and topics range from abortion and euthanasia to hari-kari and capital punishment.

Howard Purcell, 17, says he "always wanted to believe there was life after death. I did an oral presentation about reincarnation ... and it made me believe. It makes you think."

Purcell says one reason he decided to take the course involved the death of his grandfather, a man who had been like a father since his parents divorced.

Because the course is taught through the English department, students also study writings about death.

They read poems on the subject by Dylan Thomas and John Donne. They discuss what famous people have said about death.

And, they complete questionnaires to help them realize the extent of their own understanding of death. They talk about their experiences with family deaths, whether they have ever considered suicide, and what funeral arrangements they would prefer.

The course includes a trip to a mortuary to watch an embalming – an optional event about two-thirds of every class attends, Gold estimates.

Sometimes, death occurs while the course is under way.

"Last year, in the middle of the course, an announcement came over the public address that a kid had died from lightning at Columbus High," says Gold. The class discussed it.

"It brought them closer to the fact that death could strike youth as well."

Some students in the class say they are not frightened by the prospect of dying.

"I'm not scared of death," says Gene Gatti, 16. "I have experienced it." Gatti says his father died of a heart attack at age 44 and a sister was killed in an auto accident at age four.

The class has exposed him to different persons' attitudes on the subject, he says, but hasn't changed his own.

"I'll probably turn chicken when the day comes," he says. "But right now, I'm not scared."

OVULOMETER – It looks simple to use, and it is. It's an Ovulometer, and if proven reliable, it could make birth control pills obsolete. Developed by Russell Bullock of Las Vegas, the Ovulometer measures electrical current in the body. Bullock claims rising readings can tell women when they are preparing for ovulation, thus the device can be used in family planning.

Modern Medieval Living

By MAURA HENNESSY
For AP Newsfeatures

STORRS, Conn. (AP) – Dust off your coat of arms, call up your favorite wench and break open a bottle of mead.

The 10-year-old Society for Creative Anachronism (SCA) is reviving those dark ages of the past – the Middle Ages.

But the revival doesn't embrace all aspects of the Middle Ages, said member Jeffrey A. DeLuca of Willimantic, Conn. There is no religious persecution, no famine and "we try not to spread the plague."

"Chivalry with indoor plumbing" is how one member of the University of Connecticut branch described the current Middle Ages.

The SCA, begun in 1966 in California, now has about 3,000 members in 35 chapters.

The annual Pentathlon of Arts has five categories of competition and guilds for wizards, cooks, exotic dancers and archers, DeLuca said. The next Pentathlon will be held early this year,probably in Philadelphia.

The SCA values chivalry and expects all members to behave like gentlewomen and gentlemen, he said. Royalty and "revolting barbarians" alike are called "gentles," he added.

Medieval clothes are required at SCA events, said 21-year-old Susan R. Tallmadge of Hartford, Conn. But she said gentles don't refer to them as "costumes" because they aren't just pretending to be medieval people – they really are medieval people.

John L. Leland, a knight who is also a Ph.D. candidate in medieval studies at Yale, said each gentle picks a pre-1650 identity, with a name, skill and appropriate clothing.

The identities may not be lifted directly from history or fiction. But a fan of Ivan the Terrible could choose to be called Ivan the Temperamental.

Of course, not many gentles choose to be serfs. "You have more fun as a Lord," said Leland, or Count Sir Jehan de la Marche.

The SCA is not invulnerable to modern movements such as women's liberation. To keep its tax-exempt status, the SCA must allow women to joust with male contenders for the throne. Could a woman become king? "Unequivocally maybe," Leland said.

The SCA holds jousting tournaments – so far without horses – and craft fairs and revels, or medieval merrymaking.

After most events, gentles gather for feasts, which include fermented milk, fermented honey (mead), and trenchers: flat, rounds of bread used to eat other foods from before they are eaten.

The SCA also has wars between its various kingdoms. The East Kingdom fights an annual war with the Middle Kingdom over the Barony-Marche of the Debatable Lands, or Pittsburgh, DeLuca said.

The loser gets Pittsburgh.

Meet Amy's Dad

Amy and her father at the lemonade stand she operated this past summer. Like Amy, Jimmy Carter liked to make money when he was growing up. He used to sell peanuts on the streets of Plains.

Jimmy Carter was born on October 1, 1924, on a Georgia farm.

Young Carter went to school in Plains. He later went to the U.S. Naval Academy where he learned to be a scientist and engineer.

He left the Navy to come home and run the family peanut and farm supply business. He became very rich.

He ran for governor and lost. He ran again and won.

His younger brother, Billy, is his business partner. Billy also operates a filling station in Plains.

His mother, Mrs. Lillian Carter, is an unusual person. At the age of 68 she joined the Peace Corps and served as a nurse in India for a few years.

President-elect Carter has two sisters. Gloria is an artist and art teacher. She likes to ride motorcycles.

Sister Ruth is an evangelist (a religious teacher and speaker). Jimmy Carter is very religious, too. He goes to the Baptist church and teaches Sunday school.

For Parents 'n Teachers

To Keep You Posted: This Mini Page is especially designed to be used as a poster. This block is a guide to this week's issue.

Page 1: Discuss what it would be like to have the President's daughter in your school. How would you treat any new person coming into your room? Discuss how Amy might feel, coming from a small town to a big city. Talk about how a city school would be different from a country school. Talk about how life will be different for her. Discuss what the word "extended" means. Does your school have an extended day program? Talk about what the advantages would be for the parents who work (The children can go home at 3 o'clock if they wish.)

Page 4: Meet Amy's Dad: The Peace Corps is made up of volunteers who work to help people in foreign countries. It is an agency of the U.S. Government.

The First Family-to-be!

The Carter family-seated, Rosalynn, President-elect Carter, Jeff and Annette. Amy is on the floor. Back row: Chip and Caron, Jack and Judy with their son, Jason.

All the Carter family worked very hard to get their man elected. They often split up and traveled around the country, making speeches and meeting people.

Rosalynn Carter was brought up in a poor family. Her father died when she was 13 years old. Her mother took in sewing and worked at the post office to raise money to support her four children.

Rosalynn helps her husband a lot. She is his closest friend and advisor. At one time, she was a bookkeeper for the family peanut business.

The Carters have three sons.

Jack is the oldest. He is a lawyer who practices with his father-in-law in Calhoun, Georgia. His wife, Judy, is a teacher. They have one son, Jason.

Chip helps run the family peanut business. He has been elected to the City Council of Plains. His wife, Caron, taught a first grade class in Plains.

Jeff is the youngest son. When he was not campaigning, he went to college in Atlanta, Georgia. He was studying to become a city planner. His wife, Annette, is a decorator.

Amy is much younger than her brothers. You'll be reading a lot about her.

The One Closest to the White House!

A Visit To Amy's New School!

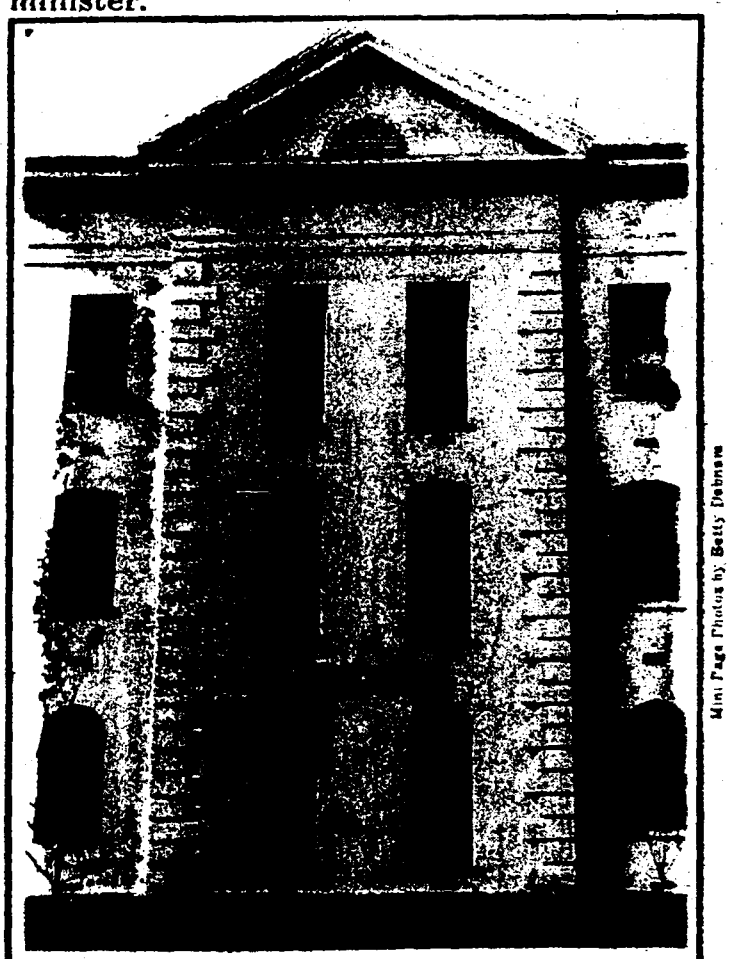
Amy's classmates — Since Amy is a fourth grader, these children will be her classmates. The teacher is Mrs. Verona Meeder who has been teaching at Stevens for the past 10 years. Her husband is a Methodist minister.

The Mini Page visited Stevens Elementary School in November, just after Carter had won the election.

The kids were excited. So were the teachers and the principal.

The school had voted for Carter in a mock election held just before the real thing.

But that was not the reason for all the excitement.



During the campaign, Jimmy Carter promised that, if elected, he would send daughter Amy to a public school in Washington.

Stevens School is the closest one to the White House.

For the past 70 years, Presidents have been sending their children to private schools.

"How would you treat Amy Carter?" we asked one student.

Amy's school — Stevens is over 100 years old. It was the first public school for blacks to be built in Washington, D.C. It was named for Congressman Thaddeus Stevens who fought against slavery.

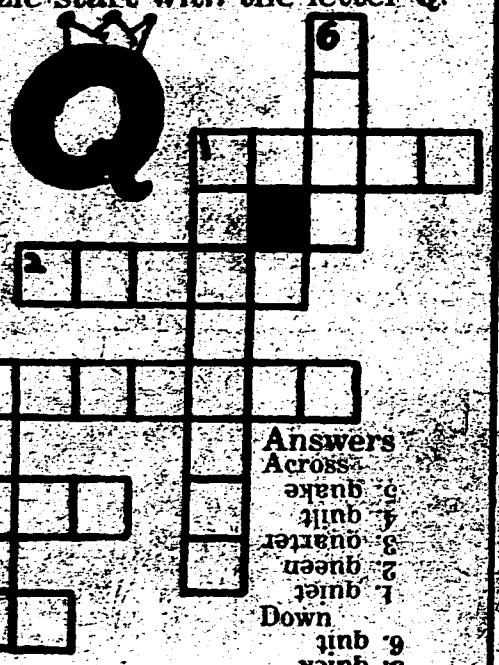
Ballet lessons — Stevens has an extended day program. Kids can stay until 5 o'clock every day and take extra classes in ballet, photography, cooking and other interesting courses.



Amy's principal —"We feel that we have good things to offer Amy. She would contribute a lot to our school," said Mrs. Lydia Williams.

Amy's classroom — The rooms at Stevens are bright, sunny and neat. There are 10 boys and 20 girls in Mrs. Meeder's third and fourth grade combination.

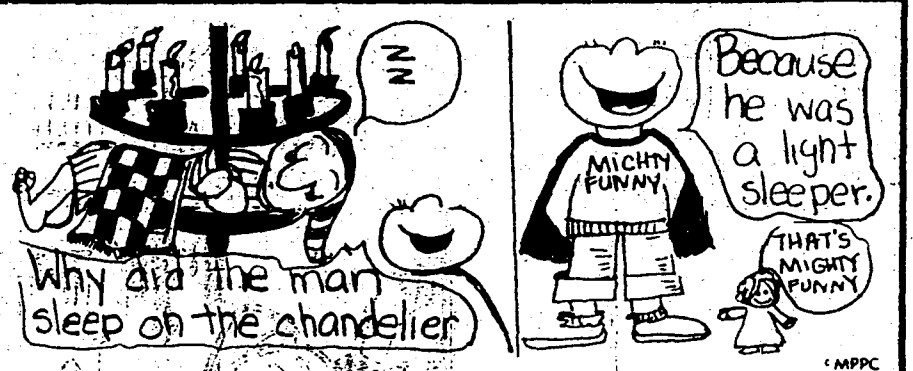
Super Sport: Paul Westphal

The Phoenix Suns shine brighter with Paul Westphal in the lineup.

The 6-foot, 4-inch guard is one of the best backcourt players in pro-basketball.

He is an excellent ball-handler and shooter. Last season Paul made 51 percent of his field goal attempts.

Before joining the Suns, Paul was a "super sub" with the Boston Celtics.



Paul grew up in Southern California and learned to play basketball through hard practice in the backyard. His brother, who is now a college coach, taught him the game.

Paul also likes to shoot pool, play tennis and volleyball.

Natural History Museum In Temporary Quarters

SANTA ANA – Orange County's rich paleontological and geological history is the focal point of a new museum concept, launched three years ago and presently given substance through the use of temporary quarters in a school here.

The Natural History Foundation of Orange County, with headquarters at 2531 Orchard Drive, Santa Ana. is a nonprofit organization presently staffed by volunteers. The primary goals of the group are to protect county sites for future scientific study, to preserve natural and prehistoric specimens which are in danger of destruction in areas of rapid of development and to develop education programs about Orange County's rich natural history.

The museum is temporarily located in Bayview Elementary School on Orchard Drive, overlooking Newport Beach Bay. The museum presently has two display rooms. Orange County Indians (room 10) features Indian artifacts and thirteen dioramas of local Indian activity.

Orange County Fossils (room 11) contains specimens from throughout the county. Fossils, salvaged from recent land developments, include bison, camel, horse, and mammoth bones as well as marine invertebrates and petrified wood.

According to Laurie Engstrom, director of the museums:

"The tide pools and beaches along our coast were rich sources of food for the Indians. They would come to the beach to relax and gather a wide variety of shell fish to eat. They collected clams, mussels, sea urchins and even abalone. The food was eaten raw, cooked, or dried for future use away from the coast.

"Apparently each tribe had its own stretch of beach. They would take care that there were always enough shellfish left to insure a supply for next year. Indians were good conservationists.

"They knew of the deadly poisonous "red tide" – when shellfish cannot be eaten – and would post sentinals along the beach to warn unwary gatherers.

"The shores of Newport Bay, and at dozens of localities along our coastline, you may see ancient Indian 'middens.' These are either villages sites or places where Indians cleaned seafood. The ground is black or dark brown and includes thousands of tiny pieces of white shell."

Museum hours are Friday, during the school year, from 10 a.m. to noon, and the first and third Saturdays of every month. In January, the second and fourth Saturdays will be used. Group tours may be arranged by calling the museum.

Monthly programs about the natural history of Orange County include fossil digs, nature tours and lectures. Recently lectures included "How to prepare for Orange County's next earthquake," and "Mines and Minerals from Orange County." The lectures are open to the public but fossil digs are available only

TRAVELS IN THE USSR

Leningrad Bustling, Big City

By GARY LYCAN
Register Staff Writer
Second In Series

Lunch at Vyborg, 1 1/2 miles inside Russia from the Finnish border, is not like your typical stop at a Bobs Big Boy. It was uniquely Russian: hard bread, cabbage, a selection of meat or fish off a platter (it would have been hard to tell them apart had it not been for the toughness of the beef); beer or mineral water, and the best for last; ice cream. It was a bland meal, but filling.

We decided, however, that the Russians are either very tidy at the eating table or are in the midst of a paper shortage. Our napkins were the size of G-strings. Anyone who slurps soup a lot would be in big trouble. We would have asked our Russian Intourist guide Lena for an explanation but demurred, figuring this was the first day of an eight-day bus tour across Russia and there was ample time to clue us in on Soviet etiquette.

Our Gateway Holidays bus came off the assembly line in 1976, but even it had trouble taking the bumps along back country roads that reminded me of those one-lane auto trails leading into Orange County 40 years ago. Someone remarked that the roads haven't changed since the Germans rolled down them 30 years ago. That's probably true. Just ask anyone who sat in the back of the bus.

The journey to Leningrad takes only a few hours, but it allows our tour guide Andrew to exchange pleasantries with Lena, a polite attractive Leningrad university student who has never visited the United States, but as a Soviet Union Intourist guide takes advantage of the opportunity to brush up on her English. She gave us her version of two-paragraph primer on the Soviet Union:

The USSR is 8 1/2 million square miles, roughly 2 1/2 times the size of the United States. Within its boundaries is one-sixth of the earth's land area; it extends over two continents – Europe and Asia – and eleven time zones. The Soviet Union population; 234 million.

Leningrad and Moscow are the showcase cities, clean and beautiful; but beyond them is another Russia, a land of peasants, farms, forests, home to more than 100 different nationalities and ethnic groups. The Cyrllic alphabet is the official langauge, but there are more than a dozen regional languages. Broad slow rivers flow through enormous plains, providing life-giving moisture. Monumental churches stubbornly resist centuries of wear to take in the aging men and women who, unlike a younger generation, still flock faithfully to places of worship.

Bus tours through the region only began in 1970, a fact evident when you pass by so much through territory, through villages with shack like homes sagging on each side, into cities like Novogorod, Smolensk and Minsk which have been rebuilt from the devastation

Horses Need Foster Homes

BY SANDI MOSLEY
Register Staff Writer

Roundups of free-roaming mustangs began five months ago near Susanville in northern California, and the federal government is looking for "foster homes" for about 100 wild horses to be captured by mid-1977.

Most American mustangs roam the plains of Nevada, but California has an estimated 5,267, nearly 10 per cent of all those believed to live in the wild, according to a new federal Interior Department report.

About 1,800 mustangs have been placed in private stables from the first roundups three years ago through mid-December 1976, Bob Springer, Interior Department bureau of land management spokesman, recently wrote.

Officials of the Pacific Coast chapter of the American Mustang Association, headquartered until last year in Orange County, maintain about half of those that have been domesticated are stabled now in Southern California.

As 1976 closed, the bureau of land management made its second report to Congress since the Wild-Roaming Horse and Burro Act was passed Dec. 15, 1971. And it shows 1976 was a good year for the mustang:

– The number of homes found for captured mustangs nearly doubled in the one year to equal all those found in the two previous years.

– The U. S. Supreme Court in June upheld the constitutionality of the six-year-old law that made the mustang a protected species under the control of the federal government.

– Pleased with public acceptance of the old "maintenance agreements" allowing horsemen to own mustangs, the bureau of land management created the "Adopt-A-Horse" program last May to stimulate more interest in mustang adoptions. The program is hoped to find 4,000 homes a year for mustangs.

– Protection efforts in the past six years have been so successful, the mustangs are no longer threatened with extinction, and, in fact, now threaten to overpopulate their ranges.

The report claims as many as two million mustangs, descendants of Spanish horses brought here in the South American conquests of the 16th century, roamed free by the end of the 1800s.

By 1971, their numbers had dropped to an estimated 17,000, the report says. In 1974, the last wild horse census, the bureau estimated here were 45,200; the 1976 census estimated 56,335 roaming 10 western states.

Two national "wild horse ranges" have been established "to preserve these living symbols of America's western heritage," according to the report. An 394,000-acre range is on Nellis Air Force Base in Nevada. An additional 34,000 acres are set aside in the Pryor mountain range in Montana and Wyoming, and a third range of 27,000 acres is being considered in Colorado, according to the report.

Roundups are held periodically on the ranges and other federal, state and privately owned land where the mustangs find refuge "to keep the herds in balance with the food supply," the report says.

The bureau of land management and a private group called Wild Horse Organized Assistance League (WHOA) screen applications for "foster homes."

(Contact Dawn Lappin, adoption director for WHOA, at P.O. Box 555, Reno, Nev. 89504, or the federal "Adopt-A-Horse Program, bureau of land management, 18th and C streets NW, Washington, D. C. 20

The federal government retains ownership of the animals, and they cannot be sold or given away with written permission from the bureau of land management. They also cannot be used for any commercial purpose, but any foals become property of the "foster" parent.

"The government does not want the horses back," said Mrs. Lappin. "They would only take the horses if they were not being cared for, and in most cases a warning is given to those that are not properly caring for the horses."

WHOA prefers prospective owners keep the horses on their own land, in a corral no smaller than 20 feet by 20 feet, with at least a three-sided shelter, but mustangs can be kept in a commercial stable if the owner gives his written permission.

The horses are given at no cost, but they must be picked up at the roundup site.

The report admits the requirements – many sought by WHOA "to close all loopholes for those with less-than-honorable intentions" – are restrictive and, with the costs of transporting them, may inhibit adoptions.

But the 1971 law calls for "humane destruction of excess animals," and proposed range management programs – setting limits on the number of horses that a range can support – will make as many as 10,000 animals "excess" a year.

"Shooting is considered a last resort," the report says.

Guatemala City, Antigua Offer Much For Visitors

By ANN TERRILL

Antigua is the most historic city in Guatemala and one of the most famous on the Central American part of the continent.

Guatemala is a high, mountainous country. The continental divide is 9,200 feet high as it traverses Guatemalan soil. But Antigua is situated on a fertile plain surrounded by high mountains, one of which, a volcano, was responsible for removing the seat of government from Antigua in 1773 to Guatemala City, which was considered safer then.

The historic city is colonial Spanish in style, and during the February 1976 earthquake suffered considerable damage. We were supposed to journey there from Lake Atitlan in time for lunch one day, but for some reason, the schedule was abruptly changed and we didn't enter Antigua with its ruined churches and wide cobbled streets until nearly dark.

The Spanish arrived in Guatemala in 1524. Their commanders were looking for gold, which they did not find. But this didn't deter them from occupying the area and building cities, converting the Indians and in general setting up arrangements for export of native produces.

Antigua was the capital city until the disastrous earthquake of 1773, which was followed by a flood when the crater walls of the volcano cracked open and spilled tons of accumulated water on the city below.

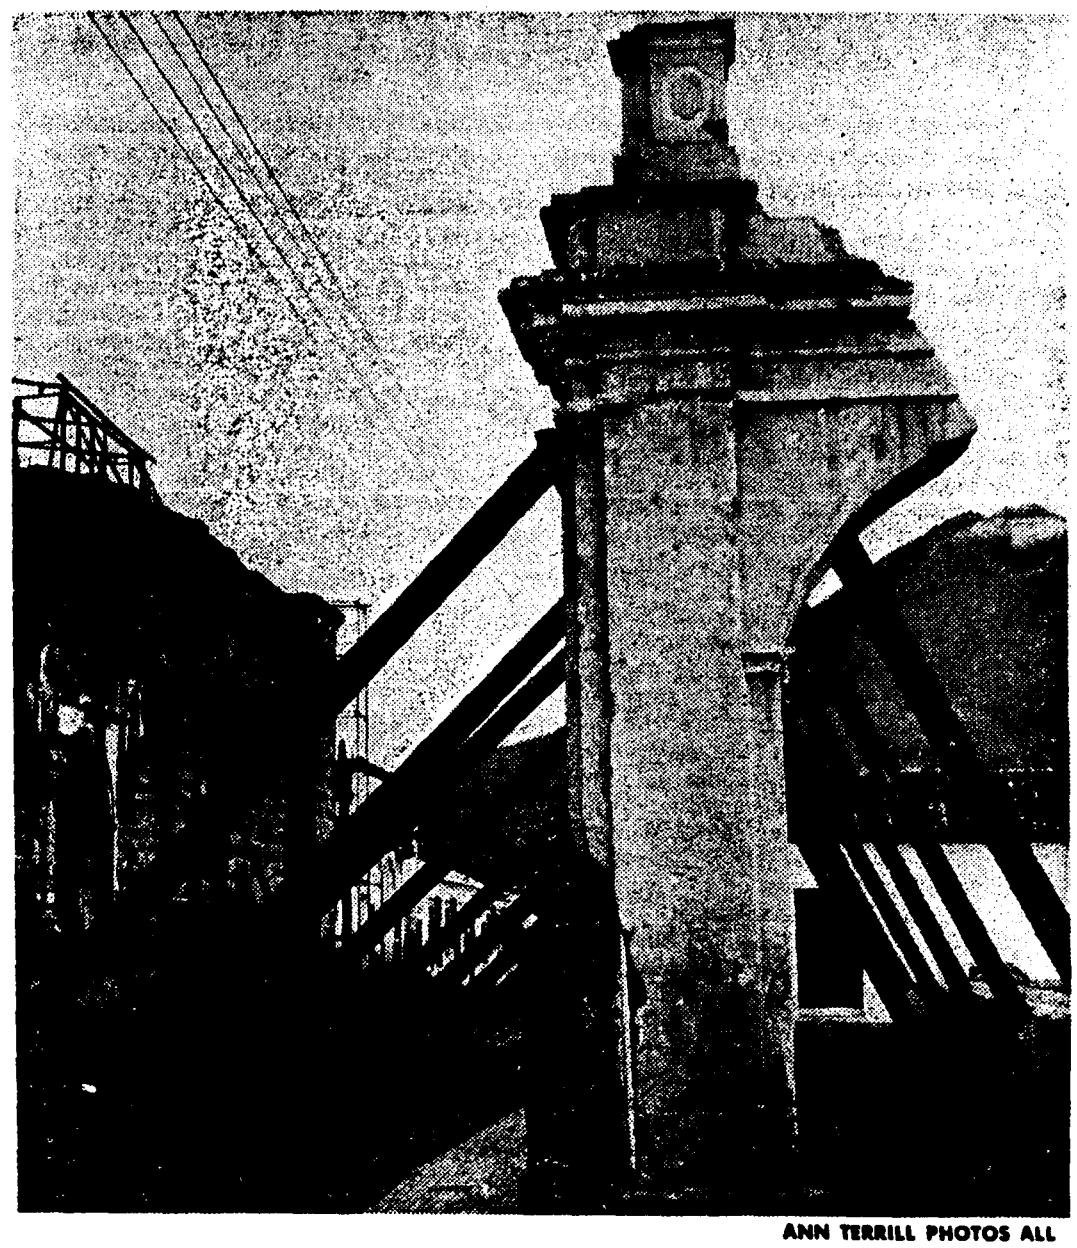
Churches ruined by the earthquake 200 years ago have never been quite restored. Consequently, in the 1976 earthquake more damage was done than might have otherwise been.

The treasures of Antiguan churches were taken to Guatemala City, about an hour by highway, and put into the Mercy Church, a cathedral-like edifice built in 1773 to hold the treasures of Antigua.

But an earlier church exists in Guatemala City, dating from 1620. The 1773 earthquake dealt it a bad blow. But restorations took place and in 1917 a new chapel was built. In 1976 the old church was nearly leveled once more and today it stands on a high hill in the city center, a monument to one John Corco, who brought the statue of the virgin, and built the church to her honor. The name is Serro Del Carmen.

Farms were near the hill in those days, and it was known as the place of the cows.

On January 1, 1776, Guatemala City was officially founded, and a park today marks the historic spot.



Many reminders of the nation's Spanish past are to be found in Guatemala City. An old Spanish fort is now a military museum, and the old Spanish aqueduct is an attention getter.

The city has many ball parks and sports-oriented facilities, and Guatemalans are recreation-minded.

It is a reminder of the Mayan days when the ceremonial ball game was played with the winners occasionally being sacrificed. But since the Mayans believed in reincarnation, this was considered a great honor.

That same custom prevailed in similar monumental stone cities in central Mexico between Cuernavaca and Taxco, which means that the Mayan culture dominated the Indian societies of Central and North America, at least as far north as central Mexico, though Indians there do not adher to the ancient customs as much as do the Guatemalan Indians.

Because of the Mayan worship of the sun, which brings life, for example, all graveyards face west, toward the setting sun, and sun worship is still carried out in Guatemala.

AFTER THE EARTHQUAKE – This corner pillar of a 400 year old church is all that's left in Antigua, Guatemala's most fascinating and very colonial city. Extensive damage was done to some of the country's most priceless historical buildings and repair work is under way, as seen by the shoring timbers. Antiqua amounts to a national monument and the city is worth spending considerable time exploring. Ancient churches, broad avenues and stately homes abound, along with traditional colonial Spanish shops and market buildings.

Petrified Forest Weird, Wonderful

HOLBROOK, Ariz. – There is one place in Arizona where you can't carve your initials on a tree nor do you have to worry about a forest fire! It is the Petrified Forest National Park some 20 miles east of here.

In this Bicentennial era we have been conditioned to look back long ago to the time our country won its independence from England. This 200-year span is but a micro-second in the millions of years of geologic action it has taken to transform stately trees into beautiful pieces of stone logs.

Geologists will tell you that some 160 million years ago this part of Northern Arizona was a low plain, dotted by shifting streams and rivers.

They believe that trees of the pine family grew on hills as far away as a hundred miles to the west and southwest. Dead trees were carried down the hills by the rivers and streams to the lowland where they were buried under tons of mud and silt. Protection of the mud coating snuffed out the decaying action of oxygen.

Silica and other water-borne chemicals covered the tree cells replacing the wood fibers. Long before erosion set in the process had turned the logs to almost pure stone. The bright color patterns in yellow, red, green and brown were produced from small amounts of manganese oxide, iron and carbon.

Over millions of years, this area sank below sea level, was flooded, and then covered by many layers of new sediments. Later it was uplifted far above the sea. The petrified trees, entombed in layers of rock, heaved under these great pressures and cracked and broke into the large and small pieces you see today. In recent times, wind and water have carved away the sandstones and shales surrounding the logs, leaving them on the surface.

GUATEMALA CITY'S OLDEST CHURCH – These are the ruins of Arro Del Carmen, built in the area long before Guatemala City was actually founded. The church, which stands on a high hill with a commanding view of the city, has been destroyed several times by earthquakes. Repairs will be made on this historic edifice as Guatemala cleans up the rubble left from its most disastrous 1976 earthquake.

The best way to begin a tour of the Petrified Forest is to spend a little time at the visitor centers. They are located at both the north and south entrances to the park. Here you can pick up a map of the 94,000 acres of the park and browse around the museum. At the main visitor center just off U.S. 66 (I-40), a well-produced film is shown numerous times throughout the day. Gas stations, souvenir shops and restaurants are conveniently located near both entrances.

The Painted Desert at the northern entrance offers sweeping views from several overlooks along the rim and from the observation site on Kachina Point. Photographers should note that the best time to photograph the Painted Desert is at sunrise or sunset. The red hues of the sun paint the desert in such magnificence that one could easily believe he was on another planet.

The Painted Desert is one of the most spectacular sections of the Petrified Forest. It encompasses some 300 miles of vividly colored gullies, mesas and buttes.

The Petrified Forest is the greatest and most colorful concentration of petrified wood known in the world. There are six separate "Forests" where giant logs, some 250 feet in length, beautifully colored, lie prostrate on the ground.

A short drive from the Painted Desert brings you to the Puerco Indian Ruin. It was occupied about 600 years ago and probably contained 150 rooms enclosing a large courtyard. A few rooms have been excavated. Nearby is Newspaper Rock where prehistoric Indians pecked various petroglyphs into the surface of a massive sandstone block.

Moving along you pass some small peaks resembling teepees or haystacks showing erosion of soft, layered clay deposits. At the Blue Mesa you can observe how the petrified logs played a part in the constant renewal of the sculptured landscape. An excellent short trail takes you into this interesting area.

At Agate Bridge more than 100 feet of this famous log are exposed, but both ends are still encased in the sandstone in which the log was buried. At Jasper Forest Overlook great masses of log sections litter the valley floor and clog the gullies that cut into the edge of the mesa.

In Crystal Forest were once many fossil logs in which beautiful clear and amethyst quartz crystals filled the cracks and hollows. Collectors and souvenir hunters blasted many of the logs in search of these gems.

Massive remnants of a once continuous layer of durable sandstone can be seen at The Flattops. The road passes through a cleft separating the two main bodies of this surviving tableland.

The eastern part of Rainbow Forest is most notable for the number of exceptionally long logs, which are only partly uncovered. A partially restored pueblo, now called Agate House, is at the end of a short foot trail from the parking area.

Exhibits at Rainbow Forest and Giant Logs are designed to answer pertinent questions that visitors may have when arriving at or leaving the park. Behind the exhibit hall are Old Faithful Log and many exceedingly large logs. A picnic area is nearby.

Federal law prohibits removal of any petrified wood from the park, no matter how small the piece. A word of warning; if you violate this law, you will be subject to a fine or imprisonment or both. Park rangers thoroughly inspect cars leaving the area.

The forest is open all year but it is best to check on the hours during the winter months. The park has two entrances; the Painted Desert Visitor Center and Headquarters just off U.S. 66 (I-40) or the Rainbow Forest Entrance Station at the park boundary on U.S. 180. There are no overnight accommodations within the park. Lodging and restaurants are available in Holbrook about 20 miles west of the park.

Infamous French Town Quarters Girls' School

LACOSTE, France — Ever since Donatien Alphonse Francois, the Marquis de Sade, brought his crew of peppy teenagers here 200 years ago, Lacoste has been working up to its present fate.

The infamous Marquis, attempting to "educate" his charges and to entertain himself, founded his own "Woodstock" in his favorite boyhood home in southern France. It became the setting for unnumbered adventures, theatricals and orgies.

Apparently something about the place just beckoned to the inquiring mind.

Perhaps it was inevitable, then, that an educational institution like Sarah Lawrence College would discover the town's particular ambience. Since 1972 students enrolled in its summer visual arts program have descended upon this tiny medieval village for an education, although somewhat alien to that offered by the late Marquis.

In a semi-mountainous area of Provence not far from Avignon, Lacoste clings to a precipitous perch on a mountain top. Openly hostile to neighboring villages, it eyes them as the colleges known as the "Seven Sisters" have traditionally eyed each other.

The buffers between the villages are broad, flat, cultivated plains. They look today very much as they must have looked to medieval observers when, as the seat of Prostestantism in a sea of Catholicism, Lacoste and its chateau were repeatedly besieged.

Today, instead of marauding Crusaders, the siege consists of guitars, easels, bikinis and pick axes. In a one-hotel town like Lacoste, that constitutes a clear invasion.

Canvasses, paints and brushes are no surprise to the territory so frequented by the likes of Cezanne, Van Gogh and Picasso. But the Sarah Lawrence faculty has added some frills that increasingly entice students. One is college credit for what amounts to an archeological dig — the rebuilding of the sadistic marquis' chateau.

Bernard Pfriem, the American administrator of the project, has long owned choice Lacoste property. Some people refer to him as the first feudal lord of Lacoste after de Sade.

Pfriem winters in Bronxville, N.Y., at the main Sarah

of World War II but struggle to keep pace with 1976 technology. Tourism was a low priority item for years int he Soviet budget, but the 1980 Olympics are on the horizon and the times are changing. The cities are being spruced up in anticipation of more tourism. When you're hosting the Olympics, I suppose, it's all a matter of Gamesmanship.

Leningrad, however, is 400 miles northwest of Moscow. Olympic Games are not a prime topic as our bus approaches the outskirts of this island city resting on the banks of the Neva. It is easy to see why it is called a northern Venice. Western European influences are everywhere among the 100 islands and 600 bridges.

Czar Peter the Great started the construction of Leningrad on the Gulf of Finland in 1703. His goal was to bring Russia closer to the West by modeling the city after a Western capital and inviting Westerners to live here. The first building in Leningrad - Peter called the city St. Petersburg - was the Peter and Paul Fortress. It remains today as a popular walking and necking spot and contains a section of the Soviet mint.

Successive czars built a winter palace, the golden-domed St. Isaac's Cathedral, the enormous Admirality with a triumphal column that took 2,000 soldiers to raise, scores of theaters and two suburban palaces laced with gold. Lenin directed the revolution from Smolny Hall here, but later moved the capital to Moscow. Leningrad was in decline when in World War II its people astounded Nazi strategists by holding out for 900 days against a German siege despite the death of 650,000 civilians.

Leningrad today appears to be a lady enjoying a facelift. The restoration of facades is a continuing project. There are 4.5 million people, three million fewer than in Moscow. People were scurrying everywhere. Streetcars were packed. Many conductors were women, as were the work crews cleaning the streets. This was to be a common sight throughout Russia, due in large measure to the shortage of manpower after World War II.

The weather is nippy, the ski overcast. Women are bundled in topcoats and babushkas, and we noted later, dress less stylishly than their counterparts in Moscow. Food, or a lack of it, is a problem in most Soviet cities. Onions and oranges were in short supply. Other fruits and vegetables are available, however, and one can see long queques of men and women on almost every other block waiting to purchase goods. The lines get longer as word spreads of a new order handed down closing food stores on Sunday throughout Russia. It will force more Soviets to shop early in the morning on weekdays when quality goods are more available.

We regretted not meeting one or two of the 250 Westeners who live in Leningrad. They say it's easier to get to know Russians here because they are less blase' and more curious about foreigners. Unfortunately, a tight timetable limited any extensive downtown walking, although had we chosen to, we could stroll on our own without the aid of our Soviet guide. Would we have been shadowed? Alone, perhaps. In a group, doubtful. We were assured the KGB doesn't have time to bother with tourists. A rule of thumb appears to hold true: there is safety in numbers.

Sightseeing is a all-day experience, starting with Nevsky Prospekt, Leningrad's main street of majestically columned pre-revolutionary buildings. It is called the "Hero City" for its performance in World War II and wears the name proudly. More than 500 of the thousands of monuments were repaired in 1975 and 100 new memorials were put up. District heat and power plants keep the city smogless despite the presence of 2,000 big factories. The city began curbing urban growth two years ago and planting trees and shrubs to keep the air purified. We saw other areas, however, where block upon block of buildings is in disrepair but still occupied. Monuments must have a higher priority.

If we needed any proof of this, we got it at The Hermitage. I had always imagined this splendid museum to be on the outside of town, guarded like a fortress. It is, instead, housed in the winter palace in the downtown area. Outside, it appears no more managificent than your grey federal building here. but inside it drips with riches: 353 rooms, a total length of 14 miles: 2 1/4 million items from different periods, countries and peoples; 10 Da Vinci's, 2 Raphaels, 4 Van Goghs, an El Greco, 36 Picassos. They say there are more Rembrandts in the Hermitage than in Holland. Others are told it would take nine years to see all the exhibits. I wouldn't dispute them. Room after room revealed collection of not only art but gems, clocks, tapestries and furnishings dating back to the mid-18th century. A half-day

Rose May Be National Flower

By EARL ARONSON

Remember that poll to determine the most popular flower in the United States, which has no national flower? The winner by a big margin was the rose.

The rose earned 29.9 per cent of the vote, more than three times the 9.2 per cent of the runner-up carnation, according to the Florists' Transworld (FTD) Delivery, which sponsored the competition.

Hubert J. Beudert, executive vice president of the inter-city floral delivery cooperative, listed daisy as third with 8.7 per cent, followed by dogwood, 5.6 per cent, and apple blossom, 4.5 per cent.

The marigold, long promoted by the late Senator Dirksen and others wound up 10th, with only 2.4 per cent.

However, before the United States has an official flower, Congress must approve a law or resolution designating it. Recently resolutions have been proposed to designate the rose, daisy and apple blossom and the marigold. Beudert said his organization would ask the 1977 Congress to act "on the people's choice."

"After all," he said, "we have a national bird – in the bald eagle – and every state has an official flower and some also honor animals, birds and even fish. It's high time the country has a national flower and what better choice than one that has been picked by the people themselves."

In the July contest there were 28 floral candidates and space for write-ins. Certified public accountants did the tallying in Southfield, Mich., FTD's headquarters. The top write-in was gardenia, which got a total vote of 421,266, or .559 per cent of the total.

Second most popular write-in was marijuana with .310 per cent of the vote. Dandelion received .250 per cent of the votes and bringing up the rear with 106 ballots was the cactus.

From sixth place on were: Lilac, black-eyed susan, orchid, pansy, marigold, chrysanthemum, azalea, mountain laurel, tulip, daffodil, rhododendron, lily, magnolia, geranium, gladiolus, snapdragon, corn tassel, camillia, peony, petunia, zinnia, begonia, dahlia, gardenia, marijuana, violet, dandelion, poppy, iris, sunflower, cherry blossom, sweet pea, blue bonnet, aster, bird of paradise, morning glory, forget-menot, baby's breath, gloxinia, columbine and cactus.

tour offers only a glimpse, but it impresses even the non-art aficionado. Another plus is, unlike Versailles outside Paris, the Russians care enough about the Hermitage to put women in every room who keep a sharp eye on the tourists and reprimand anyone who shows the slightest sign of outching an object. Women, by the way , are ordered to check their coats or wraps before touring the museum.

For splendor in the past, Peter the Great's Dutch-style summer palace outside Leningrad is a must for every visitor. Magnificent cascading fountains are fed by a 12-mile canal cut through the park area in 1721. The Petrovdovrets estate was a place for Peter to play practical joker. He like to upset his guests' dignity by dousing them with unexpected sprays, controlled by a man on a bench who, legend says, was known in Peter's cabinet as the Minister of Wet Affairs.

ASK KLEINER

Alice Cooper's Clerical Dad

By DICK KLEINER

DEAR DICK: I'm an Alice Cooper fan and would like to know his real name and age. Can you help me? DIANE McCLELLAND, Pallsington, Pa.

Sure, why not? Alice is really Vincent Furnier, and his age is a secret but he's generally believed to be somewhere in the vicinity of 30. He comes from Phoenix, Ariz., the son of a minister and, curiously, his wife, Cheryl, is the daughter of a minister.

DEAR DICK: I believe it was in the early '60s, when a singer by the name of Gale Garnett recorded a hit song, "We'll Sing In The Sunshine." I thought she was great. What ever became of her? DEAN LILLY, Logan, W. Va.

She was great and so was the song which she wrote. Last I heard, Gale was in Toronto, Canada, where she was producing records.

DEAR DICK: I would like to know if MGM could ever sell the movie, "The Wizard of Oz." And could you ever buy Popeye movies or the Peanuts movies? TED SMITH, Canastota, N.Y.

The thing about movies is that they are all covered by copyrights and the studios won't sell anything that is copyrighted. There are film pirates who somehow get copies of these and other films and sell illegally pirated prints, but the movie industry is cracking down on them now. Some films have gone into P.D. — Public Domain — and are available from reputable film libraries that sell or rent copies. One such is Thunderbird Films (P.O. Box 65157, Los Angeles, Ca. 90065) and you might write for their catalogue. They have many old features and shorts, including some Popeye shorts.

DEAR DICK: Some years ago, Richard Crenna of All's Fair starred in a program that involved a state legislature. The program began with a statement or quotation that pertained to democracy. It began something like: "Democracy is not the best form of government," etc., etc. Could you please furnish the quotation, the author, the source. ROBERT W. SMITH, Landis, N.C.

The program was the unforgettable Slattery's People, and the quotation that opened each show was: "Democracy is a very poor form of government, but I ask you not to forget all the others are so much worse." It was said, in November, 1947, by Winston Churchill in a speech to the House of Commons. Historians say the quotation in question is a paraphrase of a speech made 200 years before by Thomas Jefferson.

DEAR DICK: My husband and I have a bet. I say "Gone With the Wind" was never on TV until it was shown Nov. 7. My husband says he watched it in Great Falls, Montana, somewhere between 1972 and 1976, twice, no less. We will be waiting for your answer. R.L. RHYNE, Waldron, Ark.

You are totally right. "Gone With the Wind" was never shown on TV until this season — not even in Great Falls.

Mouseketeer Disclosures

By ANN TERRILL

Remember Jerry Bowles?

He wore big ears and appeared on television with the Walt Disney Mouseketeers in the 1950s.

Bowles, now a free lance journalist and author, and long since out of show biz, has authored a book about the Mouseketeers called "Forever Hold Your Banner High! The Story of the Mickey Mouse Club and What Happened to the Mouseketeers."

Doubleday has just published it, and Bowles, who says he calls things as they are or were, instead of how Disney's organization might release an "official" version, sees it as a best seller.

"They're going to reactivate the club on TV this year," he said in a recent interview. "I think with interest high, this is the right time for my book."

Why did he write it?

"Well, we sort of represented an officially optimistic, pollyannish facade for the kids of the 1950s. Lots of these kids, by the time the 1960s rolled around, realized that life was not all that great. Disillusion set in," said the author who is 33 now. "We all got our share of it. I decided to trace it back, by looking up all my former clubmates. I did and I am reporting on them now."

And where are they now, those favorites of yesteryear? Annette Funicello, the house princess and love object of millions of red-blooded American boys, went on to make all those beach party pictures ("with horribly teased Freda's Beauty Shoppe hair and skin that never tanned"), married her agent, ("It broke Charlie Brown's heart"), mothers three Mouseketeers of her own and occasionally makes guest appearances on the medium that made her famous. Bowles traces her phenomenal rise from her original role as a second stringer to real star of the show. Although Annette was clearly Uncle Walt's favorite, "not everything was entirely rosy at the studio" and court action was involved in their relationship.

Bobby Burgess, son of a meatcutter and perennial dancing star of the Lawrence Welk Show, is one of the most enthusiastic of the alumni in retracing the high points of the club. Somewhat of a practical joker, he likes to answer queries about his wife by showing "an awful photo of an unfortunate young lady whose face appears to have had a tragic confrontation with a truck." It is definitely not his wife Kristie, daughter of Myron Floren, Welk's heir apparent.

Karen Pendleton was one of the most frank in her reminiscences. Karen was never very close to the older girls on the show, and was mostly unaware of the intense, and often bitter, rivalry that went on between Annette and Darlene and their parents. As for Disney, she says: "I got the impression he didn't like kids very much." Karen and Cubby don't get together too often these days. Cubby lives with his wife, Marilyn, a singer, and four-year-old daughter in Northridge, California. His experiences on the Welk show were less fortuitous than Bobby's, he left after two years. Now he is a drummer for The Carpenters and such stars as Ann-Margret, Carol Burnett and Jim Nabors. He was musical director of the Los Angeles productions of "Hair" and "Oh! Calcutta!" ("Looks like everytime a dirty show comes to town, they call me up.")

Johnny Crawford has had his share of nudity, too. He revealed his all in "The Naked Ape," a 1972 movie made by Playboy Productions. Darlene, now known as Darlene Valentine, is a country singer. She thinks she saw Walt Disney "about five times in my life.... He seemed okay but somehow I just got the impression that he was a kind of Pontius Pilate who let other people do his dirty work for him." Tommy Cole is a free-lance make-up artist. Cheryl Holdridge became a movie starlet and married the late Lance Reventlow, millionairess Barbara Hutton's racing driver son.

"If the 'Mickey Mouse Club' had a lasting spirit, if it truly touched the heart of a generation," writes Bowles, "the reason was a friendly red-headed, freckle-faced man named Jimmie Dodd. Jimmie was good and he wore his goodness like a banner." It is not generally known that Dodd had a serious illness before he came to the club as emcee, and he succumbed fatally in Hawaii after a three-month hospital stay following a single day's shooting on a new children's show.

Nearly all of the Mouseketeers still live in Southern California, within a 50-mile radius of the Disney studios where the show was filmed.

As you'll note, most of the Mouseketeers didn't continiue in show business. According to Bowles, who also didn't, it's because most of them had little or no talent.

"We were chosen by agents from classes in schools we attended, from dancing schools or places like that. We were chosen for looks, or image, rather than talent."

If the 1960s was the decade of disillusion, and the 1970s more of the same, what of the remainder of this decade and the 1980s then?

BARBRA STREISAND

A Star Maturing Over Hollywood

By SIDNEY FIELDS
New York News

NEW YORK – The second time I met Barbra Streisand she was in a bit of trouble. It was in 1962, after writing about her spectacular Broadway debut in "I Can Get It For You Wholesale," she had a small role as a homely, harried secretary in a housedress, but stopped the show every night singing her loud and plaintive wail that men never called her "baby doll" or even "bubala," but only "Miss Marmelstein," and why always "Miss?"

I'd gone backstage with a friend, Bill McCaffrey, who wanted to see Lillian Roth, the star of the show. Barbra greeted us and whispered that she was being summoned by Actors Equity to explain why she developed the habit of coming late to the theater. That's a sin on Broadway as well as a discourtesy to the cast and auxiliaries. (Punctuality was never one of Barbra's strong points).

Anyway, the girl was in distress, and asked what I thought of an elaborate set of alibis she'd prepared to excuse her tardiness. She was advised not to dissemble, but to admit her transgression, acknowledge that it was both thoughtless and selfish and promise never to be late again. She accepted that graciously and gratefully, and said she would.

But that was before fame's tentacles clutched her so hard that she got beyond apologizing to anyone, before she ordered script writers off a movie set, vetoed actors and directors, labelled herself "Executive Producer," and elevated a hair-dresser to "Producer." He happens to be her lover.

The talent is there, all right. She can cradle a song as if she mothered it. Few actresses can be as funny or use their hands the way she does. Her hands are truly beautiful. She's the only actress alive whose name can cause a rush of money to bankroll any movie she wants to make.

Once, she was the loveable kook from Williamsburgh, Brooklyn, who, asked to record a brief biography for the program notes of "I Can Get It For You Wholesale," wrote: "Born in Madagascar, reared in Rangoon, educated at Erasmus Hall High School, and is not a member of Actors Studio."

She boasted then, with the pride of a teenager, that her father was a Ph.D., taught in the city's schools, and "He's listed in Leaders of Education." She was 15 months old when he died. He was 34. Her mother worked as a school clerk.

As soon as she was graduated from high school Barbra shared a cold water flat in Manhattan with two other girls, and worked as a switchboard operator, answering the calls with different accents just to relieve the monotony. She was very convincing.

She began singing in obscure little clubs, got into an off-Broadway play

RESTAURANT WITH A SPECTACULAR VIEW... THE ORANGE COUNTY MINING COMPANY is located in the county of Orange, perched high on it's own mini-mountain at Chapman and Crawford Canyon Road..

Wind your way to the top and behold. You will find an interesting group of antiquated buildings actually built of old mining timber and siding deliciously rustic. Surrounding the site are all the expected working relics of the colorful mining era that began in the very same area a hundred years ago (1877) when Smith and Curry found silver ore – thus beginning the rush for fame and fortune.

The picturesque shaft entrance is all you will imagine. But step inside and you are surrounded by rustic elegance and one of the most spectacular views of the north part of our county. The restaurant is a delight with several levels for your dining pleasure, decorous with thick carpeting, unique furnishings all delightfully enhanced by greenery and bric-a-brac.

Dinner was most worthy. It began with a chilled green salad mingled with various salad builders and an excellent house dressing – a honey mustard variety – super with the hot cheese bread (fresh-made clam chowder also available).

My entree was the fresh catch of the day (changing on availability) – salmon — very tasty — not overcooked, accompanied by a flavorful rice and vegetable of creamed corn. Others in my party enjoyed the seafood brochette (tender pieces of seafood broiled on a skewer with bell pepper, onion); roast prime rib of beef au jus and filet mignon and crab leg. Our coffee and wine was interestingly served in mason jars. The wine carafe is also a large mason jar. We enjoyed a fresh cooked, tender artichoke served with mayonnaise butter and a skillet of fresh mushrooms sauteed in butter and wine.

The menu though limited – offers many favorites such as chicken teriyaki, brochettes of filet mignon teriyaki, steaks (top sirloin, New York, filet mignon). The popular combinations include filet mignon and crab and filet mignon and enchilada. All dinners include choice of clam chowder or the salad, rice, vegetable and hot cheese bread. Dinner prices run from $5.45 to $8.95.

Brunch is served every Sunday from 10 until 3 p.m. It's a delight to linger over a creamy fizz or maybe an "orange thing" as you drink in the marvelous view. There are several breakfast and lunch entrees to select from. A favorite of mine is the Hangtown fry – a lovely mound of fluffy eggs mingled with fresh sliced mushrooms, oysters, diced potatoes, green onion and bacon. The crab omelette is filled with King crab meat, fresh slices of mushrooms blended in wine.

There are also scrambled eggs and chicken livers; salmon omelettes...Bacon and eggs, hickory smoked ham and eggs; and steak and eggs – the great all American favorites are served with potatoes. The entrees include a choice of orange juice, tomato juice or a chilled glass of champagne plus various sweet rolls, breads. Prices are from $3.25 to $4.95.

Luncheon sandwiches are also served – roasted prime rib, teriyaki burger and choice steak priced at $4.95 A child's plate is $2.50.

Disco entertainment with Mellow Mike (you won't believe him) playing all your favorite LP's for your listening and dancing pleasure is offered Tuesday through Saturday nights from 8:30 until 1:30 a.m. Dinner is served nightly from 5 p.m. until 10 p.m. Friday and Saturday until midnight.

Orange County Mining Company is headed by Dave Perrins, Bucky Dennis and Brad Perrins. They also have the QUIET CANNONS, (Dana Point, Montebello and Long Beach), THE FOXHUNTER (Newport and Houston) and THE WINDROSE (Long Beach Marina). An ORANGE COUNTY MINING COMPANY will soon open in the city of Covina.

CONTINENTAL DIARY

Suitable Attire For Oil Rich Sheiks

By NEIL MORGAN

PARIS – Oil rich sheikhs are busily buying a new gimmick suit that costs $2,500. It's made in Britain from pure cashmere with a pin-stripe of 24-carat gold.

Reason for the rush: The Moxon Mill near the British north country town of Huddersfield can only produce cloth for around 100 suits a year.

Plans are on foot to increase output – and vary the "cloth of gold" by spinning mohair or cashmere sports suits with solid gold checks instead of pinstripes. Producers have no doubt they would sell to the Middle East – even at $5,000 a suit.

Sugar And 'Spice'

Paris producers of live sex shows – the ultimate in audience participation – are planning to break down the last barriers of opposition in London, England. Already, live shows from Paris tour Scandinavia and Holland, but all attempts to show them in London have failed.

Jean Perdrini, who runs the sleazy St. Denis theater in Paris, says, "I'm going to London, but I don't want censors to alter down my spicy acts."

The shows at Perdrini's are beautifully staged – but a bit rough. In "Today's Lady Chatterley," for example, actress Francoise Richard seduces a manservant and the play ends with 20 minutes of nonstop sex on stage.

P.S. The manservant – played by Michel d'Anterac thrice nightly – says, "It's quite a taxing role."

Moving On

Roman Polanski, the 43-year-old Polish-born movie director, who has been touring Europe to launch "The Tenant," says he may decide to give up living in Paris, France, his home for the past four years.

"I no longer feel attached to anywhere particular," he says. "Work just washes me away like an empty shell from one shore to another."

Polanski's been directing since he was 21. "I always wanted to be a film director. It satisfies me," he says. "But I'm not totally satisfied with what I've done.

"So much time and effort is wasted in setting films up. I hate the wheeling and dealing side of the business. I have no talent for it or desire to do it."

Incidental Intelligence

– Psychic researcher John Rayner of London claims he is in daily touch with Adolf Hitler who killed himself 31 years ago. Hitler, says Rayner, is dictating his memoirs to him.

Quotes Of The Week

– "In so far as socialism means anything, it must be about the wider distribution of smoked salmon and caviar." – Sir Richard Marsh, British politician.

– "I never really meant to be an actor. I had the idea of making a career in the military and retiring at 37." – Jason Robards, currently filming in Europe.

JOE LOUIS, former world heavyweight champion, on money he made as a fighter: "I got $50 for my first fight, but it wasn't long before the money got bigger. My end in the Nate Brown fight was $7,000. When I knocked out Ray Lazer I got almost $12,000. I got $60,000 for Canera and $53,000 for Levinsky. I got $217,000 for the Walcott fight. Then I went to London and put on an exhibition for an $80,000 guarantee. Once I knocked out Eddie Sims in 26 seconds and got $20,000. That figures out to $700 a second. Where did my money go? I gave a lot to old fighters who were in bad luck. I spent a lot on fancy clothes. One time I had around 100 suits made to order. They stood me $150 to $185 apiece. I spent a lot for big cars. I lost $40,000 in the Rhum Boogie Cafe in Chicago. Another one that turned out bad was a fried chicken bar in east Detroit. We dropped $25,000 on that."

DA FONZ:

A Big Commercial Craze

By JAMES GREGORY

HOLLYWOOD – A new craze is sweeping America's youth – and already its created a $10 million business – in "Fonzie" products.

The kids are buying milions of T-shirts, posters, beach towels and nearly a hundred other items bearing the face of Henry Winkler, who plays The Fonz on the TV smash hit show, "Happy Days."

"We've sold from three million to four million Fonzie T-shirts," happily reports an executive of Allison Manufacturing Co. in New York City.

"Over three million Fonzie posters have been sold!" says Lou Mindling, director of licensing for Paramount Pictures, which produces the show and owns the rights to the characters in it.

"Millions of packages of Topps Bubble Gum containing pictures of Fonzie and his TV pals have been sold.

"There are Fonzie lunch kits, puzzles, games, paper dolls, books, paint sets, bean bags, leather jackets, even knee-high socks for girls – and all of them are making money.

"Several of the people we licensed to make Fonzie posters can retire now.

"One fellow made over $500,000."

Paramount gets a substantial cut. Mindling said a manufacturer pays 5 to 10 per cent of the wholesale price for the right to use the Fonzie character.

More than $10 million worth of Fonzie products at retail prices already have been sold, most of them this year, he revealed.

Perhaps the one who makes the least out of the whole craze is the man whose face launched it, Winkler.

According to the Hollywood Reporter, Winkler receivas between 5 and 6 per cent of Paramount's profits. This, says a merchandising agent, has yielded Winkler only an estimated $6,000 to $12,000, so far.

Winkler's agent, Tom Newman, refused to discuss his client's take on Fonzie products.

"That's between Winkler and Paramount," he said.

"Neither Henry nor I would want to license a cheaply made item or a bad item," Mindling said.

"For example, we've never licensed a skateboard, because we feel that it's dangerous for kids.

"And we've never licensed a Fonzie ring to go into a bubble gum machine, because I feel that's a rip-off."

Meanwhile, everyone concerned believes the bonanza has just begun.

Coming up soon, Mindling disclosed, are stuffed Fonzie dolls to be advertised on the back of 50 million boxes of Nabisco candy...plush Fonzie slippers and denim shoes...a Fonzie bicycle, home pinball game, motorcycle game, Fonzie drinking glasses...and aven Fonzie sheets and pillowcases, so that America's kids can sleep happily close to the image of their newest hero.

FROM T-SHIRTS TO SOCKS – "Fonzie" fans, Peggy, left, and April Panczak, show off some of the popular "Fonzie" products selling like crazy. There are about 100 other items bearing TV star Henry Winkler's face. They had a fast rise but may fall off now that Winkler has announced his resignation from TV series.

DR. ROBERT C. ATKINS, diet doctor and author: "I don't think amphetamines or any appetite-suppressing drugs are effective, primarily because there is a tolerance to them in weeks. There may also be the problem with withdrawal. In addition, it has been demonstrated that amphetamines cause a gradual week-by-week increase in levels of circulating insulin which prevents your fat stores from breaking down. When the International Narcotic Enforcement Officers Association asked me to address their Albany convention in 1971, I recommended to them that the manufacture of amphetamines be totally prohibited."

NIKKI GIOVANNI, poet, addressing students at Saginaw Valley State in Michigan: "Grades are the name of the game. It is so disgraceful that students score so low. We can do better, but first we have to learn how to learn. Ask your mother and father when was the last time they had fun. When was the last time you told them you loved them? It seems as though our parents are the last ones we see when things are going our way, but once things go bad we run to mommy and daddy first."

WILL ROGERS: "One way to solve the traffic problem would be to keep all the cars that aren't paid for off the streets."

WOLFGANG AMADEUS MOZART: "I never go to bed without thinking that tomorrow – young as I am – I may no longer be alive. And yet no one who knows me can say I am depressing or sad in my conversation."

'Frosty' Tips For Actors

By HARRY GRAHAM
Register Staff Writer

I knew the face. I had seen it many times.

And I knew I should know the name.

"Terry Frost," said the handsome gray-haired man.

"Yes," I said, "Ive seen you in a lot of movies and TV shows."

You've seen Terry, too. Never a star, he's had featured roles in 136 movies and 235 telefilms.

I met him at the Western Film Festival in Los Angeles last summer.

"I'll send you a copy of my book," said Terry. "It'll be out about the first of the year."

Sure enough, "Actors Only," a 84-page $5.95 "practical handbook on theater," published by Dorrance & Co., arrived in the mail last week. It is largely a compilation of lectures author Frost gave when he served as executive director of drama at the Patricia Stevens Career Colleges in Los Angeles and Pasadena.

It's always a little hard to believe a fellow you've seen play the bad guy in so many films is in actuality just another guy. But Terry Frost isn't just another guy, he is a smiling septuagenarian with a friendly smile and is an excellent conversationalist.

His little book isn't so much a technical work on how to act as it is a list of tips to aspiring actors. I'm no actor and never hoped to be one, but I believe what Terry has to offer is easy to follow and should be helpful.

Of speech, he says, "Keep it slow and low. The 'fast talker' is alwasy suspect, even if honest. He is hard to follow."

Terry adds, "To the extent an actor controls his voice, he controls his audience."

He also says, "If you are born with a good middle-class background and nothing to fight for, somewhere along the line, if you are to survive as an individual, you have to create conflict within yourself."

And, "A sculptor casts his dream in bronze; an actor takes his dream of a character and brings it to life using his voice and his movements, directed by his intelligence."

Plus, "Start with the knowledge that all successful actors must dedicate themselves to their profession in order to achieve their dreams; then work, work, work."

Then he says, "Success is a matter of talent, opportunity and timing."

Born in Bemidji, Minn., Terry Forst traveled the United States for six years after finishing high school, working as a miner, lumberjack, cowboy, salesman and jack-of-all-trades.

He began his acting career in 1929 in vaudeville and later appeared in such stage shows as "The Last Mile," "Front Page," "Accent on Youth" and "Three Men on a Horse."

After more than four decades on the stage, in movies and TV, he worked for a while at the drama school, then was a public relations man for a travel company.

He traveled to the Orient 50 times and made a dozen trips around the world. On the tips he studied and observed theater and motion pcitures in many countries, concluding that actors all over the world have the same philosophy of life.

And here is one of his best lines from his book: "The wind helps only those who set their sails."

Actor-author Terry Frost set his sails while in his youth, and the winds of life took him where he wanted to go.

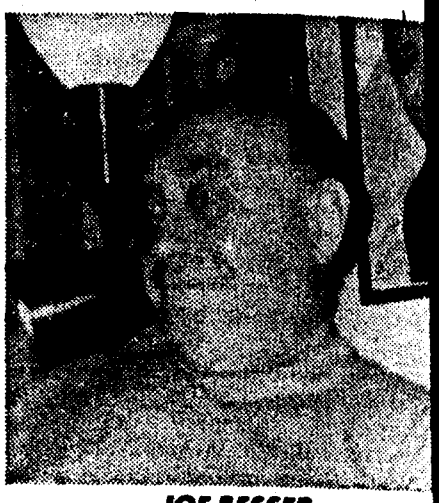
Death Reports Of Pair Were Premature

Veteran laughmaker Joe Besser is alive and well and is still entertaining children with his antics on Saturday morning cartoon shows and on other television re-run favorites.

In the Nov. 14 issue of Leisuretime a column headed Celebrity Questions from Knight News Wire contained the following sequence:

"Q. My cousin and I have been arguing over which members of the Three Stooges are dead. RMD. and R.W.

"A. They all are. Larry Fine and Moe Howard, the last surviving members of the comedy trio, both died in 1975. Moe was one of three Howard brothers who was a Stooge. Moe, Fine and Curly Howard were the first Stooges; Curly died in 1952 and was replaced by Shemp Howard. Shemp died in 1955 and Joe DeRita joined the group. Both DeRita, and another Joe, Besser, who was a Stooge briefly, died in the 1970s. The Three Stooges comedies, all made for theaters, were made from 1933 to 1957."



Understandably, the reply to this question was a cause of concern in both the Besser and DeRita households, according to a representative of the former, Jeff Lenburg, 1949 W. Cerritos, Anaheim.

Leisuretime, of course, regrets the error(s) by the news wire but let Lenburg tell it:

"The Knight Wire Services columnist made a grave error saying that both Mr. Besser and Mr. DeRita had passed away...

that lasted one night, and when she was 19 years old showed up for her audition for "I Can Get It For You Wholesale" one hour late.

After the show closed her success was quick and spectacular in cross-country concerts, in big supper clubs, on TV. In California 100 stars came to hear and cheer her. Tony Bennett, glittering high, noticed Barbra's nose, touched his own (no small matter, either), and whispered, "This could be the year for noses."

The third time we met, Barbra was rehearsing for her second Broadway play, "Funny Girl," which really vaulted her into superstardom. We were in a restaurant. When lunch was served she took the gum from her mouth, parked it under her plate, attacked a bowl of fruit salad, tilted her nose up, and asked, "Do I look like an anteater?" Her blue eyes were rather wistful.

She was in blue jeans, a white T-shirt and a plaid British jockey cap. But her dress, her talk, her behavior then all seemed right and natural. It came to this: she was resisting conformity fiercely while trying to escape it just as fiercely. The resulting confusion was a delightful combination of clowning one minute and all shyness the next, it's one of the secrets of her unquestionable talents, and maybe still is.

It's possible that sitting up there on the pinnacle she's frightened. Not many of her ten movies have been box-office smashes. Her latest, "A Star is Born," may be one of the lesser epics of our time. But Barbra is a shrewd girl. She did know how to "package" herself to get to the pinnacle. After that lunch we had she was told that a jockey cap was unsuited to a star.

"Right," she agreed. "There's a time to be a kook and a time to end it. I'm ending it."

"We're in for a return to the optimistic and naive 1950s," said Bowles. "Look at Jimmy Carter. He's the newest Mouseketeer of all."

Bowles' next project is a book on the Ed Sullivan show called "A Rilly Big Shew." Look for it on the book shelves by next year.

Meanwhile, "Forever Keep Your Banner High" will make a hit, maybe, with Mouseketeers from way back when.

CLASSICAL MUSIC

Impressive New Line Of ABC Discs

By GARY GROSPOREAN

To innaugerate a new line of full-priced classical recordings, "ABC Classics," ABC Records has released 10 albums from the German SEON label.

They are touted as being "thoroughly researched compositions and exemplary performances on period instruments, creating a sound most nearly resembling that heard by the composer himself."

I can not disagree. The engineering is superb, the pressings impeccable, and the music sublime.

The albums are handsomely packaged and include exhaustive liner notes.

WEINACHTMUSIK DES 15 UND 16 JAHRHUNDERTS (Christmas music of the 15th and 16th Centuries), ABCL 67002. Capella Antiqua Munchen Mit Originalinstrumenten, Konrad Ruhland, conductor.

Vallejo Home Monument

The Vallejo Home Historical Monument in Sonoma in northern California was once the home of General Mariano Guadalupe Vallejo, one of California's leading figures in the middle of the 19th century.

Vallejo, who played an important role in the Bear Flag Revolt of 1846, advocated annexation of California by the United States.

The home contains family furnishings and heirlooms. It was made of adobe and later covered with wood.

The home is surrounded by a pond and gardens with fountains, and is adjacent to a museum that contains Vallejo's saddles, carriage, and military mementos.

Social Mixing Problems Here

By DOROTHY ST. JOHN JACKSON
Certified Graphoanalyst

Dear Dorothy:

I am 29 years old and am so shy that I can't mix with other people. I fell awkward and out of place and can't figure out why. I have been told I'm nice looking and feel that I am fairly intelligent. What can I do about this so I can be a person before it's too late? Or was I just born this way?

T.T.

Dear T.T.:

Shyness is not a natural trait. It was cultivated and nourished away back in your childhood. Uncomplimentary credit must go to those who were not aware of the effects of their criticism, neglect and punishment.

A strong symptom of your shyness is your self-consciousness, seen in the high part of the n and m. It's a trait that's common with most of us, but the intenseness of the trait lies in its combination with other traits. In your case, it's combined with your small tight writing. This causes you to become totally absorbed in your faults, your appearance, your mannerisms, etc. You spend too many hours criticizing yourself because,

Headline Makers in 1976

AP Newsfeatures

In 1976, Peter Frampton became a superstar and a new group named Boston sold enough copies of its first LP to make some kind of history.

Bob Dylan appeared in his first TV special and Bing Crosby gave his first concert. The Beatles did not get back together.

Peter Frampton, 26 and British, who left Humble Pie four years ago to begin a solo career, made the year's most smashing tour of the United States, fusing rock and pop. He got a divorce, and signed to play Billy Shears in the movie "Sergeant Pepper's Lonely Hearts Club Band." His "Frampton Comes Alive" was threatening Carole King's "Tapestry" as the biggest selling record album ever. And the LP "Boston" was trying to become the fastest-selling ever. It sold 500,000 copies in seven weeks, and hit a million copies in 11 weeks.

Grammy Awards for 1976 went to "Love Will Keep Us Together," by the Captain and Tennille, as record of the year, and to "Still Crazy after all these Years," by Paul Simon, as LP of the year.

Billboard Magazine, in its Christmas issue, listed the bestselling records during 1976. Best-selling singles: "Silly Love Songs," Wings; Don't Go Breaking My Heart," Elton John and Kiki Dee; "Disco Lady," Johnnie Taylor; "December 1963," Four Seasons; "Play that Funky Music," Wild Cherry; "Kiss and Say Goodbye," Manhattans.

"Love Machine," Miracles; "50 Ways To Leave Your Lover," Paul Simon; "Love Is Alive," Gary Wright; "A Fifth of Beethoven," Walter Murphy; "Sara Smile," Daryl Hall and John Oates; "Afternoon Delight," Starland Vocal Band; "I Write the Songs," Barry Manilow; "Fly, Robin, Fly," Silver Convention; "Love Hangover," Diana Ross.

Albums: "Frampton Comes Alive," Peter Frampton; "Fleetwood Mac," Fleetwood Mac; "Wings at the Speed of Sound," Wings; "Songs in the Key of Life," Stevie Wonder; "Greatest Hits 1971-1975," Eagles; "Chicago IX," Chicago; "The Dream Weaver," Gary Wright; "Desire," Bob Dylan.

"A Night at the Opera," Queen; "America's Greatest Hits – History," America; "Gratitude," Earth, Wind and Fire; "Face the Music," Electric Light Orchestra; "Brass Construction," Brass Construction; "Tryin' To Get the Feelin'," Barry Manilow; "Still Crazy After All These Years," Paul Simon.

The two best-selling Latin-LPs were "The Salsoul Orchestra" by the Salsoul Orchestra and "Unfinished Masterpiece" by Eddie Palmieri. Top-selling soul LP was "Rufus Featuring Chaka Khan" and top soul single was "Disco Lady" by Johnny Taylor. "Disco Duck" by Rick Dees was a gimmick record with charm.

"Breezin'," by George Benson; was the best-selling jazz album. Readers of Down Beat magazine chose pianist McCoy Tyner as "jazzman of the year."

Stevie Wonder signed a $13 million contract with Motown Records.

Brian Wilson rejoined the Beach Boys. David Clayton Thomas rejoined Blood, Sweat and Tears. Ron Wood officially joined the Rolling Stones. Rick Wakeman rejoined Yes.

Gregg Allman testified about drugs before a federal grand jury. His road manager was sentenced to 75 years in prison and the Allman Brothers Band broke up. Ian Mitchell, 18, who joined the Bay City Rollers in April when Alan Longmuir, 26, left, also found traveling and rollermania "a nightmare" and was replaced by Pat McGlynn, 18.

The Band opened New York's refurbished Academy of Music – renamed the Palladium – after which the Beacon Theater closed as a rock hall. And then the Band, after some 16 years, gave itself a big farewell concert at Winterland in San Francisco. Rod Stewart left the Faces to form his own band.

Loggins and Messina split as a duo to become solo artists, and Cashman and West did the same thing. Harold Melvin and the Blue Notes broke up; so did Herbie Hancock's Head Hunters.

Singer Grace Slick of the Jefferson Starship married the group's lighting director, Skip Johnson. Singer Freda Payne married doctoral candidate Stanford Abbott. Keith Moon, drummer for the Who, married model Annet Walter-LAX. Country Joe McDonald married nursing student Janice Taylor. Allman Brothers lead guitarist Dickie Betts married Cher's secretary, Paulette Eghazarian. Alice Cooper married dancer Sheryl Goddard.

Frank Sinatra married Barbara Marx. He also sang at 4,500-seat Grand Ole Opry and wowed 'em.

The Country Music Association named Mel Tillis entertainer of the year, with Dolly Parton and Ronnie Milsap top vocalists. Single record of the year was named "Good-Hearted Woman" by Waylon Jennings and Willie Nelson. Album of the year was "Wanted – the Outlaws," by Jennings, Nelson, Jessie Colter and Tompall Glaser.

Song of the year was "Rhinestone Cowboy" written by Larry Weiss and recorded by Glen Campbell. The Nashville Songwriters Association picked Ben Peters, who co-authored "Before the Next Teardrop Falls," as its songwriter of the year. Billboard said the best-selling country single of the year was "Convoy" by C.W. McCall and the best-selling LP was "The Sound In Your Mind" by Willie Nelson.

Dolly Parton was ordered to rest her voice by her doctor. Merle Haggard suddenly canceled an engagement in Reno and took a vacation from "the stress of the road." Roy Acuff, 72, suffered a mild heart attack.

Lou Adler, president of Ode Records, was kidnaped and released after payment of $25,000 ransom. Rick Stevens, 37, former lead singer with Tower of Power, was convicted of murder in the killing of two men he said were drug dealers. Isaac Hayes declared personal bankruptcy.

Stax Records went bankrupt. Al Bell, owner, was acquitted by a federal jury and his codefendant, former bank officer Joseph Harwell, was found guilty on two of 13 charges facing the pair. They had been charged with fraudulently obtaining some $18 million in bank loans.

Clive Davis presidentof Arista Records, was fined$10,000 in federal court after pleading guilty to one count of failing to report $8,500 in income on his tax form in 1972.

Nat Tarnopol, president of Brunswick Records, was sentenced to three years imprisonment and fined $10,000 in federal court. Peter Garris, sales manager, Irving Wiegan, treasurer, and Lee Shep, production manager, of Brunswick, were given two-year sentences and $10,000 fines. The four were convicted on charges related to off-the-books sale of $350,000 worth of records and mail fraud. Four members of the Chi-Lites, who have recorded for Brunswick, pleaded guilty to income tax evasion and were given $5,000 fines.

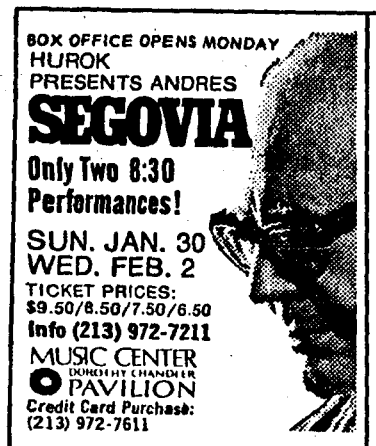
Jamaican reggae music star Bob Marley was shot in the arm by snipers in Jamaica, gave a free concert two days later, escorted on stage by policemen. Band leader Count Basie, 72, suffered a heart attack. Average White Band guitarist Alan Gorrie fell seven feet from a Seattle stage, breaking his foot, and went on with the tour.

Among musicians who died in 1976 were: Florence Ballard, 32, original member of the Supremes, heart attack; Paul Kosoff, 25, lead guitarist with Back Street Crawler, heart attack; Phil Reed, guitarist with Flo and Eddie, fall from a window; Tommy Bolin, former lead guitarist with Deep Purple, drug overdose; protest singer Phil Ochs, 36, suicide; Keith Relf, 33, former lead singer of the Yardbirds, electrocuted.

Songwriter Johnny Mercer, 66, after brain surgery; Ray Gilbert, 63, who won an Academy Award in 1947 for his "Zip a Dee Doo Dah," after heart surgery; Ned Washington, 75, who won an Oscar for "High Noon," of a heart ailment.

Conductor-arranger Percy Faith, 68, of cancer; society band leader Meyer Davis, 81.

Jazz cornetist Bobby Hackett, 61, heart attack; Duke Ellington Band violinist Ray Nance, 62; Big Jim Robinson, 86, New Orleans trombonist, cancer, was given a traditional jazz funeral with two brass bands; Princess White, 95, died backstage after singing two songs at the Emelin Theater in Mamaroneck, N.Y.; jazz pianist Vince Guaraldi, 47, heart attack.



Victoria Spivey, 68, blues singer in the 1920s.

Unfunny Books By Leading Humorists

FLIGHT TO CANADA by Ishmael Reed (Random House, 179 pages, $6.95) SLAPSTICK, OR LONESOME NO MORE! by Kurt Vonnegut (Delacorte Press, 243 pages, $7.95) SOMBRERO FALLOUT, A JAPANESE NOVEL by Richard Brautigan (Simon (. Schuster, 187 pages, $6.95) What's so funny)

By PEGGY BARBER

Have the disillusioning events of the '70s sapped our sense of humor? Probably not, yet it's interesting to note that the latest novels from three of America's leading humorists stimulate few giggles, much less laughs. Even the satire sags.

Ishmael Reed's "Flight to Canada," a retelling of Civil War history from the slave's point of view, is the most convincing of the lot.

Poet Raven Quicksell is the first slave on Arthur Swille's plantation to learn to read, write, and take flight. He finds fame and fortune when his poem "Flight to Canada" is published, but he makes it all the way to freedom only to find "neon signs with clashing letters advertising hamburgers, used car lots with the customary banners, coffee joints where you stand up and take your java from wax cups." Where is freedom anyway?

Meanwhile, mean master Swille is hot on Raven's trail. Swille is the epitome of decadence; into, among other perversions, incest and chains and whips. He uses the latter on his visitor Queen Victoria when a copy of Harriet Beecher Stowe's "Uncle Tom's Cabin" turns up during a search of her quarters.

Later, while Raven romps on the rumpus room couch with Quaw Quaw Tralaralara (a native American princess who's married to a businessman pirate and becomes a media event when she tightrope walks Niagara Falls backwards), their passion is interrupted by television coverage of Abe Lincoln's assassination at the Ford Theater.

Reed writes radically revisionist history, with events unfolding in a surreal time crunch; history that features slaves reaping vengeance upon their masters by substituting Coffee-Mate for their usual "two gallons of slave mothers' milk."

Unfortunately, his fifth novel is not as loose and flighty as some of his earlier fantasies, but it does beautifully, if at times tediously, prove his point – "It will always be a mystery, history. New disclosures are as bizarre as the most bizarre fantasy."

"Slapstick," Kurt Vonnegut's eighth novel, has about as much going for it as a poorly directed slapstick film – flashes of wit, loads of energy, but too many missed cues and too few laughs.

Wilbur Rockefeller Swain is a one - hundred - year - old pediatrician and former U.S. President of a now defunct United States. He tells his life story from his home in the lobby of the ruined and abandoned Empire State Building on a ruined and abandoned Manhattan Island, now more commonly known as "National Skyscraper Park" or "The Island of Death."

Wilbur and his twin sister Eliza were born "Neander thaloids" (outrageously deformed mutants "with massive brow-ridges, sloping foreheads, and steam-shovel jaws"). Banished to a country estate by their terribly rich and heartbroken parents, the hideous pair soon discover that although when apart they're typical Vonnegut dullards, when together they form a single giant genius.

Soon they've dashed off the best-selling child rearing manual, "So You Went and Had a Baby," which becomes the third most popular book ever written after "The Bible" and the "Joy of Cooking." Later, Wilbur is elected President of the U.S. by virtue of his brilliant campaign slogan, "Lonesome No More." This promise is to be fulfilled by the computerized assignment of a middle name to every person, thus creating artificial extended families and a sure cure for American loneliness.

Victory proves sour, however, since Wilbur finds himself competing for power with a King of Michigan and a Duke of Oklahoma and ruling over a plague-ravaged, quickly diminishing populace. Besides, minature Chinese have taken over most of the world, including what's left of the U.S. And it's all downhill from there, for Wilbur for his countrymen, and for Vonnegut fans.

For humor's sake, it would have been better if Richard Brautigan were still living happily in northern California – undiscovered by the mass media and mass audiences – writing simple, whimsical stories and poems for his small devoted following. His new novel is downright depressing.

"Sombrero Fallout" is about a "very well-known American humorist" (Brautigan) whose beautiful Japanese lover has left him "because the upkeep was too complicated." He can't stop crying and he can't start writing. The story he's struggling over, about a frigid sombrero falling out of the sky, finally ends up in the waste basket.

A good place for it. But alas it has a life of its own and through a weird series of events triggers a riot – complete with violence, death, the U.S. Air Force, and Norman Mailer serving as war correspondent for the national media.

Meanwhile the humorist mopes. He simply cannot pull himself together and so spends several chapters searching for a lost strand of his lover's beautiful black hair.

And that, unfortunately, is the whole sad story.

NEA

Updike Novel

MARRY ME. By John Updike. Knopf. 303 Pages. $7.95.

Jerry loves Sally. Sally loves Jerry. They want to get married. Unfortuantely, to them at least, they can't because they already are married – but to others. Jerry to Ruth Conant. Sally to Rchard Mathias. In addition, each of the lovers has several – not very endearing – children.

What to do? Well, novelist John Updike spends about 300 not terribly interesting pages studying the problem from all sides and, apparently unable to come up with a satisfying conclusion, gives the reader a multiple choice ending that, while clever, is an abdication of responsibility. The problem is not so unique that it cannot be resolved satisfactorily for the reader, if not for the characters composing the problem.

Much like Updike's last novel, "A Month Of Sundays," "Marry Me" does have some interesting portions, some of the fine descriptive writing that Updike can do so well when he puts his mind to it – "The clouds materialized earlier than usual; little upright puffs at first, like puffs of smoke from a locomotive starting its run around the horizon ..." – but once again the parts are better than the whole.

One trouble is that his characters are not very sympathetic people. Jerry is religion obsessed, given to saying such things as "... our trouble is that we live in the twilight of the old morality, and there's just enough to torment us, and not enough to hold us in." Sally is a shallow, largely amoral type with a most irritating penchant for starting her sentences with "Hey."

As previously noted, "Marry Me" does have its good moments, but they are relatively rare.

Ulan Bator In Ranks Of Most Rare, Exotic

ULAN BATOR, Mongolia (AP) – For the tourist who has been everywhere, there is still a last frontier: the People's Republic of Mongolia, where a Communist government eager for Western currency is stepping up efforts to attract foreign visitors.

Perhaps most famous for its 10-day, $10,000 hunting expeditions for wealthy foreign sportsmen, the isolated and mountainous country between the Soviet Union and China is trying to appeal now to less moneyed visitors. But Mongolia's distant location and limited tourist facilities will probably keep it for many years in the category of a rare and exotic spot for a vacation.

It is some 3,000 miles to the capital city of Ulan Bator from Moscow, the main transit point for visitors coming from the west. There are also trains from Moscow and Peking. The $350 plane ticket from Moscow covers transportation to Irkutsk, Siberia, on the Soviet airline Aeroflot and then a one-hour hop into Ulan Bator on a 50-seat Air Mongolia plane where passengers share the cabin with cargo.

In Ulan Bator, the national tourist organization – known as Juulchin – offers a single hotel room, three meals and a full-time interpreter-escort for $52.50 a day.

Ulan Bator's palaces, Buddhist temple and museums can be seen quickly, however. According to Sedgochogyin Luvsandash, deputy general director of Juulchin, the 8-10 day stay of an average western tourist usually includes a variety of outlying points.

Hunters usually go to areas where mountain sheep with horns up to 70 inches long are the big prize.

Other tourists travel 400 miles to the Gobi Desert, at about $25 a day, where they can live in native huts, visit sand dunes, meet cattle breeders and ride camels. Additional tourist spots are Karakorum, Ghengis Khan's 13th century capital 120 miles southwest of Ulan Bator and the Terelj tourist center in mountain country near the capital.

Last year about 5,000 foreign tourists came to Mongolia, compared to 2,000 five years ago and only a few hundred 10 years ago. There are about 500 Americans per year and 60 hunters.

"A hundred percent of the hunters come back with animals," Luvsandash said in an interview. "No one comes back with empty hands. They're all satisfied."

Juulchin, which has no offices overseas, is trying to work out additional contacts with Western tourist agencies. Next year, for the first time, it will start to send the agencies its own brochures about Mongolia to distribute directly to their clients.

Even Juulchin guides tend to warn visitors about extra charges that can substantially increase the cost of their tour here. Although a guide in Ulan Bator is free with the daily package, a car and driver to take the guide and his visitors around the city is not.

This winter, the rate for the car was 80 cents per mile.

A foreign hunter who shot one mountain sheep found that his bullet had gone through his target after killing it and killed a second sheep, breaking a hunting quota law. The fine was $5,000, payable immediately in hard currency.

Some travelers have had difficulty using Western travelers' checks in Ulan Bator and experienced visitors usually take a good supply of U.S. dollars or other Western currency in cash.

Despite the Mongolian interest in earning foreign exchange from tourism, however, Luvsandash claimed national pride also motivates Mongolians to try to increase the number of visitors.

Tribal, Family Ties Traced For Many Through Ghana Source

CAPE COAST CASTLE, GHANA, WEST AFRICA – The great castles European powers built along this nation's sea coast are underlain by large dungeons where slaves were held until the slave ships arrived.

It is a chilling experience to stand now in the wet darkness where generations of slaves were held in brutal confinement. Air holes near the ceiling served as listening tubes for their captors and narrow windows screened by massive bars let only thin slices of the African sun penetrate the deep caverns.

Electric lights are strung through the chambers to assist the visitors and a fetish shrine is kept by people in the area in memory of the Africans sent to the western world.

American blacks come here to search out the threads to their ancestral origins. They find fragmentary clues in facial and body characteristics, perhaps a name, a scrap of a song, a family story passed on for generations. Reliable specifics are hard to find. American whites discover the realities of a business scarcely mentioned in their history textbooks.

A pre-eminent authority is Dr. A. Van Dantzig who teaches history at the University of Ghana in Legon, near Accra.

He notes that none of the 50 or so forts, castles and lodges built along the Gold Coast – Ghana's name before independence – was built for the slave trade.

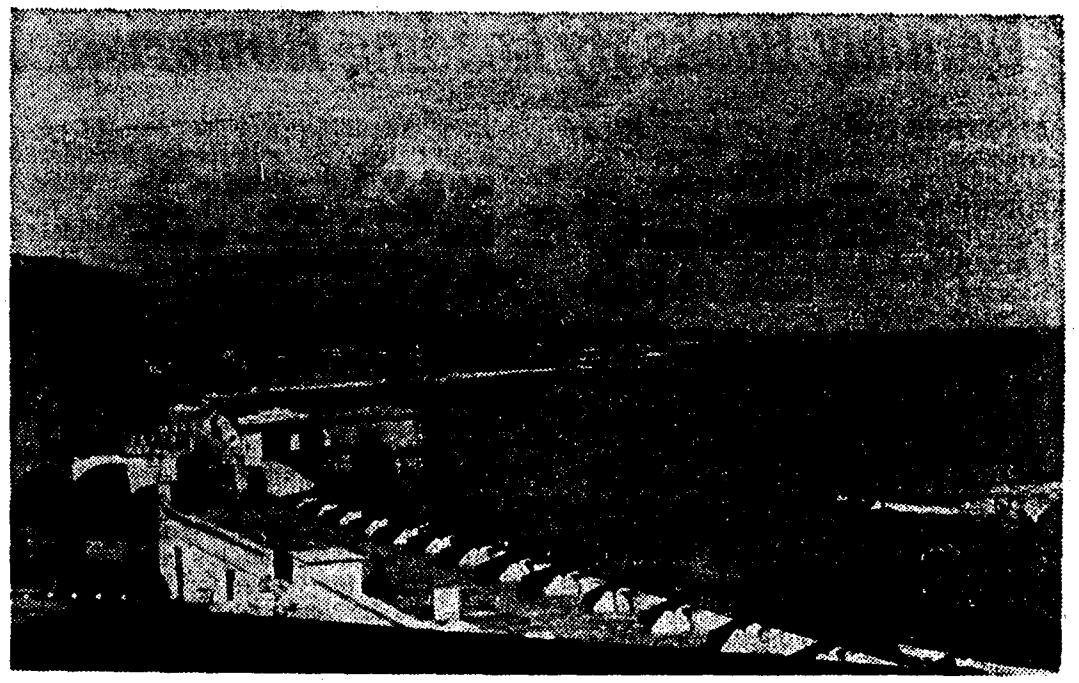
The Europeans came here for gold and it was the principal business for 200 years after the Portugese built a castle near here at Elmina in 1482. That castle's massive hulk and protective moats were a reaction to the European fear of the Turks who had recently taken Constantinople, establishing a bridgehead on the European continent. Elmina's size and strength made it appropriate for its later use as a slave castle.

The Dutch captured Elmina in 1637 and after an unsuccessful attempt to make gold mining profitable, turned to slavery, a strong custom in the region.

By 1680, Dr. Van Dantzig writes, "the slave trade in this area had become a large business and by 1720, slaving exceeded the traffic in gold."

Slavery continued at a high level until its abolition in the early 1800's.

The castles then under British control became an effective tool in the suppression of slavery and they were a refuge for people in the area when groups from the interior came on slaving raids. The slave trade continued on a regional basis until well into the 20th century.



"It is difficult," Dr. Van Dantzig writes, "to say from which areas most of the slaves came. In the early 18th century, the short-lived Akwamu empire in southeast Ghana was the main slave-supplier, selling victims of internal wars and from conquered areas.

"Later, the Ashanti became the main supplier, selling slaves from their northern borderlands (Gonja, Dagomba, Mamprugu) while they often asked payment in slaves from tributaries all over central Ghana.

"There were also a number of coastal people (Ahanta, Fante, Ga, Adangbe, Ewe) who were sold as slaves on account of crimes or were pawned for a debt not paid in time."

The trading, raiding, migratory customs of many of the people make contemporary efforts to trace origins very difficult. Other hazards to geneological detective work are presented by the slaves' custom, according to Dr. Van Dantzig, of placing people from the coastal area, especially the Fantes, who knew European languages, in command of other slaves. Those "bombas" became influential people on both sides of GHANA LANDMARK – Cape Coast Castle's huge gun battery overlooks the Atlantic Ocean and fishermen bringing their nets ashore, a scene unchanged since the British built this seat of colonial power in the 17th century. Under the guns is a series of large dungeons in which slaves were held until slave ships anchored off the coast. In the early 19th century, when the traffic in trans-Atlantic slavery was suppressed, the castle became a refuge for the local population when slaving parties came on raids from the interior. The castle is now a museum, a comfortable half-day trip from Accra, the capital of Ghana.

Check Your Coins

By LEE MARTIN, N.L.G.

How many items can you buy for one cent? It's almost impossible to buy anything with our smallest denomination! "Penny" candy now costs at least two cents. A stick of chewing gum which was once available for a cent is rarely sold individually and would probably sell for at least three cents. Even parking meters, once the bastion of the copper coin, are now practically unanimous in demanding a nickel, dime or quarter.

Among the items purchased in a test were two nails, a piece of string (very small), a stamp, a washer, a piece of paper, plus a plastic toy. To put it mildly, none of the purchases was important enough to demand retention of the cent as a unit of commerce.

If you are able to buy something for a cent, won't you drop me a line? Write Lee Martin, Box 667, Beaumont, California 92223. It will make an interesting column and I assure you will be a challenging experience for you.

Should the cent be retained? It's a nostalgic bit of Americana. The Lincoln image on the coin has been around since 1909 although the reverse was changed in 1959. With the price of copper apparently going to surpass the face value of the coin in 1980 (if labor is included in the costs), it seems likely that the cent as we know it will become a memory.

Another alloy may be produced in its place. Copper appears destined to join silver as a memory. Aluminum coins from other nations are lightweight and easily damaged but they probably are forerunners of what you will be using in 1980 unless inflation reverses itself.

The common date Lincoln cents made prior to 1959 are seldom seen in circulation. They're detectable by the Wheatline reverse instead of the Memorial reverse seen on the current coins.

Dealers are charging at least a dollar a roll for common cents with a Wheatline reverse and I've seen prices at $2 or $3 a roll depending upon the course. It all adds up to collector demand for a coin regarded as too common to pay attention to just a few years ago. It's the same situation we once faced with our 90% silver coins which now bring at least three times face value.

With the excitement of the Lincoln cent, a natural question comes to mind. Should you store bags of cents in the hope of future profits? A single answer is impossible. Copper tarnishes easily and doesn't store well. Bags of copper coins produce no revenue and the money in a bank does. However, the possibility that Lincoln cents in ten years from now will be exceptional investments might counter the theory that ordinary copper coins are poor investments.

If you decide to store cents, select uncirculated ones or if you intend to take older coins from circulation, choose those that are in the best condition. When the time comes to sell, you will find buyers; but if worn coins are offered to a collector, he will look elsewhere.

The most logical action is to visit a local coin dealer and buy the short mintage coins. They are reasonably priced because today's market is relatively inactive. When the cents actually are replaced, that would be the time to sell whatever purchases are made today.

Our Lincoln cents are sixty-seven years old. It's doubtful if they will live to the ripe old age of seventy. Owning them may help your Social Security!

STAMPS

A modification in ordering first day cancellations of new U.S. stamps will go into effect with the first new issue of 1977. The commemorative on top of the year's listing is the "Washington at Princeton" stamp scheduled for release on Jan. 3 at Princeton, N.J., to hail the 200th anniversary of the victory by Gen. Washington's forces ending the successful New Jersey campaign.

Beginning with this issuance on Jan. 3, collectors have the option of obtaining the first day covers in two ways. They may use the regular request system of enclosing the proper remittance with orders – or the new system which is almost a "do-it-yourself" program.

Under the new option, collectors may purchase their own stamps at their local post offices and affix the stamps to their own envelopes. Within 15 calendar days after the first day of issuance, the envelope must be forwarded to the Postmaster – in this case it is the Postmaster, Princeton, N.J. 08540 – for cancellation and return through the mail.

By affixing their own stamps, collectors have control over centering, perforations and arrangement of the stamps. Since the stamps are already affixed, the processing system at the first day city is simplified and the Postal Service can provide faster return of the envelopes to the customer. Also, the individual ordering the stamps does not have to get a money order to cover the cost of the items involved.

The first stamp on the U.S. agenda for 1977 has a basic design based on the 1779 portrait by Charles Willson Peale, who fought at Princeton as a first lieutenant with the Philadelphia militia. The painting shows George Washington in full uniform, standing with one hand resting lightly on a captured cannon. In the right background, an orderly holds a horse. Also noted is a flag with a circle of 13 stars. In the distance at the left, Hessian prisoners are being marched from Princeton's Nassau Hall.

History buffs will recall the famous Washington campaign. After the historic crossing of the Delaware and the defeat of the Hessians at Trenton on Dec. 26, 1776, Washington again crossed the Delaware and outmarched Lord Cornwallis to set up the decisive triumph at Princeton.

Beneath the painting, in one line of type, appears, "Washington at Princeton 1777 by Peale." Below that is "US Bicentennial 13 cents." The lettering is the same as previous Bicentennial series stamps based on famous paintings.

If you would prefer the new system of affixing your own stamps, here is what you must do. Address your envelope as desired. You may use the peelable return labels or write the address in pencil or pen. Stamps must be affixed in the upper right corner of the envelope, approximately 1/4 inch from the top and 1/4 inch from the right edge. Return addresses should be placed low and to the left.

Orders must be postmarked by Jan. 18 and should be addressed to: "First Day Cancellations, Postmaster, Princeton, N.J. 08540." No remittance is required.

For the regular method, as collectors have done in the past, enclose your remittance to cover the cost of the stamps to be affixed. Address your order to: "Washington at Princeton Stamp, Postmaster, Princeton, N.J. 08540." Do not send cash or stamps.

It will be interesting to find out how many collectors will opt for the new method.

Disc brakes are reported by the National Autmobile Club to be brakes that are operated by the pressure of brake pads against a steel disc.

basically, you fear the criticism of others, seen in the t loops.

Your shyness can be healed but you are the healer.

It's through your own efforts and desire that you have to rearrange your thinking. Basic is that worn-out fact that you have to push out to be with people. I would suggest the YWCA in your community for a starter because your writing says you have a vital need for physical activity, seen in the ballooned p loops. They are a warning signal of your need to flex your muscles. Participation in sports offered by this organization would not only satisfy this bodily need, but would have a way of blowing out a lot of the dusty shyness which is clogging your personality. With your eye on the ball, you can keep your mind off yourself.

True, it's all easier said than done. The first few weeks will be painful but don't give up. You have to hang in and force yourself to mingle, if you want to get well.

When you feel unsure of yourself, while recuperating, just smile. This is very disarming.

But, most importantly, reevaluate the importance of what has happened to you in the past as compared to what you want to be now and in the future. You have a good analytical mind, seen in the v formations along the line. Use it to examine your future rewards instead of picking your ego to the bone.

You can overcome your shyness if you do something about it. Thousands of others before you have done it. You can do it, too.

San Bernardino County Parks Offer Wide Opportunity For All

The Christmas rush is over, and many people are looking for wide open spaces to spend a few days of fun and relaxation. Some of the best places to enjoy leisure time activities can be found within San Bernardino County's Regional Park System, and the time to enjoy them is now.

San Bernardino County operates a network of nine regional parks. Each facility has a personality of its own, offering a wide variety of recreational opportunities, and open all year long.

Prado Regional Park is the newest facility the county operates, having just opened in October of this year. Located in the Chino-Ontario vicinity, this park may be reached by taking the Euclid Avenue exit off Interstate Route 10 and following it south for 8 miles to the entrance gate. The park can also be reached from Highway 71 by traveling 3 miles north on Euclid Avenue.

Once inside, there are many features to enhance the park visitor's stay. Several individual and group picnicking areas border Prado's two ponds and many open play areas. For overnight stay, a modern 50-unit campground provides a chance to get away from it all, "close to home." Across Euclid Avenue, golf enthusiasts can enjoy El Prado Golf Course with its two 18-hole championship courses, pro shop, and restaurant.

Another close-to-home recreation facility is Cucamonga-Guasti Regional Park. Located in the vicinity of Ontario, this park may be reached by taking the Archibald Avenue exit off Interstate 10 and following the sign one block to the park entrance.

Fishing is the name of the game during Cucamonga-Guasti's winter months. From November to April, the park's two lakes are stocked regularly with Rainbow Trout. Fishermen will also find Channel Catfish the year round. Those who wish to explore the water at a leisurely pace, may rent a pedal or rowboat in the park's larger lake. Family, group, or club picnics are always a favorite pastime, and the park contains numerous picnic areas. Each site comes complete with its own table and barbecue.

Glen Helen Regional Park was the first facility planned and developed by the County. Opened in 1968, its lakes, trails, and campground encompass 500 acres in scenic Cajon Pass. Located 10 miles north of San Bernardino, the park can be reached by taking Interstate 15 to the Devore Road exit and following the signs one mile west to the park entrance.

Fishing is also a major pastime at this park. The facility contains two large lakes and several small ponds. The lakes are stocked with Rainbow Trout and Catfish.

Another popular feature of the park is its ecology trail. Winding through a heavily wooded area, this section features several varieties of wildlife and plant growth.

A grassy picnic area is located along the shore of the park's largest lake. It features several individual sites, along with areas accommodating large groups.

The next park, Mojave River Forks, is primarily a campground facility. Located ten miles northeast of Silverwood Lake on California Highway 173 via Highway 138, Mojave River Forks is situated in the Summit Valley area.

The fully equipped campground is a favorite spot for weekend boaters utilizing Silverwood Lake. Totaling 90 sites, the park features 25 complete hookup sites and one large group camping area.

Through Cajon Pass and onto the high desert, the next stop is Mojave Narrows Regional Park. Located in the Mojave River Basin, and three miles south of Victorville, the park may be reached by taking the Bear Valley Road exit off Interstate 15 and following the signs to the park entrance.

The Narrows offers fishing 12 months a year in the Horseshoe Lake. Anglers can either try their luck from the shore, or rent a boat and fish in deeper waters. Several individual and group picnic sites are scattered throughout the area. Each one comes complete with table and barbecue. A recent addition in the park's 800 acre wildlife area is a specially designed trail for the handicapped. This competely paved pathway winds through a heavily wooded area for almost a mile, along which visitors may see several types of plants and animals.

Camping clubs will enjoy a new 87-unit campground located within the park and near Horseshoe Lake. This facility, complete with restrooms and hot showers, provides a good basecamp for restful weekends and club get-togethers.

Calico Ghost Town is perhaps the best known regional park, having been part of the system since Walter Knott gave it to the county in 1966.

A silver mining boom town of the 1880's, Calico can be found 10 miles northeast of Barstow, just off Interstate Route 15. The townsite has been restored in the vein of its historical past and offers the visitor a view of the wild west during its heyday.

Today, one can walk the tunnels of Maggie's Mine, ride a tram and railroad, visit the museum or the Mystery Shack, and even participate in an 1880 stage show at the Calikage Playhouse. There are many interesting shops and food parlours, where varieties of western style goods, snacks, and merchandise may be bought. For extended stays, there's a modern 110-unit campground nestled in a secluded canyon below the town, offering a centrally located basecamp for desert explorations of nearby Calico Dig, Doran Canyon, and Rainbow Basin.

Just down the road from Calico Ghost Town, a truly unique regional park facility to be found anywhere is the Early Man Archaeological Site. Known as "The Calico Dig," this complex consists of two master pits where discoveries have pushed man's existense on this continent back at least 50,000 years. The Calico Dig is located six miles north of Calico Ghost Town, and free guided tours are available every day of the week, except Tuesday.

For nature lovers, Morongo Regional Park, located in Morongo Valley, is a 160-acre wildlife reserve. The park entrance is located just east of Highway 62 in Morongo Valley. Nature study is the main pastime at this facility. Left in a natural state, Morongo is home for over 200 species of birds and 150 varieities of plant life. An interconnecting trail system runs throughout the park's many varied environmental communities. Here, one may get a close-up look at anything from a Vermillion Fly Catcher to a wild Turkey Vulture.

The final stop within the county's park system is Park Moabi Marina, located on the Colorado River, 11 miles southeast of Needles off Interstate 40. Moabi is considered by many as the railhead of the lower Colorado.

There are several ways to enjoy one's stay at this facility. Fishermen will discover Catfish, Bass, Trou, Trout, and Bluegill awaiting their hooks, and for those wishing to discover the River, houseboats may be rented at the Marina for weekend or week-long cruises. Topock Gorge, beginning just beyond the park boundaries, is the most spectacular Colorado scenery to be found south of the Grand Canyon. Maobi's facilites also include a fully equipped campground, boat storage, launching ramp, and a general store where groups will find everything needed for an overnight or extended visit.

World Team Tennis Due

By ART PARRA
Register Staff Writer

It just seems like yesterday when the Virginia Slims Tennis Classic of Mission Viejo was part of the "You've come a long-way, baby" series.

Unfortunately, the appearance of world class women players in our south county area didn't last long. More than adequate crowds were on hand for the outdoor meet, but the biting cold weather turned out to be too much for the delicate scantily clad netset girls.

The popular Virginia Slims tour, beginning its eighth year this week with a tournament winding up today at Washington D.C., will not be in Southern California until February 14-20 when the Slims play at the Los Angeles Sports Arena.

Stops in Hollywood, Florida; Houston, Texas; Minneapolis, Minn.; Seattle, Wash.; Chicago, Ill. all preceed the southland invasion.

After Los Angeles it will be tournaments in Detroit, Mich.; San Francisco, Calif.; Dallas, Texas; Philadelphia, Pa. and climaxed by the $150,000 Virginia Slims Championship to be held at Madison Square Garden in New York. This classic has been held at the Los Angeles Sports Arena in the past. The power of Madison Avenue is obvious again.

Each of the regular season tournaments are worth $100,000, up $25,000 from last year. The Virgina Slims Championship is considered the first jewel in the Triple Crown of Women's Tennis and only eight players will qualify. Points earned in the Silver Ginny singles action wpll determine the eight finalists.

Looking back over the first seven years of the Virginia Slims Circuit it is quite obvious this is a different game from the one played at Houston with a single, 8-player, $5,000 tournament. The increase in prize money is indicative of fan interest, spurring the boom. Last season, the circuit attracted 339,920 paying customers. This represented a 37-percent increase over 1975.

Chris Evert is expected to dominate again this year. Virginia Wade, Martina Navratilova and Rosemary Casals can threaten but that is just about all. Evonne Goolagong won't see action this season due to a scheduled arrival from Mr. Stork.

This is one year many of the young players being developed will start making some big money. It's a cinch they have generated new excitement in women's tennis. Sue Barker (20); Terry Holladay (21); Mima Jausovec (20); Natasha Chmyreva (18) are the best from a crop of outstanding young players.

Several others will bear watching. Included are Regina Marsikova (18) (Czechslovakia); Marise Kruger (18) (South Africa); and Greer Stevens (19), Beth Norton (19), Kathy May (20) (all of U.S.).

Seeing the Slims action for the first time this year will be the communities of Seattle and Minneapolis. Hollywood, Fla. is back on the trail for the first time since 1974.

BUFFUMS-KODEL BACK

Orange County tennis clubs, public and private, will rejoice with the news released this week from Buffums' Department Stores.

The Third annual Buffums-"Kodel" Mixed Doubles Tennis Tournament is scheduled for April 15-18 at the Billie Jean King Tennis Center in Long Beach. Once again it will be a co-sponsored affair by Buffums' and Eastman Chemical Products, Inc., marketers of Kodel polyester fiber.

Gary Brown, tournament director, has announced all clubs, parks and schools in the Palos Verdes, Long Beach and Orange County area are invited to run preliminary tournaments until April 1. Players may enter free of charge, regardless of ability but must be 19 years of age or older.

The winning mixed doubles from each club preliminary will then represent respective affiliations in the April championship tournament. (Players should contact their club, park or school for further information.)

In addition, the winning team will represent the greater South Coast area in the fourth annual "Kodel Cup," a classic played in the east featuring winners from 24 cities throughout the nation.

"Kodel Cup" champions received a berth in the mixed doubles division of the U.S. Open at Forest Hills this fall.

Six Orange County teams took part in the action last year. Huntington Beach Tennis Club, Huntington Seacliff Tennis Club, Newport Shores, Westminster Tennis Club, California State University Fullerton andPromontory Point Tennis Club all participated.

Promontory Point, represented by Gail Glasgow and Dennis Trout came as close as possible to going all the way before losing in the final round to

Tequila Plant Guadalajara Attraction

The story of tequila goes back 103 years in Mexico, and its name is Sauza. The largest tequila producer and seller in that country is the Sauza company, whose plant outside Guadalajara is open for tours to the public.

But the ritual and public life of Mexicans have been closely associated with liquors made from the cactus for as long as Mexican history has been recorded. The Aztecs drank pulque, and tequila was the first spirit ever distilled in America. The Spanish introduced the refined product, and the Margarita, which was invented by Ensenada resident Daniel Negrete of El Grande Chaparral restaurant in that city was named for Negrete's girl friend. The reason, according to Sauza representatives who paid a recent visit to The Register, that people associate salt with the fiery liquid, is that Margarita always had salt with whatever she ate or drank. The Margarita was designed for use with a lime, but she added the salt. The salt stayed and today traditional Margaritas are served in chilled glasses encrusted with salt around the top.

These and other oddments came up when the Sauza people came to call. It is their job to popularize the Mexican drink here, and they have a musical trio that performed at the August opening of Las Case Tequilla in Roland Heights, out on Fullerton Road.

Virtually all Americans think it's cactus. Many residents of southwestern United States know it as the century plant, Mexicans call it mezcal or maguey, and botanists classify it as agave. But by whatever name it is known, only one of perhaps 400 species of this prolific plant produces one of the most famous spirits in the world: tequila.

Formerly consumed almost exclusively in Mexico – which is its sole producer – tequila is now exported to more than 70 countries throughout the world, including Russia. In the United Sates, which is the biggest customer by far, tequila has grown in popularity faster than any other liquor in recent years. The tequila vogue can be attributed to the advent of the famous Margarita cocktail, the liquor's great versatility, and the consumers' gradual shift toward lighter beverages. Mexico's romantic reputation probably is a factor, too. However, outside Mexico, little is known about tequila itself. Most people think that it is unusually potent, but the sober truth is that most tequila sold in this country is only 80 proof, or 40 per cent alcohol, which is about the lowest content of any hard liquor on the market.

The history of tequila goes back centuries before the Spaniards conquered Mexico in the 1500s, when the ancient Indians learned how to ferment the "honey water" of the maguey plant to make a mildly alcoholic beverage used primarily for religious occasions. The Spanish conquistadores, who favored stronger drink, began to distill the juice of the strange new plant and called the produce mezcal. The name tequila comes from the town of Tequila (named after an Indian tribe), located about 30 miles west of Guadalajara in the beautiful high country in the state of Jalisco. Technically, all tequila is mezcal, but not all mezcal is tequila – only that which comes from the general area of Tequila.

Tourists are welcome to tour the Sauza headquarters and bottling plant in Guadalajara Monday through Friday from 9:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m.; complimentary cocktails are served from noon to 1:30 p.m. (address: 3273 Av. Vallarta).

Ghana Families

the Atlantic while the people under them often came from different regions.

A further complication is that frequently slaves from Togo and Benin, the old Slave Coast, were brought to Elmina and Cape Coast to be held for shipment across the Atlantic.

He calculates that of the "widely accepted" estimate of 18 million Africans sold in slavery, perhaps one million came from what is now Ghana. Because of the castles' importance as West African trans-shipment ports, a larger number were actually shipped from here.

If the specific evidence of individual family connections has disappeared in centuries of ethnic movements, the atmosphere within these old castle walls will evoke strong images of the past.

In the great dungeon vaults a visitor senses the oppressive mood of that time and place when African sold African to European and the dungeons were periodically emptied to fill the holds of slave ships anchored off shore.

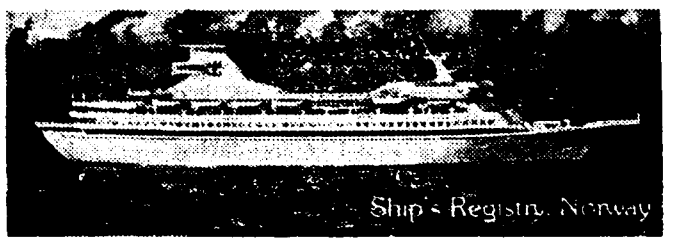
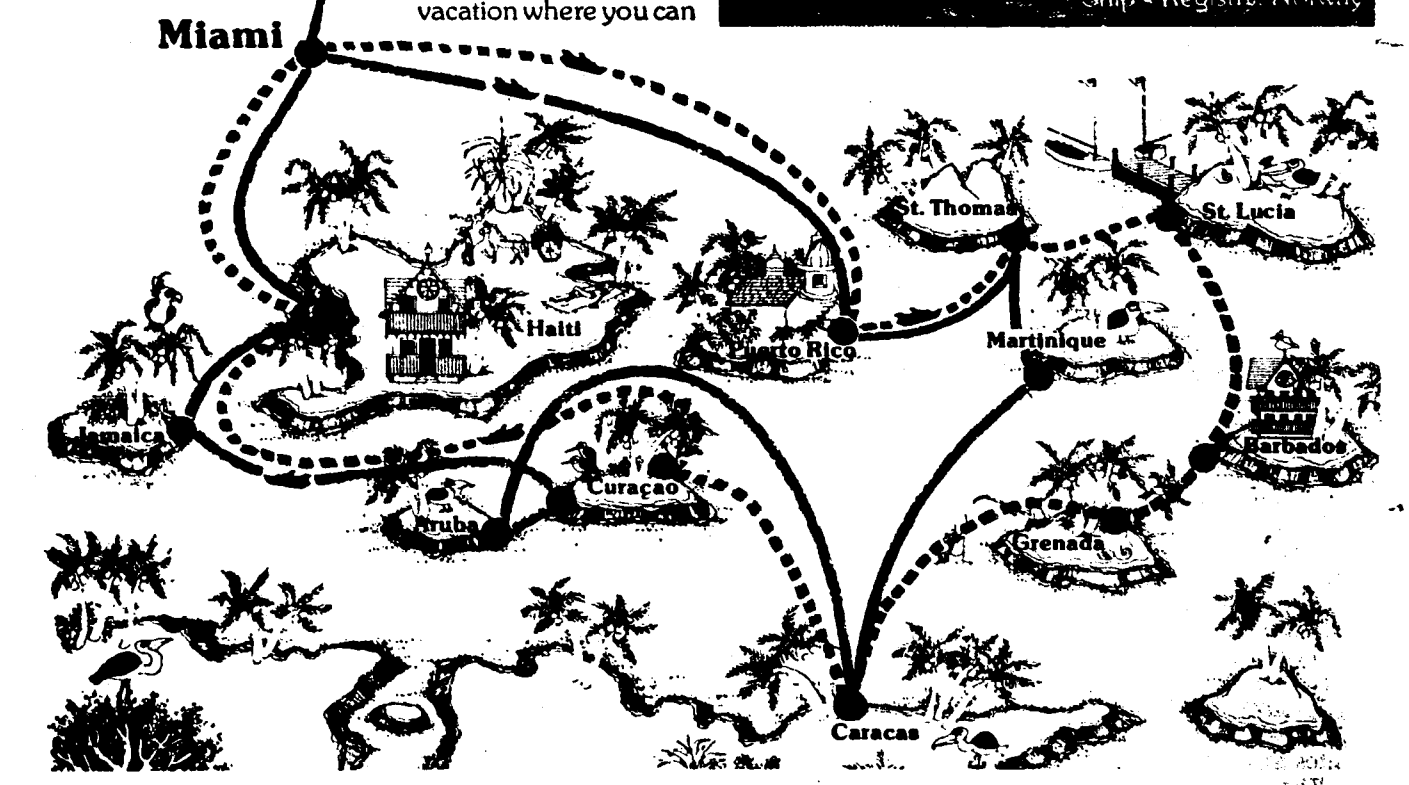
You'll see eight of the Caribbean's most asked-to-see islands. Places like St. Thomas, Curaçao and San Juan. Plus Caracas on the continent of South America.

You'll enjoy bathing by the seaside in a refreshing salt water pool. Almost an acre of deck under the gentle Caribbean sun. A dining room that's a Restaurant Francais one night, an English Pub the next. Entertainment that changes everytime we entertain. (You'll never see the same act twice. Unless you give it an encore.)

If you thirst for more, we have the top bar in the Caribbean: the Viking Crown Lounge—10 stories above the sea.



And a Royal Caribbean Air/Sea Cruise is one vacation where you can really unwind. Because you'll know what it's going to wind-up costing before you go.



Where else, for example, does the cost of your vacation include the cost of all your food and entertainment?

Fact is, our price includes a 14-day cruise, round-trip air fare to Miami, airline security charges, ground transportation in Miami, and all transportation and port taxes.

That's a lot of vacation for the money. So, see your travel agent. And tell 'em you want to take off for the Caribbean. On Sun Viking or Nordic Prince.

PIRATE'S COVE – Pirates once sailed from this small harbor of Polperro in Cornwall, England. The village became famous for its smugglers and a museum now commemorates their battles against British revenue agents.

Pirate Legends, Pride Live On In Quiet Cornwall, England

By Neil Morgan

POLPERRO, England – The seaports of Cornwall are mere slits in the cliffs. Sheltered within are the Cornishmen and their boats, each in their own way jaunty and heroic and secretive.

At the Three Pilchards, a quayside pub in Polperro, the local whom I treated to a pint laughed scornfully when I relayed an opinion expressed in a London newspaper that smuggling has all but disappeared from the Cornish coast.

"You have eyes of your own," he said. "Place yourself in a small boat off this coast here any night and see for yourself.

"You don't think these boats are out fishing for shark, do you? It's not far across this Channel to France, you know."

In Polperro, a Smugglers Museum memorializes the daring of coastal smugglers. They provide the prime commerce of these ports in the 18th and early 19th centuries.

"The smuggler is as active and daring today as ever he was in the past," proclaims an exhibit at the Smugglers Museum.

But British officials in London say that while this may be true, the action has moved to big city airports, where hard drugs and diamonds are the game.

The cargoes landed on the Cornish coast where brandy and wine, precious metals and lace, tea, even fisherman's salt from Portugal, brought in cheaper than it could be had at home when the salt tax was introduced in England late in the 18th century.

The smugglers were known as fair-traders, a nicety of phrase that derived as logically as the smugglers from their prior occupation as pirates. That role was tacitly encouraged by the Crown during the Hundred Years' War, when Cornish ports like Polperro supplied the ships to carry Plantagenet armies across the Channel.

Along the way they often found it convenient to board and loot or even sail home a French vessel as booty.

For Cornish pirates gone straight, smuggling seemed fair trade, and the phrase has remained.

The villains of the time were the British Revenue's "preventive men," who sought vainly to control smuggling on the Cornish coast until 1856, when the "Coast Guard Act was passed and the coast watch passed to the more efficient Admiralty.

The epitaph to the preventive men is etched in wood in the Smugglers Museum here: "Never were so few hated by so many."

Instead of following the suggestion of my cynical friend at the Three Pilchards, a proposal that seemed larded with hazard, I made a thoughtful tour of the Smugglers Museum.

It winds down through cellars that once served as stables for the pack ponies used to transport illicit merchandise from the waterfront to hiding places in houses and barns along the coast near here.

I found a reverent tribute to Tom Potter, Polperro's most famed smuggler, who was respected by all.

Potter's boat, a fast lugger called the Lottery, did battle off Looe one day with the preventive men, and one of the Revenue agents was killed.

In the manhunt that followed, Potter and others of the crew came ashore to visit their families at night.

They escaped detection until one crewman, Roger Toms, turned informer and identified Potter as the man who had fired the fatal shot.

In time a detachment of soldiers surprised Potter in his own cottage. Convicted of murder at the Old Bailey, he was hanged, and became forever a hero in Cornwall. To this coast.

Daphne du Maurier, who lives on this coast, writes that at Polperro, "the whole village engaged in smuggling, with small thought of dishonesty or shame. It was a part of life in which everyone joined, fishermen, blacksmith, farmer, and the Excise men themselves. Ships were built for the purpose in yards . . . above the harbour, and one vessel was so successful that she made 500 trips across to the Continent to bring back contraband."

Lakewood Tennis Club 6-3, 2-6, 6-4.

With the tremendous tennis activity in Orange County, there should be more than 30 teams taking part this year from Registerland alone. This would include tandems from the University of Irvine, Newport Beach Tennis Club, John Wayne Tennis Club, Saddleback Tennis Club, Mission Viejo, San Juan Capistrano, San Clemente, El Niguel, Lake Forest Santiago, Tustin, Friendly Hills, La Habra, Disneyland and many others.

Marquise de Sade's Town Quarters Posh Girls' School

Lawrence campus. But his summers are invariably spent in sunny Lacoste. "I always thought this would make the ideal place for a summer school for artists," says Pfriem, "but it took a long time to put it all together."

Students range in age anywhere from 16 to 60-plus. The older ones have a considerable disadvantage when trying to climb Lacoste's steep, cobbled roads. The majority are affluent, nubile 20-year olds, however, whose wardrobes consist of skimpy cut-off and halters and bikinis.

Probably only half know some French when they arrive. The remainder spend considerable attempting to learn — often in effective if not bizarre ways.

One particularly attractive girl went to the heart of the matter. She became the constant companion of the handsome, 30-ish mayor who spoke very little English. Upgrading her hold on the language, she became the envy of any number of others around her.

The mayor claims the summer visits of the students have "enlivened the intellectual life of Lacoste" which many admit seems to have "stopped with de Sade."

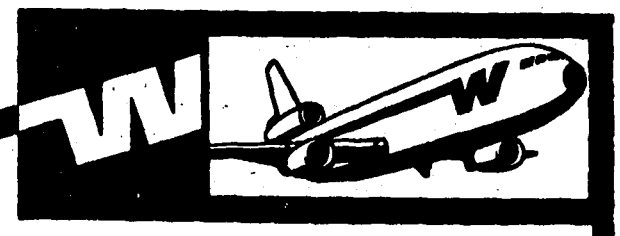
Pfriem's own terrace in the heart of town — and one with the most picturesque view — is the functioning center of the school. From it the artist's eye is teased by the crenellations of the chateau as well as the tile roofs and spires of nearby Bonnieux.

Adjoining studios are set up for a variety of art classes and the terraces provide space for models to pose, for visiting gurus to lecture and for an occasional student injured in Solex (motor bike) accidents to convalesce.

When life in the tiny town palls, there are excursions to surrounding towns, artists' studios, historic chapels for Gregorian chants and the local pizzeria, a small restaurant-motel carved out of the side of an old quarry.

Yet all the roads lead to the marquis' crumbling chateau. One is reminded of his dismay when he was incarcerated in a mental institution toward the end of his life. He wrote his notary, "what has happened to my poor castle? And to my park?"

"It wasn't demolished during the revolution," says M. Andre Bouer, the present owner in charge of renovation. "It was ransacked then, of furniture, paintings, tapestries, anything worth taking. But it wasn't until later in the 19th century that the farmers who owned it tore it up, mostly for firewood."



M. Bouer would like to see it restored so that it can become a place for free study for students of history and architecture.

Since both chateau and town are official French historical monuments, perhaps Bouer's dream, like Pfreim's, will eventually come true, although de Sade's remaining relatives in the area "would like his name effaced from the earth."

Other than the Sarah Lawrence students, Bouer has the help of a group of international students who work for two weeks at a time through the auspices of the Franco-American Committee for Educational Travel and Studies (FACETS).

They live in Lacoste's former jail, spend long, grueling days digging and carting heavy stones in the scorching sun. At night the music from their harmonicas and guitars floats through the sensuous air as an occasional seance is held in the shadow of the chateau under a full moon.

Although an unusual number of students know little about the marquis or his life, a visit to the town sparks the idea that one cannot live here long without finding out something about him or his ominous influence on Lacoste.

TRIP OF THE WEEK

Palm Spring - Where The Action Is

Each year Palm Springs assumes the proportions of a three ring circus as January and February are the best of the high season here.

This trip of the week is more of a calendar of events for those who might want to spend some time at the spa, or for those who need advance notice. Perhaps a winter vacation at Palm Springs is convenient. But make reservations early — everyone heads that way at this time of year.

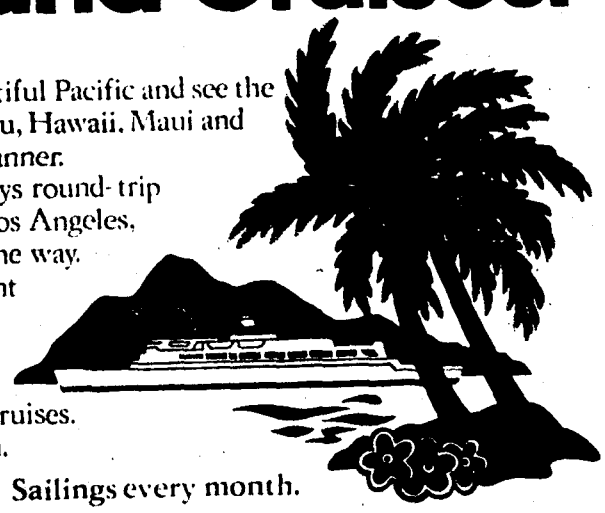
First major and colorful event, provided there is snow, are the sled dog races atop Mt. San Jacinto. Dates are Jan. 15-16 and 22-23, and more than 20 top dog teams compete, many of Orange County. Check with the Palm Springs Aerial tramway folks first, though. They're in the book. Call long-distance information operation for Palm Springs.

Each year Palm Springs stages its hunted Police Rodeo and Parade, which procession is always headed by film star, usually a local resident during the season. The parade will be held this year on Jan. 29 and the rodeo Jan. 29-30.

January will be hardly over before the famous and 18th annual Bob Hope Desert Golf Classic will be held. Dates are Feb. 9-13. The proximity of these two events makes Palm Springs look ideal for a winter vacation.

But the area is within two hours driving distance of almost any Orange County location, and may be reached via Highway 60 and Interstate 10 from Riverside to the Palm Springs cutoff, Highway 111.

Lake Cahuilla in Riverside County's newest park, features fishing, boating, swimming, picknicking areas with barbecues and tables and a concession stand. The lake is stocked by the fish and game people, and a license is required. Non-powered boats only are allowed on the lake. The park and lake are within easy driving distance of Palm Springs in Indio, south of Highway 111 on Jefferson Street. If staying in the area for a weekend, try stopping off at the lake for a quick look. Hours are open daily from 6 a.m. to 8 p.m. and admission is 50 cents per car. Fishing is $1 for adults, 50 cents for kids.



Also in the area is Desert Hot Springs with its variety of hot mineral pools and baths, several major date farms (Shields, and Sniff's, both on Highway 111 in Indio) the famed Cabot's Indian Pueblo in Desert Hot Springs (adm. $1 for adults, children 5-16, 50 cents), and the Moorten Botanical Gardens, 1701 S. Palm Canyon Dr.

The Palm Springs Desert Museum, 101 Museum, Palm Springs, is open September through June. Admission $1, but children, members and students are free. The museum has a 360 acres park called the Living Desert Preserve out in the Colorado Desert.

There are three and a half miles of guided desert trails, rare Big Horn Sheep can be seen in an adjacent enclosed compound. The preserve is nine miles from the center of Palm Springs at 47-900 Portola Ave., Take Highway 111 to Palm Desert, Portola is the third stop light coming from Palm Springs. Turn right on Portola, go about 1 1/2 miles and the preserve is on the left. Adults pay $1 for admission, but children under high school age are free if accompanied by an adult.

In the preserve are gardens, a palm oasis and a bird display.

Q. Is there any possibility that Gerald Ford will run for the U.S. Senate? Have any former U.S. Presidents run for legislative office?—C.B. Branch, Alexandria, Va.

A. Ford will retire to write his memoirs, play golf, take an active role in the Republican party, possibly accept a college presidency if it is offered. John Quincy Adams, the only President's son to also become President, returned at age 65 to serve in the House of Representatives. John Tyler, the first U.S. Vice President to ascend to the office of President through the death of the Chief Executive (William Henry Harrison), was elected on Nov. 7, 1861, to the House of Representatives of the Confederate Congress. In 1872 former President Andrew Johnson ran for the U.S. Senate from Tennessee but was defeated. In 1874, however, he ran again and won, the only former President to become a U.S. Senator. He died a few months after serving in the Senate.

ORSON WELLES

Q. Is Orson Welles incurably fat, or why won't he reduce at one of the noted hospital-run "fatty clinics"? Does he wear those ugly outfits to hide his obesity? — J. J. Horton, Heath Springs, S.C.

A. Welles has been obese for decades and sees no reason to change. The clothes he wears permit him to maneuver.

Q. What's the nation's biggest industrial corporation? — Roberta Graham, Denver, Colo.

A. American Telephone and Telegraph Corporation (AT&T) is worth $80.2 billion, more than any other corporation in the world. It employs 940,000 people, has 3 million shareholders, comprises 23 operating phone companies in addition to Western Electric Co. and Bell Telephone Laboratories.

Q. When Lady Bird Johnson contributed $1000 to the reelection campaign of Texas Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, how did she list her occupation—as housewife?—R.L., Ft. Worth, Tex.

A. According to the Federal Election Commission, she listed her occupation as "rancher."

Q. Has Harold Wilson, former Prime Minister of Great Britain, ever described Idi Amin, President of Uganda, as "a demented, syphilitic nut"?—N. Rich, Lawrence, Kan.

A. Not exactly. In a television interview, Wilson once described Amin as "a nutter," an English colloquialism meaning mentally unstable.

"MISS LILLIAN" CARTER HUGS SON JIMMY

Q. Did President-elect Jimmy Carter's mother, "Miss Lillian," ever work for Joseph P. Kennedy, father of President John F. Kennedy?—Lee Brown, Dallas.

A. Mrs. Lillian Carter never worked for Joseph P. Kennedy.

Q. What disposition has been made of Robert Waterfield Jr.—the son of actress Jane Russell—who was charged with manslaughter?—L. V. L., Chicago.

A. Robert "Bucky" Waterfield, 20, adopted son of Jane Russell and football quarterback Robert Waterfield, was convicted some weeks ago of killing 26-year-old Mexican farm laborer Oscar Hernandez, who was dancing in a bar in Santa Barbara County, Cal. Waterfield, one of Miss Russell's three adopted children, claimed he had downed 24 cans of beer before firing off seven shots from his gun and could not remember the incident. Before sentencing him on a manslaughter charge, the judge in Santa Maria, Cal., hearing the case said that young Waterfield "appears to have a serious alcoholic drinking problem." Young Robert has been ordered to undergo three months of psychiatric observation before receiving a sentence.

Q. When Philip Agee, the former CIA spy, worked for the U.S. government in South America, did he use his real name or a cover name?—H. T., Dallas.

A. Agee worked for the CIA in South America under the cover name Jeremy S. Hodapp.

Q. Cindy Breakspeare, the 21-year-old girl from Jamaica who won the Miss World beauty contest—is it true that she is a masseuse in a Kingston bathhouse and that she lives with a guy who has fathered nine children by seven different mothers?—L.T., Key West, Fla.

A. Before she won the Miss World beauty contest, Cindy Breakspeare, 21, ran a health club in Kingston, Jamaica, where she went steadily with Bob Marley, a musician she describes as "just one of my boyfriends." Marley, 29, son of a British army captain and a Jamaican mother, is separated from his wife Rita, 29, has nine children by seven different women.

Q. Did Winston Churchill, the late Prime Minister of Great Britain, ever declare bankruptcy?—Dana Fox, Seattle, Wash.

A. Churchill was about to declare personal bankruptcy in 1938, had made preliminary arrangements to sell his home, Chartwell, to pay off $150,000 in debts. He was saved by Sir Henry Strakosch (1871-1943), an Austrian-born South African gold magnate who became a British subject in 1907. Through the intervention of Brendan Bracken, Churchill's secretary, Sir Henry took over Churchill's debts, managed his investments, let Churchill keep Chartwell, which he had purchased in 1922 for 5000 pounds.

Q. Francis Gary Powers, the spy flier who was shot down over Russia in 1960, thus breaking up the Eisenhower-Khrushchev summit meeting—is he still alive and well?—B. J. Jenkins, Ft. Jackson, S.C.

A. Powers is a helicopter pilot for KNBC-TV in Los Angeles. After Powers was shot down over the Soviet Union, he was tried in Moscow, sentenced to jail for 10 years but released after two in exchange for a Soviet spy we had captured in Brooklyn, N.Y.

Margaret Truman Daniel and husband Clifton Daniel, associate editor of The New York Times. They have four sons, who range in age from 19 to 10. She has four books, too; her new one is "Women of Courage."

Margaret Truman Daniel— An Independent Lady From Independence

by Lloyd Shearer

LOS ANGELES.

President Harry Truman's only child, Margaret Truman Daniel, 52, breezed through here the other week, plugging her new book, Women of Courage.

It is a collection of profiles of a dozen American women—some famous, others unknown, but all with guts and gumption.

"The book took me two years," she explained, "and it shouldn't have taken so long, but I had to commute between Washington, D.C., and New York City to get the research done with Alice and Tom Fleming," who helped organize the book.

Mrs. Daniel is the wife of Clifton Daniel, former Washington, D.C., bureau chief for The New York Times, who was recently transferred back to New York and will retire from The Times this September. She is also the mother of four sons: Clifton Truman, 19; William Wallace, 17; Harrison Gate, 13, and Thomas Washington, 10. Clifton works for the CBS news department "and simply loves it." William and Harrison attend prep school. And Thomas attends a boy's school in New York.

None of Mrs. Daniel's children has ever attended a public school, "and I'd rather not invade their privacy by telling you where they go," she says. "Our oldest son went to college for a year but then took a year off to work for CBS. He lives with us in New York [a Park Avenue triplex]."

Women of Courage is Mrs. Daniel's fourth book. "I wrote this one because my publisher thought it was a good idea, my agent thought it was a good idea, and I thought it was a good idea," she explains. "Now I'm busy promoting it. You just can't write a book nowadays without going out and selling it, too."

Mrs. Daniel is a "soft-seller." She claims to be stubborn and opinionated ("much more opinionated than my father was"). But she refuses to confirm or deny that she voted for Gerald Ford.

"I'm a private citizen," she declared. "I've got a right to vote, and nobody needs to know how. It's just sort of a principle with me not to tell.

"What I will say is that I'm always optimistic about our system of government. It was really put to the test with Watergate—and it works. We came through. I think it was Chief Justice Burger who said, after he had sworn in Mr. Ford, 'Well, now we know the system works.'"

Margaret Truman—who delayed marriage and subsequent motherhood until she was 32—lived in the White House for seven years, a time she once regarded as a "mild form of imprisonment."

'The Great White Jail'

"I used to call it 'The Great White Jail,'" she recalled, "but it's much more of a jail now than it was then [1945-52]. For example, no Secret Service agent accompanied me when I went out on a date. My gentleman friend would merely drive up the White House roadway to the front door, park his car and come in. He'd walk through the entrance, take the elevator up to the second floor and just collect me.

"And when I attended George Washington University I had no Secret Service protection, either. As a matter of fact, there was very little gasoline during the war, and I rode the bus to school for two and a half years. Later on I got a limousine to go to college in, and I thought that was beautiful. But while I was on campus I was just another student. No Secret Service protection—except one time.

"Charlie Ross, who was my father's press secretary, decided they wanted pictures of Margaret Truman going to school. 'Let's do it and get it over with,' Charlie suggested. So I agreed. But one of my professors was kind of fussed about the whole thing. He didn't like it very much, having photographers in his class. He was Dr. Sheppard and he taught English literature and he was a wonderful teacher. He had a 75th birthday—or maybe it was his 70th—not too long ago, and I wrote him a note. Anyway, there was one picture of me sitting in class listening to him. And it was circulated everywhere. Soon he started getting letters from students he hadn't heard from for 20 or 30 years."

Margaret Truman majored in history when she attended college, "because my dad was a history buff, and he really taught me about 50 percent of all the history I learned—at least 50 percent," she says. "He had the most fantastic knowledge of history of any man I've ever met." And that includes her husband of 20 years, Clifton Daniel—from Zebulon, N.C., once with the Associated Press, and a very widely traveled and knowledgeable man, indeed.

Margaret Truman, who went to Washington at age 9 and lived there off and on for 21 years, abandoned a concert singing career in the 1950's and conducted her own radio show, Authors in the News, for seven years. She remembers those years fondly and says, "I'd like to have my own show again, a general TV interview show. I know I'm asking for trouble, because it's a lot more work than radio. But I wouldn't mind that. There's so much you can do with videotape nowadays. You can tape so far ahead. And I really have enough time to do it."

Mrs. Daniel has a cleaning lady who comes in twice a week and a housekeeper who's a good cook. "And, besides, Clifton is a very good cook, and I have a theory about cooking which holds that any idiot who can read can cook. There are some people who cook much better than others—like my husband, who is not an idiot by any means, and Craig Claiborne and Jim Beard, who are superb cooks. But they love it. Clifton likes to cook on a weekend after I get all the ingredients together."

Margaret Truman Daniel has never been content with being "only a housewife and mother."

"I remember one time," she narrates, "when I met Winston Churchill and Jan Christiaan Smuts, the great statesman from South Africa. Mr. Smuts was very blue-eyed and funny and said to me, 'What are you studying in college?' And I answered, 'History and English literature.' And he said, 'No domestic science?' And I said, 'Domestic science? What on earth is that?' And he said, 'Shouldn't you learn to become a mother, a wife and how to cook and take care of a house?' And I promptly answered, 'No, sir. That's the last thing I want to do.' In those days I didn't get autographs from famous people often, but I wanted his. So he wrote on his placecard 'To the future domestic scientist' and signed it."

'Not a blind voter'

Although Mrs. Daniel is a registered Democrat, she says, "I'm not a blind voter. From time to time I've voted for a Republican." Nelson Rockefeller is one. New York Sen. Jacob Javits is another. Mrs. Daniel was also happy to note how both Jimmy Carter and Gerald Ford invoked her father's name, record and reputation for integrity in their Presidential campaigns. Of the Truman renaissance, she says, "I've thought about it quite a lot, and frankly I haven't been able to decide. My dad died the day after Christmas in 1972, but I'm glad he lived long enough to see a reassessment of his accomplishments. One day he read a very nice editorial about himself in the Kansas City Star. And I said, 'Did you see that editorial?' And he responded with, 'I must have done something wrong!' The Star never was for him."

A family gathering in Bermuda in 1961: Former President Harry Truman and wife Bess pay lap service to grandsons Clifton and William, then 4 and 2, while parents Margaret Truman Daniel and Clifton Daniel proudly look on.

Mrs. Daniel believes that "it's partly nostalgia which accounts for the reexamination of the Truman years. History takes care of a lot of things."

One memory she is not particularly nostalgic about concerns the time her father said he'd rather have grandchildren than a prima donna in the family. "I was on a concert tour," she recalls, "and I read that quotation in the newspaper. I really hit the roof. I think Dad despaired of ever having any grandchildren. But he finally got some. Do you know the story of how he found out about his first grandson?

"My husband called him in Independence when the oldest one was born. Mother had gone to the hairdresser, but Dad didn't even call her there. He waited until she came home. When she came up the walk, he said, 'Ah! Margaret's just had a boy.' Very calmly like that. And she said, 'What! Don't just stand there. Go and call and get train tickets. We're going to New York immediately.'

"Dad was very calm. He got the tickets, and they were on the train that night or the next day. They visited me at Doctors Hospital, and Dad went in to see his oldest grandson. And this is a very funny picture. He was surrounded by reporters, and the father of the baby is out on the edge, cropped out of the photos. The Daily News took a picture of Dad holding this impromptu press conference about his grandson, and his son-in-law is way outside of this circle. All Clifton wanted to do was take his father-in-law back to the hotel. But he couldn't get him to leave because Dad wanted to talk about his grandson. Dad said his grandson had red hair. He never had red hair. He had masses of black hair. So much black hair that I said, 'Take him back. He can't be mine.'"

President Gerald R. Ford, Margaret Truman Daniel and actor James Whitmore chat at Ford's Theater in Washington following a performance of "Give 'em Hell, Harry!" in which Whitmore played the late salty-tongued President.

Bess still checks up

Harry Truman was 73 when his first grandchild was born. He died at age 88. His wife Bess, 91, still resides in Independence, Mo., where she suffers from chronic bursitis but, according to her daughter, "is just as sharp as she ever was and just as stubborn and checks up on me regularly as if I were 10 years old."

Mrs. Bess Truman has been under the protection of the Secret Service since the assassination of President John F. Kennedy in 1963. Until then there was no Secret Service protection for any former U.S. President or First Lady.

She still refuses to be interviewed by newspersons, however, a policy she has maintained ever since 1945.

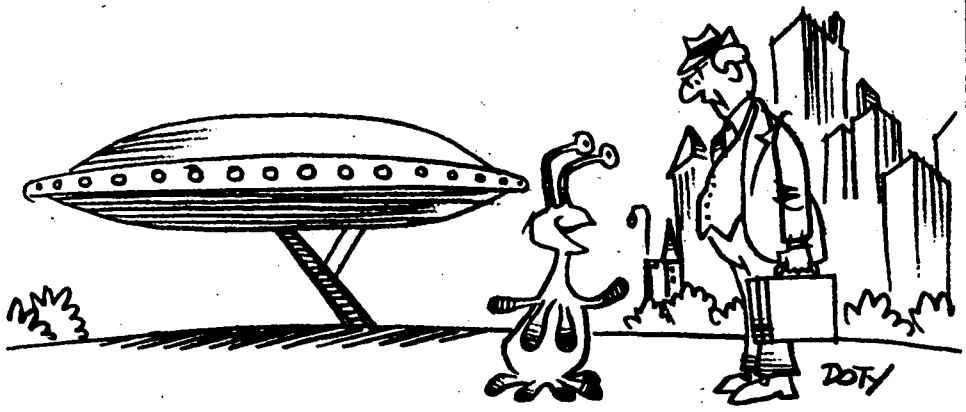
Her daughter's explanation is: "Mother followed Mrs. Roosevelt into the White House, and that was a pretty hard act to follow. She had no intention of trying to pick up where Mrs. Roosevelt left off. In fact, Mrs. Roosevelt never stopped. She kept on. She was called the First Lady of the World before she died, which she deserved.

"But my mother felt very strongly that she should make a home. Although she wouldn't be interviewed and would not make speeches, she had to shake thousands of hands and entertain thousands of people, which she did very politely and very nicely.

'Wicked sense of humor'

"She still won't give interviews because she doesn't like the idea of answering questions about her personal life. She says that's her business and nobody else's. The truth is she has a wicked sense of humor about everything. But she's always been a lady, although I'm afraid she hasn't been able to instill too much of that in me."

Margaret Truman Daniel is not only a lady but a gentle, diplomatic one with a fierce loyalty to the memory of her father, who is now being lionized as the U.S. President responsible for some of the best years of our lives.



Observations™

Perspective on the World. That's what Anthony Quinn has, thanks to his extensive travels. He'll share his perspective with you as he narrates the "Mobil Showcase" TV series, Ten Who Dared, about some of history's most remarkable explorers. And the on-location filming of much of the action will transport you from Columbus's Spain to the South Pole, where Roald Amundsen and four companions survived a frozen ordeal to win a place in history.

Some Victorian! Mary Kingsley wasn't your typical Victorian Englishwoman. When both her parents died after she had spent her first 30 years caring for her invalid mother, Miss Kingsley decided to carry on her father's work in natural history. Her travels among the Fang people of West Africa in 1893 make for an amazing adventure. But her journey was a short one compared with the 999 arduous days that newspaper reporter Henry Morton Stanley spent exploring the length of the Congo River.

The West. The Sierras and the deserts of North America provide the locale for the story of Jedediah Smith. In 1826 Smith, a fur trapper, became the first white man to cross the frontier from Utah to California. A very different locale—the lush and deadly Venezuelan jungle—is the setting for the adventures of Alexander von Humboldt, who became known as the father of geography. And in the Peruvian Andes, the greed of Francisco Pizarro destroys the Inca civilization.

"COULD YOU DIRECT ME TO THE EXPLORERS CLUB?"

Around the globe. The other explorers depicted in the series are: Captain James Cook, the mariner who charted vast areas of the South Pacific; Robert Burke and William Wills, whose crossing of Australia has been called "the most disastrous success" in exploration history; and Charles Doughty, the first Christian Englishman to live among the Bedouins without denying his faith.

Enriching your life. These ten hour-long documentary dramas will shrink your world and bring history into your living room. They're entertainment—and education—for the whole family. Check your local TV listings for the first episode, Christopher Columbus, which will be shown on most stations later this week. And watch for this symbol, just as a reminder.

Keeping Up... With Youth

Read and Write

If you're wondering what sort of career you should carve out for yourself, send for a free copy of "Jobs in 1985," which the Department of Labor will issue in February. Send a postcard to: Consumer Information Center, Dept. 529E, Pueblo, Colo. 81009.

The booklet points out that the supply of college graduates will probably exceed the demand through the mid-1980's. Thus, some will find themselves overqualified and dissatisfied with the jobs they get.

According to the Labor Department, persons with vocational training in the crafts may be in greater demand than those with college degrees. Employers may hesitate to hire college grads as laborers because of the risk of job dissatisfaction. Moreover, college grads in the 1980's may face increasing competition for para-professional and technical jobs. And if you plan to become a teacher, think twice. In the 1980's there will be more teachers than openings.

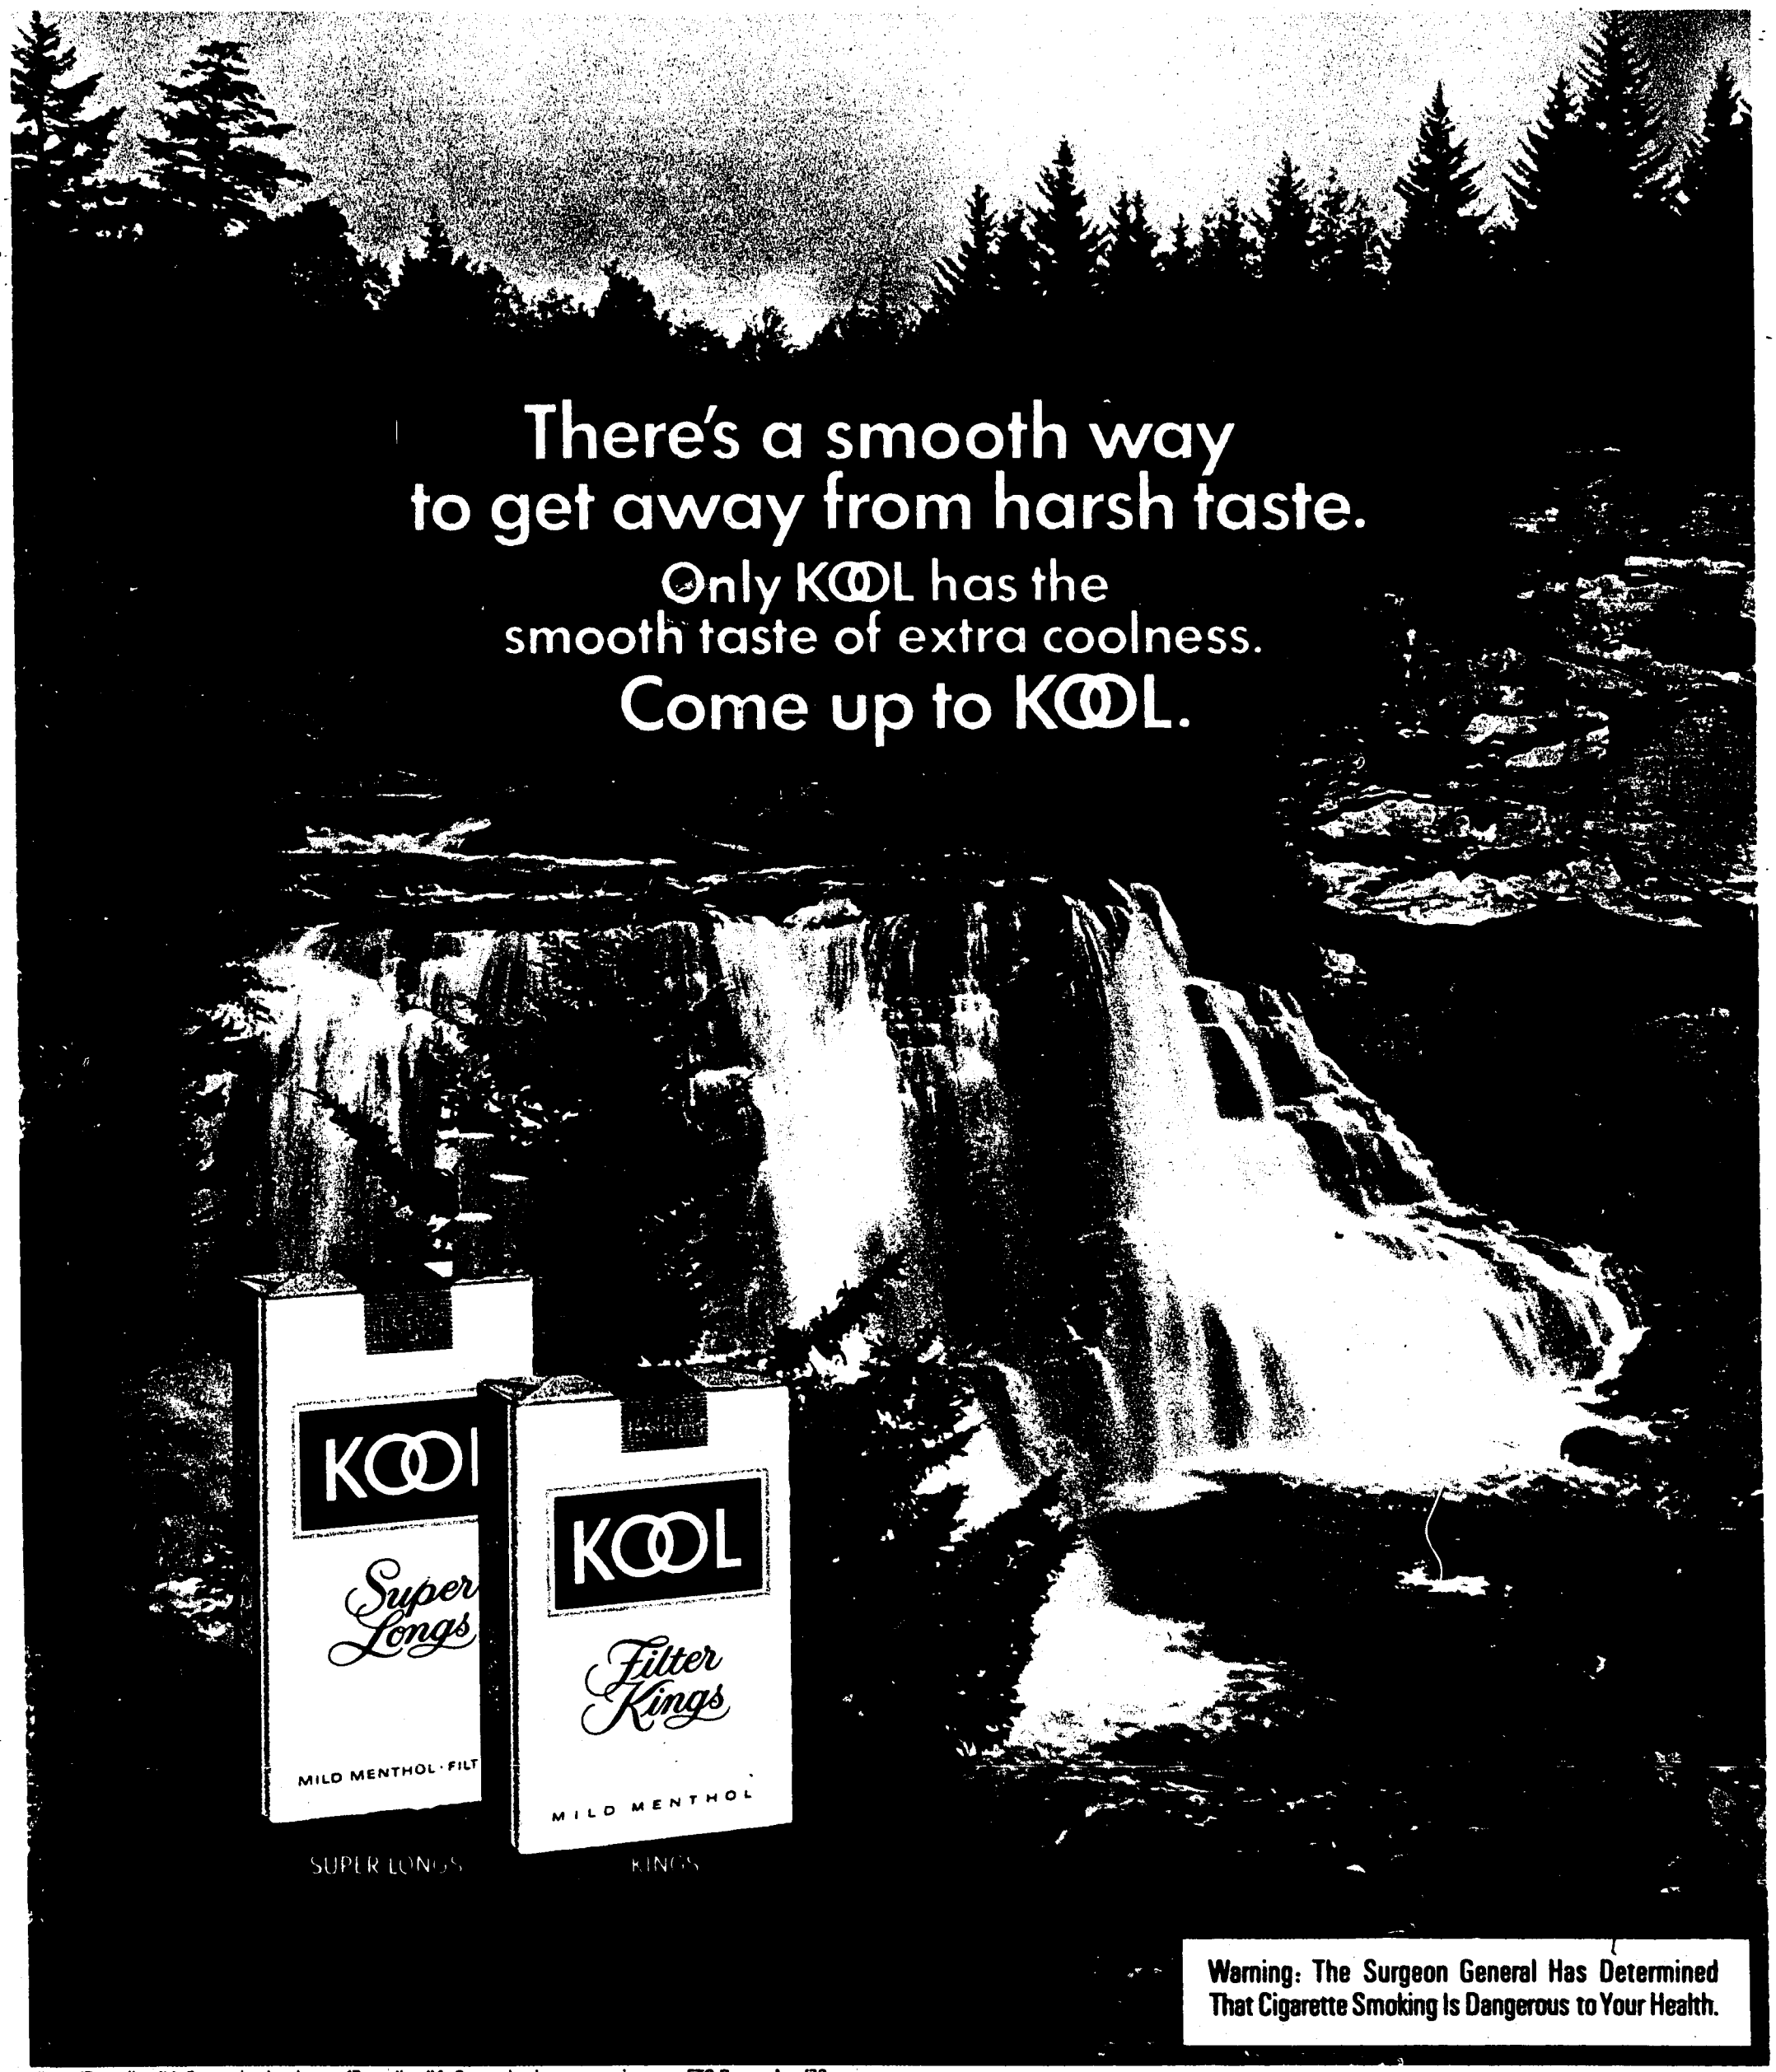
What looks good on the job front? There will be a need for social workers, merchandisers, retail buyers, salespeople and computer programmers. Employment should be good as computer use expands in the health and education fields.

JACK FORD

JACK CARTER

Marijuana Update

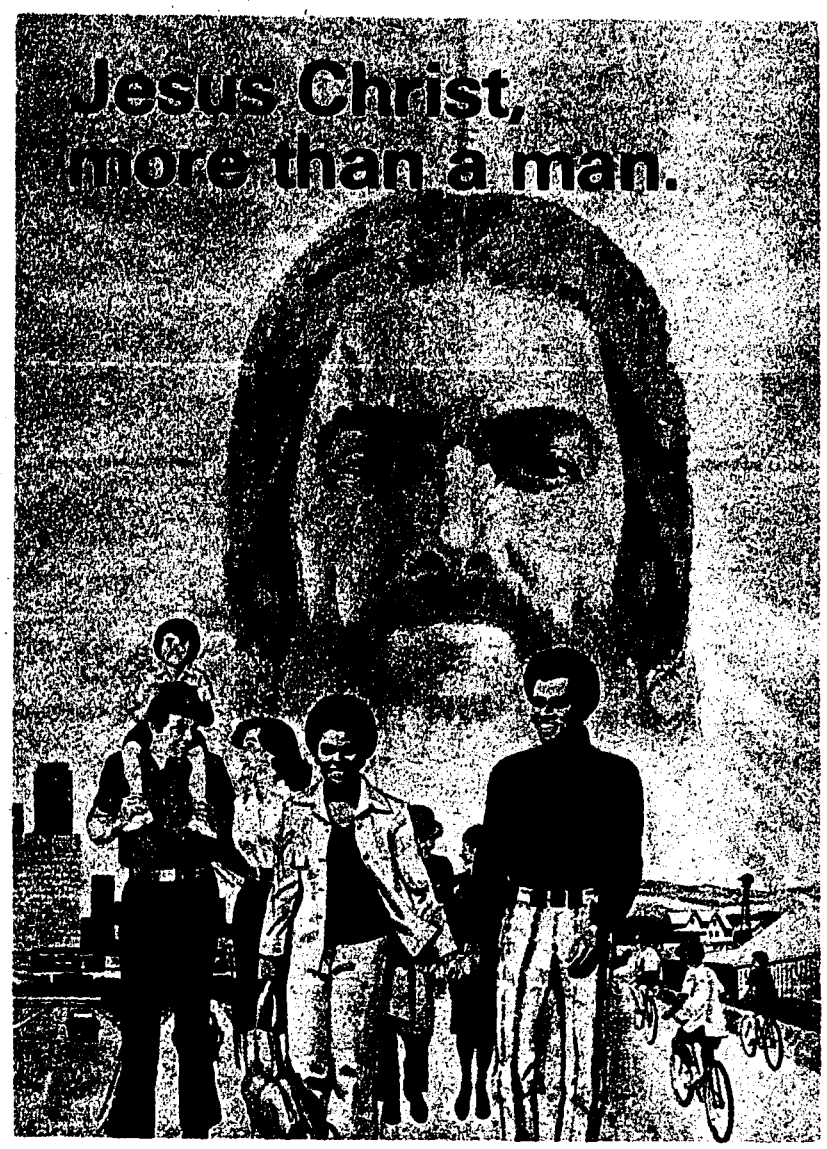
The 1976 Presidential campaign was a first in a unique way.



Both Ford and Carter shared something with millions of American parents: their children had smoked pot.

Michael Ford, 26; Jack Ford, 24; Jack Carter, 29; Chip Carter, 26, and Jeff Carter, 24, all admitted to having sampled marijuana. Each said he no longer smokes the stuff. Jimmy Carter, of course, is on the record as favoring the decriminalization of marijuana.

The simple truth is that marijuana is no longer the bugaboo it once was. Even Egil Krogh—the straight arrow who was Nixon's architect for "Operation Intercept," the ill-fated marijuana blockade of the U.S.-Mexican border—testified some weeks ago before the Senate Permanent Investigations Subcommittee: "It is wrong to jail young people for possessing pot." He now supports marijuana decriminalization.



Many localities are changing their attitudes and enforcement priorities concerning pot. Peter Bensinger, chief of the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration, declares that marijuana is no longer a federal priority. The Feds are more interested in stopping the flow of heroin across the border. Marijuana, however, is far from being legal.

Last year, 416,000 Americans were arrested for marijuana-related offenses. Seven out of 10 drug arrests are still for marijuana. But many judges are now assessing small fines for possession of limited amounts.

Like any man, Jesus Christ ate and slept. But he did other things beyond man's power. Like walking on water. Like raising the dead to life.

In view of this, it seems strange that some would say or sing, "He is only a man." Given the evidence, one ought wonder at least whether he was in fact God as he claimed.

If Christ is indeed God, wouldn't that imply that he is more than a remembered hero or teacher? Wouldn't that imply that in some way he is alive, present and active in today's world? If so, could one afford to ignore him? Or have the fuzziest notions about him? Is your present unhappiness perhaps the result of never really coming to grips with the Jesus-God question and its meaning in your life?

These are important questions. They will not go away. Somehow, they have to be answered. To help you with the answers, we would like to send you a free booklet: "Savior of All Mankind." We think you will find it helpful. Write today. No one will call.

Ad Council

Physicians and patients are both to blame for the widespread misuse of prescription drugs. Patients are often confused by directions and afraid to question doctors.

Know Your Medications, Stop Taking Risks!

by Lawrence Galton

In a Midwestern city, a 10-year-old boy suffers heart damage from rheumatic fever—all because of failure to take a prescribed antibiotic long enough during an acute strep throat to knock out the infection completely and prevent onslaught on the heart.

In a town in upper New York State, a man is admitted to a hospital because of severe nosebleeds and vomiting of blood after taking excessive amounts of a prescribed anticoagulant drug needed to thin his blood and help prevent clots.

On the West Coast, a woman with bronchial asthma is rushed to a hospital with severe heart palpitations. Physicians are puzzled until they discover she used, at too frequent intervals, a prescribed spray for asthma.

These are just a few cases that illustrate a problem that lately has become of urgent concern: the failure of great numbers of people to use drugs properly, to use them at the right times and in the right amounts or even to use them at all, to understand their effects and possible dangers of improper use.

And the problem is by no means solely one of patient fault.

POOR PRESCRIBING PRACTICES. At the University of Rochester Medical Center, investigators in a pilot study interviewed outpatients and found 51 percent not to be complying with written prescriptions. Half of these said they simply did not understand the instructions given for their use.

The investigators then did an extensive study which showed graphically how the poor prescribing practices of physicians can confuse patients.

Consider the label on a bottle of prescription pills that reads, "Take three times a day, with meals."

The question is: before each meal, in the middle of or after each meal?

It can make a difference. Some medicines are best taken on a full stomach to minimize irritation, others on an empty stomach to help the body absorb them.

Penicillin G, for example, is one drug that should be taken on an empty stomach for optimal absorption. Yet the investigators found that 89.5 percent of patients who had received a prescription for penicillin G calling for use three times a day and at bedtime interpreted that to mean with meals and at bedtime.

Looking into how patients interpreted instructions on nine other prescription labels, the investigators found "a surprisingly wide range of interpretations, a high frequency of misinterpretations, and a significant potential for failure or illness as a consequence of mistaken interpretation."

Isolated situation? Hardly. In recent years, many studies have indicated a high rate of noncompliance or faulty compliance because of poor prescription writing or failure of communication between doctor and patient.

Commonly, physicians have blamed the patients. In one study, 67 percent of physicians tied noncompliance to the "uncooperative personality of patients." Many others cited inability to understand recommendations.

But a recent study emphasizes the doctor's role. Directed by Dr. Barbara S. Hulka of the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, it covered 357 patients being treated by 46 physicians in private practice in Fort Wayne, Ind. The patients had either diabetes or congestive heart failure—conditions requiring continued drug treatment, sometimes with more than one drug.

The study showed patients failing to take 18 to 19 percent of the drugs prescribed, taking 19 to 20 percent more drugs than the doctors had ordered, and timing drugs incorrectly in 17 percent of cases.

Big improvement

Dr. Hulka and her co-workers found nothing about the patients—social class, educational background, or other characteristics—to account for the errors. And, significantly, they found that "when patients were informed as to what was expected of them, their behaviors conformed to that expectation more than 85 percent of the time."

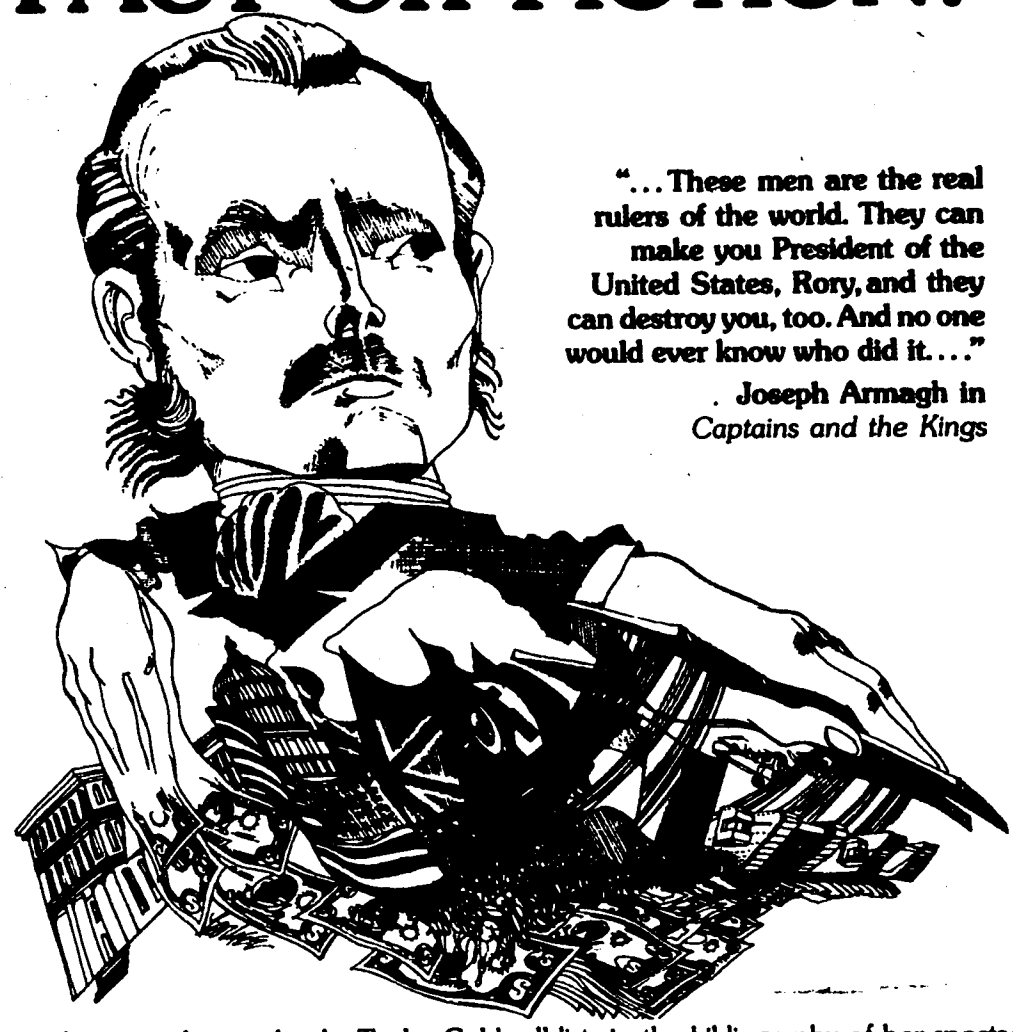
When the Hulka study was published in the American Journal of Public Health, an accompanying editorial emphasized that "to characterize the patient as the willful culprit—as 'noncompliant' or worse, a 'drug defaulter'—is to ignore the responsibility of the practitioner."

A CAUSE OF NEEDLESS SURGERY. Just a few months ago, Dr. Ezra A. Amsterdam of the University of California, Davis, reported on a check of 115 patients with angina pectoris, the chest pain associated with heart disease. All 115 had been considered refractory to medical treatment and had been referred for special tests as candidates for major heart surgery.

The check revealed a startling fact. Nitroglycerin is a highly effective and safe drug that, when used properly, not only can stop angina attacks when they occur, but often can prevent them from occurring.

Yet the study showed that only 25 percent of the patients had ever been told by their physicians about the prophylactic use of nitroglycerin. "Far fewer angina patients," Dr. Amsterdam says, "would be considered refractory if given appropriate medical therapy."

Dr. Peter M. Yurchak of Harvard Medical School agrees emphatically, observing that medical treatment of angina is "effective if it's optimal, but most patients don't receive optimal treatment. Unless internists and cardiologists are willing to spend the time on optimal treatment, then they pass the baton to their surgical friends."



Heartburn is a common affliction—in some cases, a severe one—as large amounts of acid back up from the stomach into the esophagus, burning tissues there. Antacids and positional treatment are mainstays of therapy.

But Dr. Marvin M. Schuster of Johns Hopkins School of Medicine, Baltimore, reports that too often antacids and positional treatment are not given an adequate trial, and "the patient is then called nonresponsive and is referred to a surgeon or gastroenterologist."

Says Schuster: "Positional therapy is often not explained clearly enough. Most intelligent patients will cooperate and improve if they understand that their shoulders should be elevated 30 degrees [in bed] and why. Simply telling the patient to use two pillows may be taken to mean two pillows behind the neck, which only aggravates the reflux [of acid]."

A Limited Edition Collection.
Available by Advance Subscription Only.
Limit: One subscription per person.
Subscriptions close: February 22, 1977.

The complete collection honoring The Presidents of the United States will be handsomely displayed in a luxurious album provided to collectors at no additional cost.

From the time of George Washington, the Presidency of the United States has been a place for a brave heart and a strong spirit. An office of awesome responsibility. For the President is defender of the Constitution and guardian of the ideals first proclaimed in the Declaration of Independence.

The thirty-seven men who have shouldered this burden have been ordinary people, called by their countrymen to be shapers of America's destiny. Each the hope of future generations. The holder of what has become the most powerful office on earth.

Some strong and truly titans of their times, some weak; some movers of history, others swept by its tide; their story — the history of the Presidency — is the heritage of every American.

An official commemorative collection.

Now, on the eve of the inaugural of the first President of America's third century as a Nation, it is fitting for us to remember — and to honor — those men who, far surpassing even the most optimistic dreams of our Founding Fathers, have made the White House the focus of our history. The citadel of our freedom. The living symbol of America to us and to all the world.

To do so, in a lasting and significant way, The White House Historical Association — dedicated to enhancing every citizen's appreciation of the White House — has authorized the renowned Fleetwood Company to issue a collection of thirty-eight engraved Philatelic Commemorative Covers individually honoring all of The Presidents of the United States.

This is the first and only such collection ever to be authorized by the White House Historical Association and will be extraordinary in every respect.

A dignified and worthy tribute.

Historically accurate to the smallest detail, each Cover will focus on one President. Superbly produced on luxurious laid-fiber paper — the traditional paper of our Nation — each will be vividly cacheted with the President's portrait from the Official White House Collection. Masterpieces by such greats as Gilbert Stuart, Rembrandt Peale, Samuel F. B. Morse, they capture each President's character and vision with uncommon sensitivity.

Moreover, they will be handsomely engraved with the Presidents' signatures. Signatures that have been written with firm and determined hands in testament to the aspirations of a whole Nation; in witness to the great turning points of our history. Abraham Lincoln's, which freed the slaves. Thomas Jefferson's, which doubled the Nation's size. Theodore Roosevelt's that busted the trusts. And John F. Kennedy's that set America on course for the moon.

Appropriately, each will be officially issued and postmarked during 1977 on the exact anniversary of the President's birth at the place where he was born. Places now enshrined in our history.

The complete collection will be a dignified and worthy tribute to the lives, the times, and the achievements of our Presidents. From the youngest, John F. Kennedy, to the oldest, William H. Harrison, they are men who have had unshakable faith in America and its future, in its people and in its principles. Men who became part of our proud heritage as The Presidents of the United States.

One single, strictly limited edition.

The Presidents of the United States will be issued in a single, strictly limited edition. And the total number will be forever limited to the exact number of original subscriptions postmarked not later than February 22, 1977, with a limit of one collection per subscriber.

To assure the authenticity of this limited edition, each Cover will bear the imprimatur of the White House Historical Association and the distinctive hallmark of The Fleetwood Company — recognized since 1929 as America's foremost purveyor of Philatelic Commemorative Covers — which has been authorized by the White House Historical Association to produce the complete collection.

Handsome Collector's Album included.

Collectors who take advantage of this opportunity to acquire The Presidents of the United States will also receive, without additional cost, a handsomely bound collector's album. With narrative by historian David C. Whitney — one of America's most prominent authorities on the Presidency — this lavish, over 200-page album will bring each President and his times into vivid perspective. Privately prepared exclusively for individual subscribers to this collection, it will be a truly impressive addition to your library and a superb way of appreciating and protecting this most significant collection.

Convenient plan of acquisition.

Subscribers to The Presidents of the United States will receive issues at the convenient rate of three per month, beginning in late February, 1977, and concluding in January, 1978, with five issues. The original issue price of $2.50 per Cover ($7.50 per month) will be guaranteed for the entire collection. And to ensure the highest standards, each shipment will be delivered, unblemished by addressing, in a protective package. The album, provided at no additional cost, will be shipped in August, 1977.

Subscription Deadline: February 22, 1977.

An Official Collection and one of historic importance to all Americans, The Presidents of the United States is certain to become a highly prized and admired collection in future years. One that will in a real sense be inspiration and pleasure for you to own; and an heirloom your children and their children will appreciate in years to come.

But please remember that there will be only one, limited edition of this collection, and that this is the only time that you will be able to acquire it. To take advantage of this opportunity, postmark your application no later than February 22, 1977. And mail it directly to The Fleetwood Company, 1 Unicover Center, Cheyenne, Wyoming 82008.

What To Do About Feminine Itching

A doctor-tested medication brings prompt temporary relief.

And now, some words about not wearing safety belts.

And Schuster goes on to add: "One pitfall with antacids is that patients are often told to take a tablespoonful three or four times daily before or after meals —at which times the antacid is useless because there is a natural buffer in the stomach during eating. Rather, patients need the antacid an hour or two after eating, when the stomach is empty."

THE DIMENSIONS OF FAILURE. The degree of patient failure to use medicine properly or at all is staggering.

Strep throat infections can cause rheumatic fever and rheumatic heart disease, both preventable by proper use of penicillin. But studies have found 34 percent of patients not taking it.

PAS is a valuable drug for tuberculosis. But investigators, not relying on what patients reported, checked on urine samples—if the drug is taken, some of it appears in the urine—and found none detectable in the urine of 50 percent of patients.

Some don't take it

Some studies of diabetics have found half or even more making errors in insulin dosage. Oral iron to avoid anemia in pregnancy is effective—but 30 percent of pregnant women don't take it when prescribed. Psychiatric patients—under treatment for depression, anxiety, other conditions—commonly fail to comply. In one study, only 48 percent were using medication at all or as directed.

Most cases of epilepsy can be controlled. But a study of epileptic children showed that only 25 percent had appropriate levels of anticonvulsant medication in their blood.

TWO IMPORTANT REASONS. Recently, Dr. Richard N. Podell and an associate at Columbia College of Physicians and Surgeons, New York, and Overlook Hospital, Summit, N.J., focused on two major reasons for misuse of or failure to use prescribed medications.

One involves unanticipated side effects that can be confusing or frightening—and failure of patients to tell their physicians about the disturbances.

Don't 'act dumb'

Says Dr. Podell: "The patient sometimes does not know that the side effect is related to the medication and he may fear he will offend the physician by complaining. There are many circumstances in which the patient 'acts dumb' before the physician. Our impression is that patient reluctance to express these concerns is especially common when the physician's actions are intimidatingly authoritarian. Obviously, if the physician does not learn about the side effects, there is little he can do to correct them; noncompliance is then likely to result."

A second problem is failure of patients to ask questions. In one study, only 24 percent asked three or more questions about their medication. The fault of the patients? Perhaps to some extent—but, as Dr. Podell points out, "It is not quite this simple. The physicians often subtly discourage patients from asking questions."

Pharmaceutical firms are looking into gimmicks to help children and adults take their medicine properly. One new system called "Memory Dose" puts pills in individual packets labeled with clear, precise instructions for their use.

In this study, in only 19 of 221 instances did a physician even bother to ask a patient if he had any questions. In 13 percent of cases, the physician ignored the patient's first question. "More important," observes Dr. Podell, "many mannerisms signaled the patient that further questions would not be welcome. These included obvious clock-watching, looking toward the waiting room to see how many more patients were there."

WHAT CAN BE DONE. In the Acute Disease Clinic of Children's Hospital, Buffalo, N.Y., when only 5 percent of patients were found to be complying with a 10-day course of antibiotic treatment for middle ear infection, a program was set up in which hospital pharmacists gave patients' parents complete verbal and written instructions on medication. Labeling was precise and detailed, and parents received a calibrated measure for the medication and a calendar to record doses. These measures raised full compliance tenfold.

Right now, under study by several major pharmaceutical companies as a means of improving compliance of both adult and child patients is a "Memory Dose" dispenser system developed by the Medical Dispenser Co. of Atlantic Highlands, N. J.

The compact dispenser can be loaded in seconds with a blister-packaged cartridge of a premeasured quantity of tablets or capsules. An appropriate date/time regimen is preprinted on each cartridge, and the regimen shows through two adjacent windows on the face of the dispenser. One window indicates when the last dose was taken, the other when the next dose is needed.

Perhaps the growing concern within the medical profession and increasing efforts to educate physicians to recognize and do something constructive about the frequency and dangers of patient noncompliance will bear fruit.

Meantime, what can you do?

It's your body

You can recognize that, whenever you have a health problem, the more you know the better—about the problem itself, about the reason for any medication and how it works, about exactly how much to take and when and for how long. Know also about any expectable side effects which need not be alarming and others which call for immediate reporting to your physician, who, often quite readily, can eliminate them with a change in dosage or a change to another effective drug less likely to produce undesirable effects.

You have every right to expect your physician to answer your questions, even to anticipate many, to give you adequate information even without your questions, and to write his prescriptions so they are precise and fully understandable.

A hasty scrawl of an uninformative prescription instead of all of the above is bad medical practice. It could well be called a substitute for medical practice. Don't accept it. If you can't get what is right, go elsewhere. But chances are increasingly good that with firm persistence on your part, you may well get good medicine in the same office where you may not be getting it now.

my FAVORITE jokes

by DAVID SAYH

EDITOR'S NOTE: David Sayh recalls the first time he auditioned at Catch A Rising Star in New York, one of the few clubs where inexperienced entertainers can break in their material: "When I first went to audition, I waited on line in the cold for about three hours just to get a number. I felt like I was in the bakery on Sunday morning."

David is frequently the emcee at Catch A Rising Star and has performed at the Bijou in Philadelphia, Valley Forge Music Fair in Pennsylvania and on the Playboy circuit.

Here are his comic observations:

I grew up in the South Bronx, one of the highest crime-rate neighborhoods in the world. You call the police emergency number—they put you on hold and play music.

They were looking for everybody in my neighborhood. We used to get arrest warrants in the mail addressed to "Occupant."

I got into one of these finish-high-school-at-home programs and everything was going real well for three months. And then I got a letter that said my home was no longer in my school district. They wanted to bus me to somebody else's house for the remainder of the semester.

When I was a kid and my mother got me bedroom slippers, I never had the cute, little furry ones with the clowns on them like other kids. I always had Taiwan specials with soles made of old tire treads. They were $3 a pair, plus 50 cents for balancing. And they wore real well—except every 20,000 steps you had to take your toes in for realignment.

On the back of shaving cream cans there are actually directions on how to shave. A can will say: "Wash face, press center top of can to release lather, spread lather evenly over face, shave." Who needs directions on how to shave? Do you wake up one morning after shaving for 28 years and say, "Hey, I forgot how to shave"? The next thing I expect is to pick up a bar of soap and see directions on how to take a shower: "Adjust water to desired temperature. Allow sufficient time for water temperature to stabilize, since failure to do so may result in erratic operation of faucet controls. Lather entire body, wash vigorously, rinse thoroughly. Note: For best results, remove all garments."

New Yorkers are incredible. You ask them directions—if they don't know, they make 'em up. I asked a guy, "Excuse me, do you know how to get to the Grand Canyon from here?" He said, "Yeah, just make a U-turn."

What about people out West; ever ask them for directions? You're in the middle of the Mojave Desert, 40 million miles from nowhere. Ask a guy how to get to Highway 80, and he'll say, "You got a car?"

I went to the supermarket the other day, tried to pick up some olives. Now, the guy who does the sizes for the olives is really messed up. The smallest ones are marked "Gigantic," the next size is "Jumbo," then "Colossal," "Super Colossal," "Mammoth," "Mammoth Hermunculus." I expect to open up that last can and find one tremendous olive inside—you have to kill it before you can eat it!

Do you know the difference between Arteriosclerosis and Atherosclerosis? (Both affect blood vessels and they are similar-sounding words, but they are not the same condition.)

Let's face it, doctors frequently assume their patients know what their professional diagnostic language means. But, more often than not, the layman is left "in the dark" wondering, and perhaps needlessly worried, by the frightening sounding terms the doctor uses. The Editors of Better Homes and Gardens feel there should be no mystery about any medical term, provided you have a clear, easy-to-understand explanation of what it means. And that is exactly what you get in your illustrated Encyclopedia of Medical Terms Section.

Here are 2,000 definitions to help you talk with ease and confidence to your physician . . . and understand exactly what his medical terminology means when he talks to you. Matters you may have hesitated to discuss – even with your doctor – no longer need be embarrassing, once you are able to describe them in clear, scientific language.

A proposed fleet of B-1 bombers—now being tested at Edwards Air Force Base, Cal.—would cost at least $23 billion. President Ford favored the project, but some Congressmen feel the Air Force rejected viable alternatives.

The B-1 Bomber: A $23 Billion Choice Facing President Carter

by Peter J. Ognibene

Strategic Air Command's Gen. Russell E. Dougherty says our defenses "would be seriously deficient" without the B-1.

WASHINGTON, D.C.

Should the United States spend $23 billion or more for a fleet of 244 B-1 bombers? That is probably the most expensive question President Jimmy Carter will have to answer in the early days of his Administration.

Gen. Russell E. Dougherty, the head of the Air Force's Strategic Air Command, believes the case for the new bomber is overwhelming. "In my view, there is no weapons delivery system program that is more important, more critical, or offers more deterrent utility within the total mix of our strategic forces than the B-1," says Dougherty. "Without such a capable, flexible and visible strategic weapons delivery system, our deterrent forces would be seriously deficient across the potential spectrum of confrontation and/or conflict."

The outgoing Administration subscribed to a similar point of view. In fact, President Ford was so enthusiastic about the new bomber that he made it a point during the Presidential campaign to be photographed waving from the cockpit of a B-1 mock-up in Palmdale, Cal. But when he asked Congress for money to begin production of the supersonic, swing-wing bomber, the B-1 ran into heavy weather.

Congress cautious

Although Congress ultimately approved the requested funds, it limited spending on the B-1 to $87 million a month until Feb. 1, 1977. The purpose of this provision was twofold: it allows Rockwell International, the builder of the plane, to keep its B-1 work force in place but lets the new President decide the bomber's fate. This unusual step seems to indicate that the B-1 has lost much of the overwhelming support it once enjoyed on Capitol Hill.

BOMBER CONTINUED

Why has the bomber lost this support? Some people blame the Air Force. Instead of keeping an open mind on the subject of bombers, it has eliminated all possible alternatives to the B-1. This has angered many members of Congress.

In 1971, for instance, the Boeing Company tested late-model B-52G's and H's and found the main wing structure could last at least six times longer than the original design called for. What that meant in practical terms was this: the reliable B-52 could be flying well into the 21st century. But instead of being heartened by this finding, the Air Force buried it.

The Air Force also canceled a promising missile program called SCAD (for Subsonic Cruise Armed Decoy). The B-52 would have carried these weapons under its wings and launched them 2000 miles from their targets. Ingeniously designed with electronic reflectors, the SCAD would have looked exactly like a B-52 on enemy radar screens. Because this weapon would have improved the B-52's ability to penetrate enemy air defenses, it might have undermined the "need" for a B-1.

Study requested

Decisions such as these led the Senate Armed Services Committee to ask the Department of Defense for "a comprehensive cost effectiveness study" of the B-1 and its possible alternatives. Sen. Thomas McIntyre (D., N.H.), chairman of the committee's research and development subcommittee, analyzed the resulting Pentagon report and found it to be flawed.

The Joint Strategic Bomber Study's most fundamental bias in favor of the B-1 was its design and evaluation of alternative bomber forces on the basis of the cost of the B-1 rather than designing a precise military mission and comparing each alternative bomber force's capability to fulfill that mission," wrote McIntyre. "If the study had defined the mission which our bombers should be expected to perform and measured the efficiency of various alternatives in accomplishing that mission, such an evaluation may have led you to conclude that we may not have needed a follow-on to the present bomber at all."

Critics of the B-1 oppose the plane for several reasons. They point, for instance, to the diminishing role of bombers in comparison to the other two elements of America's nuclear triad: intercontinental ballistic missiles (ICBM's) and submarine-launched ballistic missiles (SLBM's). In 1960, bombers carried 90 percent of our nuclear weapons; the percentage is now 30 and expected to fall even lower whether or not the B-1 is built.

Bombers have clearly lost their preeminence to missiles. Indeed, when ICBM's and SLBM's take only 30 minutes to reach their targets, there is a real possibility that the bombers will find the war already over by the time they arrive at their objectives.

Supporters of the B-1 naturally see things differently. One of the bomber's staunchest advocates has been Malcolm R. Currie, the outgoing director of Defense Research and Engineering.

Currie believes the B-1 is "our best answer to the problems of survivability and penetrativity which will face our existing forces in the years ahead. Higher speed and fundamentally 'harder' construction to resist nuclear effects will virtually assure survival for those B-1 forces on alert. Higher speed, lower penetration altitude, lower radar cross section and better electronic countermeasures will contribute to a high probability of penetration [of enemy air space]."

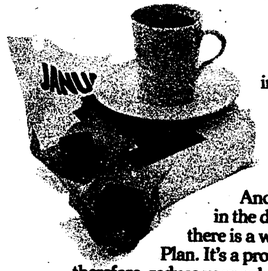
But even if the plane's supporters are correct and the B-1 is marginally better than the B-52, is the new bomber worth the price? Indeed, do we know its price?

The price tag on the B-1 has been consistent in only one respect: it has climbed steadily skyward. In 1969, the Air Force told Congress that 244 B-1's would cost $9 billion. The current estimate is $23 billion.

Total cost is higher

Keep in mind, however, that that is only the price for 244 airframes. To perform its strategic mission, the B-1 will need nuclear weapons and a fleet of airborne tankers to refuel it in flight. When those systems are included, along with operating and maintenance expenses, the price soars into the stratosphere.

How high will it go? In 1976, Alton H. Quanbeck and Archie L. Wood, both former Air Force colonels, published a study for the Brookings Institution in Washington called "Modernizing the Strategic Bomber Force." They put the total cost for building and operating the B-1 through 1985 at nearly $92 billion. Whether they are right or wrong, their calculations seem more realistic than the Air Force's because Quanbeck and Wood have at least tried to include all the "extras" which an airframe needs to become a bomber. The Air Force only quotes the price for a stripped-down model of the B-1.



Instead of blanching at its ever-climbing price, Rockwell has been boasting about the jobs the B-1 would create. But then, all big government spending—whether it's for bombers or buses—puts people to work. In the case of the B-1, however, the benefits would be relatively few. In fact, a study conducted for Rockwell by Chase Econometrics, a subsidiary of the Chase Manhattan Bank, concluded that 70,000 extra jobs would be created if the B-1 appropriation were put into housing rather than bombers.

Carter's view uncertain

The President-elect has said he wants to see more jobs created, but he has given no indication that he would consider using the B-1 as a WPA-style make-work project. Indeed, during the Presidential campaign, Carter put himself squarely on the record against the new bomber, calling it "an example of a proposed system which should not be funded and would be wasteful of taxpayers' dollars."

Will Carter carry that view into the Oval Office or will he be persuaded by the arguments of the military men, businesses and labor unions which have a huge stake in the B-1? We should know the answer in a matter of weeks.

I hereby resolve (again) to lose weight.

Heaven knows your intentions were good this time last year. And, heaven knows you tried. But, somehow, around about March, that resolve faltered and suddenly, it was gone. And your fat was not. We know. We're Ayds and we've been in the dieting business a very long time. And, we know that there is a weight reducing plan that works. We call it the Ayds Plan. It's a program that works because it helps you to eat less (and, therefore, reduce your caloric intake).

How does the Ayds Plan work? You simply take 1 or 2 Ayds® Reducing Plan Candies before meals with a hot drink and Ayds helps satisfy your appetite. So, when you sit down to eat, you eat less . . . take in fewer calories, so lose weight . . . week after week. The Ayds Plan has worked for literally thousands of women. These pictures of Judie Miskella are just one example.

At age 31, Judie suddenly discovered that she had to have an operation. Her doctor told her that women usually gain weight after such surgery. Understandably, Judie was worried. At only 5'-1/2" tall, she weighed 170 pounds and was already way overweight. She had her operation and then decided that no matter what anyone said, she was not going to go on being fat. So she went on the Ayds Plan. Judie lost 66 pounds, and looks and feels great. In her own words Judie says, "I feel that if the Ayds Plan can work for someone like me, it can work for almost anyone with a weight problem." So, don't take our word for it. Take Judie's. The Ayds Plan works.

Why not make this the year it works for you. And keep that resolution once and for all.

P.S.: We're so sure that the Ayds Plan will work for you, we're willing to give you 50¢ off on your first box.

So here's the coupon and our very best wishes for a Happier New Year.

You can do it!

HOMES AND HOPES The American dream of owning a home is rapidly growing faint.

The median price of a new house is now over $40,000. To live in a desirable suburb costs even more. Only a minority of American families can afford such prices.

For young families (those with husband and wife in the 25-to-34 age bracket) the prospect of buying a new house is almost nil.

Sen. Edward Brooke (R., Mass.) would like to provide young married couples with an opportunity to own a house.

In his Young Families Housing Act, Brooke has proposed a new type of mortgage arrangement whereby a young family would make smaller monthly mortgage payments in the early years and proportionately larger payments in the later years. Brooke contends that it makes sense to structure a mortgage so that a young family pays less in the years when its income is less and more in later years, when its income is higher.

His legislation envisions a method whereby the young family can accumulate enough cash for a down payment. This would be done by permitting the first-time homebuyer to establish a savings account--called an "individual housing account"--into which he could deposit $2500 a year up to a maximum of $10,000. This money would be deductible for income tax purposes and would have to be applied as a down payment on a house.

The housing industry has outpriced itself, and imaginative, creative legislation such as Brooke's is sorely needed.

UNCLE JIMMY According to President-elect Carter's nephew Scott Stapleton, a first-year medical student at the University of North Carolina, "Uncle Jimmy is a man of principle who hasn't had to compromise to get where he is. He is very intelligent and very hard-working, and his most outstanding quality is compassion."

NEW BELT CONVEYOR SYSTEM Here's something that will make Detroit sit up and watch: The Honda Motor Co. of Japan has installed a new factory conveyor system in which each worker on the production line controls his own labor speed.

Honda calls it the "free flow system" and has put it into effect in its plants at Kumamoto and Waki. Executives say it works so well that it will be adopted at all Honda factories in Japan. They report that it not only increases the workers' morale, but results in higher-quality production.

The system's moving belt can be halted or released by each worker simply by stepping on a pedal. If he wishes additional time for his task, he stops the belt, separates the engine from its receptacle and works on it.

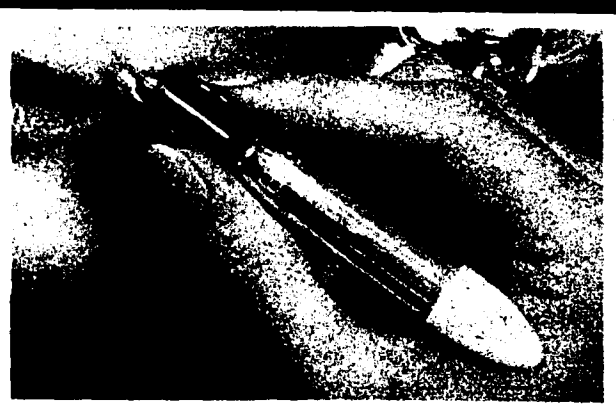
For years, industrial engineers have tried to reduce the ill effects of the monotonous conveyor belt system introduced in U.S. auto factories in 1913. Now they may have come upon a reasonable solution. According to Honda, their new free flow system was developed by introducing basic production technology from Cargill, Inc., an American company.

POPULAR IN PEKING: BOB HOPE AND JANE RUSSELL IN 1952 FILM "SON OF PALEFACE"

MOVIES IN CHINA What do people do for entertainment in the People's Republic of China?

China has 3000 motion picture theaters of various sizes in its major cities. The government also assigns some 4000 projectionists to tour the rural areas. They put on an estimated 25,000 screenings every week. Practically all Chinese productions are propaganda films produced in Shanghai and Canton.

Since the Communist takeover in 1949, only films made in China have publicly been shown in the People's Republic. The one exception is "Salt of the Earth," made in the U.S. and Mexico in 1955.



Several weeks ago, Canadian film executive Charles Chaplin, traveling in China, arranged for three American films to be screened in Peking: "The Quiet Man," "Son of Paleface," and "The Great American Cowboy." Other U.S. films, of course, are shown in embassies and diplomatic circles. But these are not for the Chinese people.

HARDSHIP POST The State Department has declared Moscow an "unhealthful post," and U.S. employees who are stationed there receive 20% more in salary as hardship allowance.

A recent notice circulated at the U.S. Embassy in Moscow states that "the determination for such a designation [unhealthful post] is based upon the [State] Department's evaluation of reported environmental conditions regarding sanitation and disease, medical and hospital facilities and climate."

According to U.S. Embassy officials, one factor in determining Moscow as "unhealthful" is the prevalence of giardiasis, a rare intestinal disorder that is believed to be spread in drinking water. Nothing has been said of the persistent microwave radiation of the embassy by the KGB, the Soviet security and espionage apparatus.

WOMEN WANT SEA DUTY Four women members of the U.S. Navy have filed suit in a class action. They allege that the legal prohibition against their assignment to sea duty deprives them of "the core experience of Navy life."

Navy women are currently permitted to serve on hospital ships and harbor vessels like tugboats but not on destroyers, cruisers, carriers and the rest.

DEAD DEAL The Soviet Union has been trying for months to purchase from Great Britain its most powerful aero-engine, the Rolls-Royce RB-211, which provides 50,000 pounds of thrust to the jumbo jets.

The Soviets are building their first wide-body airliner, the Ilyushin 86, which will seat 350 passengers, and they want to study the RB-211.

The British are willing to sell a flock of the RB-211's to the Russians, but they want to control their production under license by the Soviets. They don't want to sell two or three and then have the Soviets pirate the engine with modifications.

In 1947 the British Labor government under Clement Atlee made the mistake of selling 55 Rolls-Royce Nene engines to the Soviets against the advice of its intelligence experts. The Soviets immediately began reproducing the engine illegally for their fighters and bombers. It was these fighters and bombers that were subsequently sent to North Korea to fight against U.S. aircraft in the Korean war.

The British are determined not to make the same mistake again. If they sell Rolls-Royce engines to the U.S.S.R., they want to provide substantial orders to the British aircraft industry. Otherwise --no deal.

CHIGNON COMEBACK The latest hairdo in European society circles is the chignon, which is making a comeback.

One beauty who always wears a chignon is Mrs. Valéry Giscard d'Estaing, the French First Lady.

Hairdressers say that much of the credit for the chignon revival must go to Yves Saint Laurent, who combined the hairdo with his last formal couture collection.

The new chignons differ from the old ones in that they are larger, softer, and much more imaginative, boasting all sorts of braids. Women also ornament them with jeweled flowers, butterflies, and combs.

Alexandre, the well-known hairdresser, interweaves his chignons with strands of colorful ribbon.

ISLAND NUKE PLANTS Professor Peter Kapitza, 82, the great Soviet physicist who dared risk Stalin's wrath by refusing to take part in the development of the Soviet Union's atomic bomb, believes nuclear power plants should be erected on uninhabited islands.

In a recent article in The New Scientist, Kapitza says such problems as the danger of accidents, highly radioactive waste, and the production of plutonium could be overcome to a considerable degree if nuclear plants were built on small, uninhabited islands and the energy generated were used to produce hydrogen from the sea. Hydrogen is a relatively safe and pollution-free fuel source.

PAN AM HOSTESS DISPLAYS BADGES WHICH INDICATE SHE SPEAKS GERMAN AND FRENCH

AIR WAR The world's airlines are competing for passengers with ever new and different services. On Pan Am's international flights, hostesses now wear badges indicating their special language facilities; Qantas, the Australian airline, plans to offer free cocktails and movies in its economy class. The most welcome luxury, however, is the beds which can be reserved on Singapore Airlines flights to the Far East out of London and Rome. First class, of course.

INFERTILITY EPIDEMIC Human infertility has struck large areas of Africa. From 20% to 40% of the women in many tribes have become infertile. One tribe in Sudan has taken to stealing fertile women from neighboring tribes in an attempt to solve their problem.

The countries stricken with infertility include Gabon, Cameroon, Sudan, Uganda, Ghana, Kenya, and Tanzania. They have appealed for help to the World Health Organization.

Several reasons have been advanced to explain the cause. Pinworm infections disturb the lymphatic glands in both male and female and apparently lead to sterility in women.

South of the Sahara, the most common cause seems to be gonorrhea, which obstructs the fallopian tubes. A year ago, following a massive penicillin campaign designed to eradicate gonorrhea in New Guinea, the fertility rates there began to rise.

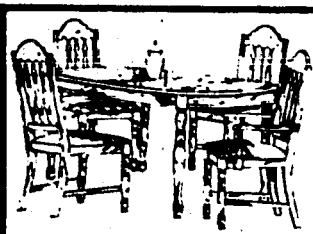
"Rich Man, Poor Man" started off on ABC as a 12-hour movie to be presented over several nights.

Its success led to the natural thought that perhaps it could be continued as a weekly series. Thus, "Rich Man, Poor Man — Book II" became an item in ABC's current season schedule.

The first long movie had ended with the violent death of one of the two brothers whose careers served as the core of the story. That left one brother, Rudy Jordache, played by Peter Strauus, to carry on as the central character of "Book II."

Though not too familiar to television audiences, Strauss has behind him a long career as an actor. He started at the early age of 13 in a version of "The Taming of the Shew" in his home town of Croton-on-Hudson, N.Y.



He has been in several movies, and has found the stage a favorite type of performance.

Strauss, prior to "Rich Man, Poor Man," has appeared in the guest casts of many television series, and also in such specials as "The Man Without a Country" and "The Court-Martial of the Tiger of Malaya."

THE BIG DIFFERENCE IN SECOND TRUST DEED LOANS ON ANY REAL ESTATE:

Not all second trust deed loans cost the same. That's why the Federal Government has given you a simple way of comparing the annual cost of any loan . . . the Annual Percentage Rate. The lower this rate, the lower your annual cost.

Most other companies ask you to pay Annual Percentage Rates from 17% to 21%. That's because they charge you 10% interest, a maximum commission and give you a short time to repay. Not us. Through Reliable your interest rate is lower (9%), the commission is lower, and you get more time — 8 years — to fully repay your loan, including principal and interest. There are no balloon payments. We offer you an Annual Percentage Rate of 12.88%. Check around. We believe it's the best rate available . . . and it's available to everyone.

The figures look like this. For every $1,000 you borrow you pay only $14.66 a month for 96 months. The total of payments is $1,407.36. We also offer shorter term loans at the same interest rate and commission, but with proportionately higher Annual Percentage Rates. Naturally, you can pay off your loan at any time by prepaying interest on the balance in accordance with state law.

You may borrow from $2,000 to $50,000 on a first or second trust deed loan — on any real estate anywhere in California. On the average, you'll have your loan in 10 working days.

No gimmicks. No double-talk. We just think it's good business to give you the facts . . . and more money for your money.
